PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN TO HELP SPEER WILL RESULT IN INQUIRY

Member of Committee Conducting Investigation of Jurist Says Circulars Have Excited Resentment

PRINTED COPIES DO NOT BEAR THE UNION LABEL

Yet They Purport to Be Passed by a Labor Union Last Spring—Said That Union Did Not Originate Circulars

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 30.—The so-called publicity campaign in the interest of Judge Emory Speer, whose official conduct is to be the subject of congressional investigation, and possible impeachment, probably will furnish the judiciary committee with still another subject of inquiry with reference to the accused jurist.

A member of the judiciary committee stated today that the annoymous circulation of the Federation on Labor resolution was calculated to excite resentment in congress and possibly furnish the basis of still another charge against Judge Speer.

This member of the committee was possessed of a copy of the resolutions, containing the typewritten introduction referring to "Congressman Bartlett's charges of tyranny and oppression." He called attention to the fact that the resolutions were mailed from Mount Airy, where Judge Speer has been spending the summer.

UNION LABEL MISSING.

"And," he added, "you will observe that while the resolutions pertain to any measure to diminish the territorial jurisdiction of the Hon. Emory Speer,' there is no such measure pending before congress at this time. The only measure pending before congress with reference to Judge Speer relates to his official acts, which are to be the subject of an investigation.

"A significant fact in connection with the circular is that although it contains the resolutions of the Federation of Labor, it does not bear the union label."

While the member didn't say as much, it was inferred from his remark and his manner that he suspected that the Federation of Labor had nothing whatever to do with either the publication or circulation of the resolutions "as to Congressman Bartlett's charges of tyranny and oppression."

AN IMPROPER ATTEMPT?

It is the contention of congressmen that, if Judge Speer is responsible for the circulation of the resolutions from Mount Airy, or has sanctioned the so-called publicity campaign, then he is liable to the charge of improperly attempting to influence congressional action with reference to a matter of the highest importance.

The judiciary committee, by unanimous agreement, is proceeding in the Speer case with caution and silence. None of its members desire to do the accused judge an injustice. Outside of the fact that the committee has been impressed by the so-called publicity campaign and its serious aspect, it is impossible to ascertain definitely what line of procedure will be followed to run it down, and fix final responsibility. It may be stated, however, that the committee is determined, if possible, to ascertain, not only the agent of the so-called publicity campaign, but the source of its inspiration.

CHAIRMAN SUBCOMMITTEE.

The selection of a chairman for the special subcommittee of the house judiciary committee may be governed by the action of the United States senate with reference to the seating of Henry D. Clayton as a senator from Alabama.

If Judge Clayton's credentials from Governor O'Neal are accepted by the senate, and Judge Clayton is seated, then the chances are that either Charles Creighton Carlin, of Virginia, or John Charles Floyd, of Arkansas, will head the subcommittee.

If, however, Judge Clayton is not seated in the senate, then Edwin Yates Webb, of North Carolina, will be chairman of the subcommittee.

Representative Debb is the ranking Democrat on the judiciary committee, and if Judge Clayton does to the senate, Mr. Webb will succeed to the chairmanship of the big committee, and, as chairman, turn out likewise. He would be able to absent himself from Washington during a session of congress. Therefore, he would prefer not to serve on the subcommittee that intends to hold its hearings in Georgia.

Assuming that Judge Clayton remains in the house, and chairman of the judiciary committee, it is believed that the Speer subcommittee will be constituted as follows:

Representatives Webb, of North Carolina, chairman; Carlin, of Virginia, and Floyd, of Arkansas, Democrats, Volstead, of Minnesota, and Nelson, of Wisconsin, Republicans.

ONLY SIX IMPEACHMENTS.

Since the foundation of the United States government only six federal judges have been impeached by the house of representatives. Three of these were acquitted by the United States senate, and three were found guilty of the charges and removed from the office. If the charges against Federal Judge Emory Speer are sustained in the opinion of the judiciary committee, it is regarded as certain that he will be impeached, and the proceeding would mark the seventh in the history of the nation.

The first federal judge to be impeached was John Pickering, of the United States supreme court, was impeached in 1804, but was acquitted on a strictly party vote in the senate.

NEW CITY CHARTER DRAWN BY COUNCIL IS BEFORE PEOPLE

They Will Either Adopt It or Reject It at Special Election Ordered by Legislature for September 24

EPITOME OF CHARTER HEREWITH PUBLISHED

Was Drawn by Committee of Citizens and Is Printed at Their Request so That Voters May Vote Intelligently

The legislature of 1913 passed a new charter for the city of Atlanta, and ordered that an election be held on Setpember 24 for the purpose of submitting the charter to a vote of the people. If a majority of the voters in that election approve the charter, it will go into effect January 1, 1914. If a majority disapprove the charter, then it becomes a dead letter.

Two features of the charter are to be voted on separately. One is the section reducing the recorder's power. If a majority of the voters in the election approve this section, it will stand. If a majority disapprove it, then the recorder's power will remain as it is under the present charter.

The other section to be voted on separately is the one providing an initiative, referendum and recall. If a majority of the voters in the election approve this proposition, it will stand as a part of the new charter. If a majority disapprove it, then it becomes a dead letter. Also should the new charter be voted down, but the initiative, referendum and recall be approved, then the plan shall be applied to the present city charter.

The new charter is not essentially different from the present charter. The difference involves matters of detail, and does not change the basic principle of theory of Atlanta's present form of city government.

THE MAIN CHANGES.

The main changes are as follows:

The grady hospital board is abolished.

The Grady hospital, the Battle Hill anti-tuberculosis sanitarium, the city warden, the sanitary department and the health department are all put under one board, to be known as the board of health, hospitals and charities.

The cemetery commission is abolished, and the city cemeteries are put under the park board, which is to be known as the board of public recreation.

The fire department, now administered by a committee of council, is put under the police board, which is to be known as the board of public safety.

The construction departments, now administered by the street committee and the sewer committee of council, is put under a newly created board to be known as the board of public works.

All heads of departments are to be elected by the boards, instead, as at present, of having some elected by the boards, some elected by council, and some elected by the people.

The sanitary tax of $3 per year is abolished.

The new charter is in reality ty a revision of the present charter. It was gotten up by city council. The main idea in drafting it was to make the present charter harmonious and consistent all the way through, to eliminate obsolete matter, and to group together and in logical order the sections bearing upon particular subjects.

In length, the new charter is nearly as long as the present charter, which means that it cannot be published in full in a newspaper. A committee of citizens have drafted a revision of the present charter, a synopsis or epitome, showing every salient feature of the caarter. This committee consisted of Judge George Hillyer, Major R. J. Guinn, Archibald H. Davis, James R. Nutting and Albert D. Thomson. At their request, The Journal prints the epitome, so that the people may vote intelligently upon the charter on September 24.

The epitome follows:

EPITOME OF CHARTER.

An epitome of the amended charter of the city of Atlanta, as passed by the general assembly of Georgia of 1913 and to be voted on by the citizens of Atlanta at an election called for the fourth Wednesday in September, 1913.

The present charter of the city of Atlanta was passed by the general assembly of Georgia at a session held in 1874. It has been frequently amended since that time, sometimes in minor and sometimes in important particulars.

In the course of time, it now becomes necessary to reshape this charter as so amended whereby the representative form of government may be continued under a charter logicaly arranged and systematized. Also, to cut out many provisions that have become obsolete by reason of time and no longer serve any useful purpose.

A municipality in Georgia being a mere agency of the state, it has no power unless the general assembly plainly sets it out in its charter. The agent cannot act unless authority is given by the principal in any case. Likewise, a municipality, as a public agent, must always show explicit authority for its acts, especially where it attempts to enforce assessments for general tax, for local improvements or to punish for violation of its penal ordinances. Therefore a charter in this state is necessarily long, as it includes all these general matters and many more set out in great detail.

The charter of the city of Atlanta of 1913, being extended in form, for the reasons above set out, can nevertheless be stated in substance by way of an epitome so that all may understand it and in a few words the real authority granted the city can be ascertained.

CITY LIMITS DEFINED.

In the act of 1913, amending the charter of the city of Atlanta, we find the following:

Sections 1, 2 and 3 set out the name of the city, the incorporation of its

Among those shown in the picture are Wilson Kemp, Isabel Kemp, Charlotte Bidwell, Lottie Meyers, of Omaha, Neb., Mrs. Henry Porter (to the right of the boy with his arms folded), Scott Hudson, Jr., and Louise Hopkins Moore.

Aided by water wings and the firm determination to learn to swim as well as the grown-ups, a number of children have a swimming party every afternoon at East Lake.

The youngsters range from two years old up to fourteen and sixteen years of age; but from the youngest to the oldest not one of them is afraid of the water.

Attended by nurses or by father and mother, the pretty little babies have a joyous time paddling and wading about near the bank. They have become amphibians, living in and out of the water at will. Clad in bloomer suits or boys' bathing suits they, splash around awhile in the water, and then run out in the sand to play and get thoroughly warmed up.

Some of the older children are really learning to swim and the very youngest is not afraid to try.

The club recently put in a shoot-the-chutes for the youngsters, and they were delighted. It is in constant use, too, the grown folk sometimes pre-empting the chute as well as the children.

Some of the boys play ball in the water at times, and when the game is going well the air resounds with merry shouts. Often, about the middle of the exciting game, the men who swim and dive and lie about in the sunshine on the raft, beg to join in; and then the fun increases.

Many of the very young boys are expert swimmers, and all the children are becoming thoroughly accustomed to the water.

Among those who go in the water almost every day are Wilson Kemp, Isabel Kemp, Charlton Bridwell, Lottie Meyers, of Omaha, Neb.; Scott Hudson, Jr., and Louise Hopkins Moore.

Crimson Splotch Is Left In Heart of Atlanta By Two Midnight Tragedies

G. G. Miller, Nightwatchman at the Marietta Car Line Depot, Shoots and Kills Man Who Is Said to Be A. Lee Maddox-Aged Unknown White Man Found on Decatur Street With Knife Wound in Back

A Lee Maddux, a blacksmith living at 94 Hampton street, was shot and died later in the Grady last night about 12 o'clock in the Marietta car line depot, on Walton street, by G. G. Miller, the nightwatchman of the building.

According to Miller's statement to the police, Maddux and four or five men, all apparently drunk, were in the waiting room at 12 o'clock, which was time to close up. He asked them out, and instead of leaving they jumped on him. He fell, his revolver dropped from his pocket to the floor, and he and Maddux both grabbed for it. Miller said he got it by the handle and Maddux got it by the barrel. Being hard pressed, he said, he pulled the trigger, and a bullet pierced Maddux's sa... between the eyes.

Patrolman Shaw was standing at the corner of Broad and Marietta streets, a block or so from the scene of the shooting when a man ran up and told him there was a fight in the depot. Shaw rushed around, and was within fifty feet of the place when he heard a shot, quickly followed by two men emerging from the rear of the depot and running toward him. He caught and held them, but then a man ran up and said they were not the ones who did the shooting—that the man with the revolver in his hand and the wounded man were both in the depot. So Shaw turned loose his two captives and hurried on.

DIES AT HOSPITAL.

He found Maddux lying in the paved alley which runs through the depot, a pool of blood around him, his brains spilled nearby. Miller, who had made no attempt to get away, gave himself up, and was carried to police station.

Meanwhile the Grady hospital auto emergency ambulance had rushed Maddux to the operating table. He died shortly after 1 o'clock this morning.

Miller claimed he was being badly beaten and had to shoot. His face seemed to bear him out. Both eyes were black and swollen, and his right eye was torn and bleeding. He said that was where one of the fellows tried to claw out his eyeball. On his left jaw was a swelling as if he had been struck a terrific blow.

The police say they have an idea who the men are who were with Maddux and will make every effort to apprehend them.

Both the police and officials of the Georgia Railway and Power company say a good word for Miller. He lives at 136 East Georgia avenue. The police held him on the blanket charge of suspicion.

Old Man Stabbed Found Unconscious on Street

An unknown man, apparently about sixty years old, was found unconscious and bleeding by Plainclothes Men Powers and Chatham, at Decatur and Yonge streets, shortly before 12 o'clock last night.

He was taken to the Grady hospital, where the doctors thought he would pull through, although weak from loss of blood and still unconscious.

There was a knife wound on his back near his right arm. There was no way to identify him, and none of his friends or relatives called at the hospital.

He wore fairly good clothes. He had a gray moustache and was party bald. Doctors at the hospital said he had been drinking considerably.

LIVELY RACES ON FOR NEW JUDGESHIP PLACES

Governor Expected to Announce Appointments During the Present Week

The municipal court of Atlanta, created by special act of the last legislature, will take the place of the justice courts in the city. It will have power to bind over in criminal cases, and in civil cases will have jurisdiction up to $500 except in divorce cases, land title cases and equity cases.

There will be one chief judge at a salary of not less than $3,600 per year, and four associate judges at salaries of not less than $3,000 per year each.

There will be one chief marshal at a salary of not less than $1,800 per year, and four deputy marshals at salaries of not less than $1,500 per year. There will be one chief clerk at a salary of not less than $2,400 per year, and one deputy clerk at a salary of not less than $1,500 per year.

Neither the judges, the marshals, nor the clerks will be paid any fees. The salaries are fixed at a minimum so that the county commissioners may increase them if they see fit.

The court will open on January 1, 1914. It will have quarters on the top floor of the new Fulton county court house. The chief judge will divide the business between himself and the associate judges; and the court will be in session every day.

APPOINTMENTS THIS WEEK.

The judges are to be nominated by the judges of the superior court of Fulton county and appointed by the governor. The appointments are expected to be made this week.

Under the terms of the act creating the court, the judges must all be members of the Atlanta Bar association, and quite a number of lawyers are being mentioned for the places.

Eugene D. Thomas, former Mayor Courtland S. Winn and W. A. Fuller are mentioned for the chief judgeship.

Among those mentioned for associate judgeships are the following: Ira E. McClelland, T. O. Hathcock, J. V. Poole, Carl N. Guess, Lawton Nally, Don K. Johnston, J. R. Hidley and F. M. Powers. The last three named are now justices of the peace.

ANOTHER JUDGESHIP RACE.

In this connection the new Fulton superior court judgeship is interesting to note. This position likewise was created by a special act of the last legislature. It is to be known as the fourth, or criminal, division of the Fulton superior court, and will handle the business now handled by Judge L. S. Roan. The position will pay $5,000 per year.

Judge Roan is indorsed for the place by 260 members of the Atlanta Bar association. There is another petition, signed by 180 members of the bar association, indorsing an Atlanta lawyer for the place and on the strength of this petition several Atlanta lawyers are being urged by their friends, among those mentioned being E. E. Pomeroy, Walter McElreath, Shepard Bryan, Sam D. Hewlett, Hollins N. Randolph, Judge W. R. Hammond and Charles I. Pettigrew.

Judge Roan now is judge of the Stone Mountain circuit. For nine or ten years he has presided over the criminal branch of the Fulton superior court by a special arrangement, there being too much business for the other judges to handle and take care of the criminal business, too. The Stone Mountain circuit pays the regular circuit judgeship salary of $3,000. During the first six years he served Fulton county, Judge Roan received no extra pay for his work, but for the last three or four years Fulton county has paid him $2,000 per year, so as to make his salary equal to that of the other Fulton superior court judges, all of whom receive $5,000 per year.

The fourth division judge is to be appointed by the governor, for the first term, after which the people will elect.

LET MEX PROBLEM WORK ITSELF OUT, IS LATEST POLICY

President Wilson's at Summer Capital; Secretary Bryan's Lecturing, and Mr. Tumulty Is Resting Week-End

EXPECT EARLY CHANGES IN MEXICAN GOVERNMENT

Washington Officials Appear Convinced Huerta Will Not Run—Believe Americans in Mexico in Danger

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—With President Wilson at the summer capital in Cornish, N. H., Secretary of State Bryan lecturing in Pennsylvania and Maryland, and the secretary to the president, Mr. Tumulty, spending the week-end in New Jersey, the waiting policy of this government in the Mexican situation became more emphasized today.

Before Secretary Bryan and Mr. Tumulty left Washington early in the day messages were received from John Lind, the special American envoy at Vera Cruz, which added assurances to the already confident attitude of the administration. Secretary Bryan asserted nothing had been received to cause any discouragement.

Mr. Lind, it was authoritatively stated, had no thought of returning to the United States at this time and was ready to proceed again to Mexico City at a moment's notice. It was the general opinion, however, that he would remain at Vera Cruz for some time, keeping in touch, through Charge O'Shaughnessy, of the American embassy in Mexico City, with the actual condition of the Huerta provisional government and aiding American citizens who desired to return to this country.

CAUSE OF WARNING TO LEAVE.

President Wilson's urgent appeal to Americans in Mexico to leave the country was declared to have been determined upon after wise counsel not alone because of the present situation in Mexico, but because of conditions which might develop in spite of the efforts of the provisional government to prevent any harm coming to foreigners.

It was recalled that President Wilson, in his message to congress Wednesday, laid special emphasis on the suggestion that "the actual situation of the authorities at Mexico City will presently be revealed" and that "the situation must be given a little more time to work itself out in the new circumstances."

That the administration is content to give the situation plenty of time to work itself out is demonstrated by the present attitude of the president and his advisers and is regarded as one of the explanations for Special Envoy Lind remaining in Vera Cruz. Under no circumstances, it was learned, would Mr. Lind leave Mexico at this time. Not only would his departure be an indication that this government had abandoned hope for the situation, but it was thought it would have a depressing effect upon Americans who choose to remain in the country.

EXPECT EARLY CHANGE.

The provisional Mexican government, it has been pointed out, is encountering financial difficulties, and there have been intimations that there might be a change in the government personnel which would open the way for negotiations upon a definite basis that would lead to an election for the Mexican presidency under constitutional regulation. Washington officials seem to be convinced that Senor Gamboa's second note gave assurance that Huerta would not be a candidate for election under any circumstances.

With Huerta removed from the possibilities, it has been suggested, this government could make concessions with strict adherence to the fundamental grounds of the original proposals to the defacto Mexican government. But until some such development the administration has ground for the belief that there is danger to Americans remaining in Mexico because of the straits in which the provisional government finds itself. A disconten'ed army, it has been suggested, might become uncontrollable.

Secretary Bryan, before he left Washington for the day, had received a protest which came from Mexico City against President Wilson's advice to Americans to leave the country.

souri, was impeached in 1830, but was acquitted by the senate.

The fourth federal judge to be impeached was West H. Humphreys, who presided in the state of Tennessee. He was convicted of all charges and removed from office.

Charles Swayne, judge of the United States district court for northern Florida, was the fifth judge to be called before the bar of the senate, as a result of impeachment proceedings. This happened in 1904. Swayne was acquitted.

Robert W. Archbald, of the United States commerce court, was the sixth and last judge to be impeached. He was found guilty of the charges and removed from office last year.

THE PICKERIN CGASE.

Chairman Henry D. Clayton, of the house judiciary committee, in the prosecution of Judge Archbald before the senate, summarized the history of the several impeachment proceedings, and his statement was subsequently issued by the government in book form. The charges against the several impeached judges are of particular interest at this time, in view of the possibility of similar proceedings against the well known Georgia jurist and orator.

Judge Pickering, the first member of the federal judiciary against whom impeachment proceedings were instituted, was charged with having disobeyed the law in proceedings brought by the United States to condemn a ship with its cargo for a violation of the customs laws. In that the judge delivered the ship to the claimant after its attachment without requiring a bond in accordance with law. He was charged, in this connection, with having refused to hear testimony offered in behalf of the United States, and with refusing to grant an appeal by the government against his arbitrary decree.

Another charge against the judge was that he attempted to perform his official functions while in a state of intoxication.

Judge Pickering did not appear to answer the charges, but his son presented a petition, alleging the insanity of his father and praying an opportunity to adduce evidence in that behalf. The senate admitted this evidence, but the trial resulted in Judge Pickering's conviction and removal from office.

THE CHASE IMPEACHMENT.

Samuel Chase, of the supreme court, was charged with certain misconduct in the prejudice of the defendants in the trials of John Frier for treason, and James Thompson Callender for breach of the sedition laws. He was charged, further, with attempting to improperly induce a grand jury in Delaware to find an indictment against the editor of a newspaper for breach of the sedition laws, and for addressing an intemperate and inflammatory harangue to a jury in the state of Maryland.

Judge Chase was acquitted.

The Principal ground on which Judge James H. Peck, of Missouri, was impeached was that he had grossly abused his power as a judge in sentencing an attorney to twenty-four hours' imprisonment and suspension from the bar of his court for eighteen months, for writing and publishing a moderate criticism of one of Peck's decisions in a case in which the attorney had appeared for the plaintiff.

Judge Peck was acquitted.

CHARGES AGAINST HUMPHREYS.

A public speech declaring the right of secession and inciting revolt and rebellion. In 1862, furnished a basis for the impeachment of Judge Humphreys, of Tennessee. He was charged also with support and advocacy of the ordinance of secession and with aiding in the organization of an armed rebellion against the United States; with conspiring to oppose the authority of the United States, and with refusing to hold this court or perform its functions; with unlawfully acting of the judge of the Confederate district court in causing arrests, imprisonment and confiscations.

Judge Humphreys did not appear to defend the charges and the trial proceeded in his absence, resulting in this conviction and the removal from office.

The Swayne case is of more recent memory. The judge was impeached on twelve articles, charging that he had rendered false claims against the government in his expance accounts; that he had appropriated for his own use, without making compensation to the owner, a certain railroad car belonging to a railroad company then in the possession of a receiver appointed by the judge, and that he had allowed the credit claimed by the receiver on account of the expenditure incident to the use of this car as a part of the necessary expenses of operating the road. He was charged also with residing outside his district and violation of the statute of the United States, and that he maliciously adjudged certain parties to be in contempt of court and imposed excessive fines and penalties therefor.

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay, write today.

Wilson announced no change in the Mexican situation tonight. He spent the afternoon and evening at home. On his arrival he received two long cipher messages, relating to Mexico, but their nature was not revealed. The president declared he was acting as agent for the the state department and that the Red Cross was to do the detail work of placing state department funds appropriated for this purpose. He was instructed, he says, however, not to take any such action until specifically ordered. When it became known these refugees were to arrive today Mr. Gannon says he so informed the state department and asked for instructions. None came, he said. He wired again today, he said, late tonight nothing had been received from Washington and without definite instructions Mr. Gannon would not take action in the name of the Red Cross.

Fourteen of the party came from Durango, the capital of which has been in the hands of rebels for some time. Mrs. Mary A. Brackett told of repeated visits of rebels to her home and with drawn pistols and sabres demanding anything she might have in her house. After several such visits the home was stripped of almost everything. During the overland from Durango with her son, Frank S. Brackett, of Idaho, the party was robbed but allowed to proceed with their wagon and clothes but nothing else. Brackett was a miner and had to abandon his workings. Frank Abbott, also a miner, on one occasion was held up by rebels and told he was to be shot. He was ordered to remove his clothes. He refused, so they tied him to a tree with his clothes on. Just as six men were ready to fire he said the officer ordered him untied. Why, he does not know. Again he was ordered to remove his clothes and obeyed. The rebels left him unhurt but naked.

"The killing of the Englishman, Palmer, in a Durango mining office seems to show that the Mexicans dislike all foreigners, not particularly Americans," said Frank S. Brackett. "Because he would not open a safe, the combination of which he did not know, they shot Palmer dead. It is not a case of who the foreigner is, it's simply money and supplies they want and they are willing to kill anyone to get them."

Americans Refused Permits To Leave Besieged City

(By Associated Press.)

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Aug. 30.—Invested by 10,000 rebels and defended by 5,000 federals, Torreon, state of Coahuila, Mexico, holds a number of Americans who have been refused permission to leave the besieged city, according to three American refugees who arrived here today.

Frank Hall and Milton Shisum, and Andrew Odel, escaped after General Bravo, the federal commander, had said no American could quit the place. They procured mules and, unharmed, made the journey of 600 miles to Piedras Negras, the rebel headquarters opposite Eagle Pass.

The men said the federals in Torreon burn their dead each day and that disease has been largely prevented. A scarcity of food, however, is occasioning much suffering among the poor.

Incident to the investment of the city, the refugees said six Americans, members of the constitutionalist army, were captured recently and summarily executed. Losses in recent engagements they declare, are not nearly as heavy as reported, totaling not more than 300 or 400 on each wide. The Huerta forces have 20 cannon and 40 machine guns, the constitutionalists are but poorly equipped in this respect.

The refugees were unable to give even approximately the number of Americans in the besieged city.

Refugees Reach New Orleans With Nothing but Their Clothes

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 30.—After having lost everything they owned and glad to escape with their lives, several American refugees from Mexico arrived here late today. On the City of Tampico, arriving from Vera Cruz, were twenty-three Americans, many of whom came from the interior and had nothing but the clothes they wore. They said their passage was arranged for by the American government and here they expected to be taken care of for a time with state department funds. That, however, was not forthcoming and tonight, at last sight of the party, including one woman, waited on the dock until John I. Gannon, personally, took charge of them.

Mr. Gannon, president of the Hibernia Trust company, has charge of the Red Cross funds in New Orleans. Some time ago, he was instructed, he says, to take care of any American refugees that might arrive from Mexico. He understood he was acting as agent for the the state department and that the Red Cross was to do the detail work of placing state department funds appropriated for this purpose. He was instructed, he says, however, not to take any such action until specifically ordered. When it became known these refugees were to arrive today Mr. Gannon says he so informed the state department and asked for instructions. None came, he said. He wired again today, he said, late tonight nothing had been received from Washington and without definite instructions Mr. Gannon would not take action in the name of the Red Cross.

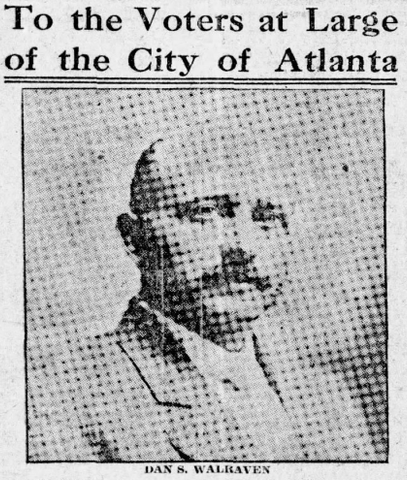
"Wolf of Wall Street" Must Write

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—David Lamar will not have opportunity to tell the senate lobby committee about the railroad lobby here in 1909. Chairman Overman today told him to present any facts in writing.

To the Voters at Large of the City of Atlanta



DAN S. WALRAVEN

Having served two years as Councilman, the experience I gained while there would be of great value to both myself and the City in serving the City as Alderman.

I am not seeking the office personally, and have said on several occasions that I would not consent to re-enter politics, but within the last few days I have been so strongly urged by a great number of citizens to run for Alderman from the Seventh ward that I have agreed to do so with the understanding that I would not make a personal canvass of the voters, as it would take entirely too much time from my business. My experience has been such that I found it takes enough time from a man's business to look after the interest of the people after he is elected. Therefore in making this announcement, I want every voter in Atlanta to consider that his vote has been solicited without being called upon in person by me. I trust every good sound thinking man in the City will heartily endorse a campaign conducted in this manner.

My policy will ever be to give the city a good sound business policy administration, being liberal and conservative in every matter that may come before the general council.

So I am in the race, to stay, and to win, and not to take up the time of the people soliciting votes and arguing about a thousand things that will never come before the general council.

Earnestly soliciting the vote of every citizen of Atlanta, I beg to remain,

Yours very respectfully,

Dan S. Walraven

Godonhaha Awendetgade Otcennonnyat

BEFORE the white man came, these were the three words that expressed "joyousness"—a joyousness that was contagious.

Today, the three words which best express this same idea are

CAROLA INNER-PLAYER

It is the expression of the entire household—not of a single musician of that household.

The young lady with supple fingers and time to practice learns to play, of course. She may become a pianist. But father, the busy man, and mother, of the household cares and social duties, become Inner-Player Pianists. The great world of music with its thousands of compositions lies as an open book before them. Especially is this true if the CAROLA INNER-PLAYER is chosen, for this is a perfected type of Player.

It is the only Player with a Miniature Keyboard, which gives a flexibility to the stroke, and It is the only Player that enables you to instantly transpose through nine keys. It is the only Player having a Wrist Rest, which means unusual ease of operation. There are nine other exclusive patented features which we want to explain to you.

SOUTH SIDE CITIZENS ASK FOR BETTER STREET

"If Resident Dies He Has to Be Carted Clear Through Town to Get to West View"

Councilman D. Knight, Alderman Kelly, and a big delegation of south side residents appeared before the public works committee of the board of county commissioners on Saturday to urge that body to co-operate in the widening, regrading and repairing of South Pryor street from Georgia avenue to Ridge avenue, a distance of three-quarters of a mile.

The south side delegation hopes to get the city to pay the cost of the material if the county will agree to do the work.

Mr. Knight in speaking of the condition of the south side thoroughfares generally declared that if a citizen of the south side dies, his body has to be carted to town and then back again if he is to be buried in West View cemetery.

That, he declared, is just one of the many hardships of the south side residents on account of the condition of the streets.

The south side delegation hopes ultimately to get Pryor street paved with a smooth material clear through from Georgia avenue to Lakewood.

NEGRO IS CHARGED WITH PALMING OFF BAD CHECK

Charged with passing a worthless check on a Decatur street near-beer saloon Raven Brown, a negro, was arrested last night by Detectives Hamby and Vickery.

Brown is said to have telephoned the saloon to send him three bottles of beer and change for ten dollars to a fictitious address on Decatur street.

The delivery boy, with the beer and change, was met by Brown on the street. The negro, it is said, took the beer and nine dollars and fifty-five cents and in return gave the delivery boy a check for ten dollars. The check turned out to be worthless.

This is the fourth negro who has been arrested during the past few days for the same offense.

MASS MEETING TO TALK ON PURER MILK SUPPLY

October 3 Set as Date for Milk Meeting by Chamber of Commerce

All the ministers of the city will be asked to announce from their pulpits the public meeting to discuss pure milk on October 3, on the Sunday preceding the meeting. The co-operation and approval of the ministers is earnestly desired by the chamber of commerce, which, through its milk committee, has definitely launched a movement for a purer milk supply.

In addition to the ministers, the club women of the city will aid the movement in every way possible, and the trained nurses of the city will also co-operate.

The investigation of the milk situation is in the hands of the state chemist. Dr. R. E. Stallings, and the state bacteriologist, K. W. Adkins.

They will be assisted in every way possible in their work, and the chamber of commerce hopes that a large audience will attend the public meeting on October 3, at the auditorium.

To select the 1914 meeting place of the Georgia Weekly Press association the executive compitte of that organization has been called to meet in Atlanta at 2 p. m. on September 13. This meeting will be held in the office of H. M. Stanley, commissioner of commerce and labor, at the state capitol. Mr. Stanley is corresponding secretary of the association.

Atlantian Creates Another "September Morn" to Make Debut on Monday Morning

Blue as the Skies of the Original, as Refreshing and as Daintily Alluring, the "September Morn" of F. Marion Jacks Will Be Ushered in

In the original, "September Morn," by Paul Chabas, is a young and beautiful girl, just about the most beautiful girl in the world, decidedly on the sunny side of twenty summers standing a little more than ankle deep in the blue and chilly waters of the ocean, contemplating a morning plunge, attired only in nature's loveliest costume—a smile. There is the artistic color scheme, too, with a long range of high mountains looming up in the distance as a background for the entrancing figure. It is this wonderful conception of colors that has made the picture famous, and the daring audacity of the author in creating the scene sells it in every quarter of the globe.

With the advent of September 1, tomorrow morning, there will come into being another "September Morn" to vie with the great efforts of the artist, though withal it is not by any means a painting. It comes nearer being real than the painting itself because the ocean is there in miniature—a real wet ocean—wet in more ways than one, because its composition is made of wet things. Gordon gin is one of the ingredients; lime juice and the white of an egg frapped is another, and the last is Grenadine, an imported cordial of raspberry juice.

In a word the new "September Morn" is a cocktail, if you haven't already guessed it, and the chances are that you have.

And further than that the artist is an Atlantian—F. Marion Jack, steward of the Atlanta club, located on the fifth floor of the Forsyth building. When he created his "September Morn," Mr. Jack incidentally increased his bank account to the tune of $100 in real gold —a prize he won a short while ago in the New York Herald's annual mixed drink contest.

It has been the custom of that paper for several years to offer a series of cash prizes, first, second and third, to the one mixing the newest, best and most original drink, the recipe for the delicious beverage to be sent broadcast over the country.

Once before Mr. Jack went into the contest and carried off the second prize. When the time came around this year for the candidates to try their hand at something new he conceived the idea of concocting a drink, not only delightful to the palate but carrying the color scheme of Paul Chabas' famous painting. After weeks of work in experimenting with colors in which several quarts of liquid refreshments were used, the local artist met with success through the blending of Gordon gin, lime juice, the white of an egg, and Grenadine.

The coloring of the drink is the same as that of the painting and when held up to the light it is said you can see "September Morn" standing a little more than ankle deep in the chilly water of the ocean.

The new drink will be served at the Atlanta club Monday for the first time, making its debut, as it were, with the advent of the first winter month.

Mr. Jack, who has been with the club for several years, is being warmly congratulated on his success in winning the New York Herald prize and the members are anxiously awaiting the time when they can call for a "September Morn" and get it. The steward is universally liked and is popular with every one who enjoys the hospitality of the Atlanta club. He has prepared and had published a book of drinks, both "soft" and "hard," that is being sought by some of the largest and most prominent clubs in the United States.

F. Marion Jacks.

HOSTS OF LABOR WON'T HOLD PARADE ON MONDAY

Labor Day Will Simply Be a Holidays for the Unions, With Two Ball Games

Labor day, which is tomorrow, will not be celebrated in Atlanta with a parade by members of the labor unions, such as were held in former years.

There will be no formal observance of the occasion whatever by the labor unions. The men of the unions will simply take a holiday and rest and amuse themselves in whatever ways may offer.

Labor day being a national holiday, the banks will close and the city hall will close by order of Mayor Woodward, only those departments remaining on the job which are absolutely necessary to the public service.

There will be two ball games, one in the morning at 10:30 o'clock and the other in the afternoon at 3:30, with New Orleans as the offering.

Inasmuch as there is a hot contest between Atlanta and Birmingham for the "attendance pennant," two big crowds are expected at Ponce de Leon park Monday, and these two games are likely to put Atlanta well in the lead.

GRACE REVIVAL STILL DRAWING BIG CROWDS

The three weeks' revival at Grace Methodist church continues to draw large crowds and is increasing in interest.

On Sunday there will be three services. The one at 3:30 will be for men and boys and the subject will be "Cain's Wife."

The singing of O. W. Stapleton and the senior and junior choirs, assisted by a large congregation, is largely responsible for the large attendance.

THAW'S FAVORITE WEAPON IS USED BY HIS ENEMIES

Efforts Made by Habeas Corpus Writ to Bring Him Into Court Tuesday

(By Associated Press.)

SHERBROOKE, Quebec, Aug. 30.—Harry K. Thaw's favorite though ineffective weapon in the New York courts, the writ of habeas corpus, was turned upon him today by his old prosecutor, William Travers Jerome, as a means of forcing Thaw into court here next Tuesday in order that the immigration authorities may deport him to Vermont, in what Mr. Jerome hopes will be the first leg of the trip to Matteawan asylum.

Tonight, satisfied with his work, Jerome left for Quebec to spend Sunday. He was accompanied by Franklin Kennedy, deputy attorney general of New York.

John Boudreau, the rural chief of police at Coaticook, Thaw's proud captor, after he had crossed the Canadian frontier, was the fulcrum used by Jerome and his Canadian lawyers in obtaining the writ. The police chief was persuaded that Thaw's detention in the Sherbrooke jail on a defective commitment might result in a damage suit for false arrest, so he petitioned Superior Judge Samuel Hutchinson to have the prisoner produced in court.

Judge Hutchinson, at first loath to disturb the status of the case, Thaw having been remanded to jail for an indefinite term by a brother judge, Arthur Globensky, finally consented to hear arguments on the writ at 10 a. m. Tuesday, when Thaw's lawyers will have an opportunity to oppose it.

If the writ is sustained Thaw will be turned over to the immigration officers at once and will be taken to Coaticook for hearing, and doubtless be thrust across the Vermont border, there to be seized by deputy sheriffs acting for New York state on the warrant charging him with conspiring with Howard Barnum, the Matteawan guard, and others to escape.

Jerome's coup was made possible by the sudden return here of Judge Hutchinson, who had been in Maine on his vacation. By the merest chance Samuel Jacobs, chief of counsel for the New York interests, was apprised of his return, and made a dash back to Sherbrooke after leaping from a train bound for Montreal. The immigration authorities, also bound thither, returned on the next train and waited about the court house today in the hope that the hearing on the habeas corpus writ would be held at once.

THAW'S LAWYERS SURPRISED.

Thaw's lawyers were taken completely by surprise. Only two of them—Charles D. White and Harry Fraser—were in Sherbrooke. There was talk of bringing the chief counsel, J. N. Greenshields, of Montreal, here by special train, but he was cruising on his yacht in the St. Lawrence river and could not be reached until tonight. He will be here tomorrow. The second in command, W. K. McKeown, arrived from Montreal this afternoon, after the writ had been granted.

"We do not think this move will stand in court," said McKeown. "New York is using John Boudreau as a pawn. It is an abuse of the write of habeas corpus.

"A writ of habeas corpus is issued presumably in a prisoner's behalf. In this case, it has been used to deliver him into the hands of his enemies. It is a mere subterfuge. We do not criticise our opponents for taking this action in our absence, for we doubtless should have taken like advantage, should we have had the opportunity. However, there was a sort of mutual understanding that nothing was to be done in the case until Wednesday next, when Roger Thompson's trial is to go on."

JEROME SMILES GRIMLY.

Mr. Jerome smiled grimly at his victory. The Thaw lawyers had thought the next move would be made through Alexis Dupuis, the Coaticook justice of the peace, who committed Thaw. It had been said that New York was bringing pressure to bear on Dupuis to withdraw the commitment. With the attention of the Thaw lawyers riveted on this suggestion someone quietly visited Boudreau and got him to sign the petition.

It was presented to Judge Matthews Hutchinson in chambers by Samuel Jacobs acting for New York. Stripped of its legal verbiage it reviews the details of Thaw's arrest at Coaticook on August 19, maintains that he is held on a faulty commitment, sets forth the desire of the petitioner to redress any wrong done Thaw, and to avoid "any further liability for damages," and concludes as follows:

"Wherefore your petitioner prays that a writ of habeas corpus issue, addressed to the said J. H. LaForce, who illegally detains the said Harry K. Thaw in the common jail for said district, ordering him to forthwith bring and produce before a judge of the superior court for the said district the body of the said Harry K. Thaw, and show cause why the said Harry K. Thaw should not be detained, and that unless proper and legal cause of detention be shown, that the habeas corpus be maintained and said Harry K. Thaw set at liberty, and, your petitioner will ever pray."

CONGRESS ON HYGIENE ENDS AT BUFFALO

(By Associated Press.)

BUFFALO, Aug. 30.—The fourth International Congress on School Hygiene, which closed today, was one of the most successful in the history of the movement. The membership exceeded 2,000, bettering the record of the third congress, held in Paris, and the registered attendance also was better than the Paris figures. The congress of 1915 will be held in Brussels.

A symposium of women's clubs was the best attended meeting today. Miss Mary Wood, of New York, struck a popular chord when she declared that from the beginning of time the burden of conserving the morals of the people had laid upon the women and that the greatest problem confronting the world was a better fatherhood and a better brotherhood.

"We want the husbands to recognize the same moral standards they impose on their wives," said Miss Wood. "We have come to the conclusion that not only should Caesar's wife be above suspicion, but that Caesar himself should be above suspicion."

First Stakes Driven

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30.—Mrs. John N. Booth, chairman of the Old Trails committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution, today drove the first of the stakes that are to mark the old trail from St. Louis to Kansas City.

This trail was traveled by pioneers who went overland to Independence, Mo., near Kansas City, and there joined the great caravans of homeseekers that followed the Oregon trail to the northwest or the Santa Fe trail to the southwest.

CURTIS FAILS TO MAKE BOND FIXED AT $5,000

He Issues Statement of How Samuel Goldstein Was Killed Friday

Paul E. Curtis, of 359 East Hunter street, who was driving the automobile that ran over and killed Samuel Goldstein Friday afternoon, was arraigned in recorder's court Saturday afternoon for the purpose of fixing his bond, which Recorder Pro-Tem Preston fixed at $5,000. Up to a late hour Saturday night Curtis had failed to make bond.

Curtis works for the Block & Thompson garage at Ivy and Gilmer streets. He was showing the automobile to a prospective purchaser, driving out Washington and Crumley streets a street car stopped in front of him, and it was there that Goldstein was killed.

According to his statements made in recorder's court, Curtis heard the conductor give the motorman "two bells," which is the starting signal, and naturally thought the car had finished discharging passengers and would move on. According to Curtis, Goldstein stepped suddenly from the front platform, he thought Goldstein was going to the sidewalk but he says Goldstein stopped instead and waited in the street for the street car to pass.

Curtis says he tried to stop his car, and tried to swerve and miss the man in the street, but struck him in spite of all his efforts, and after running over him ran a block before he could stop, his brakes failing to work properly. He denies that he sped away from the scene, as first stated, but claims he went back on foot and gave the street car motorman his number.

A relative of the dead man appeared in court and asked that Curtis be held without bond. Curtis will be given a formal hearing in recorder's court next Wednesday afternoon, at which hearing the case will be fully gone into.

Negro Is Hurt

While en route on a hurry call to Inman Park about 8 o'clock Saturday evening Dr. Cheston King's automobile ran down and badly injured Clarence Bagman, a negro deaf mute, at the corner of Auburn avenue and Bell street.

Dr. King was proceeding out Auburn avenue at a brisk speed and the negro, who is a delivery boy for a beer saloon, was riding a bicycle in front of him.

When Dr. King's automobile turned to the left to go around the negro the latter also turned his bicycle to the left. He was struck, knocked from his wheel and dragged about seventy-five feet. At a late hour Saturday night the negro was unconscious. He was taken to the Grady hospital.

Dr. King stated that his car was being driven at the time by his negro chauffeur, Tom Ridgeway, who disappeared immediately after the accident. No case has been made by the police. Dr. King was accompanied by Dr. W. A. Edwards.

Abandon Balkan Probe

(By Associated Press.)

SALONIKI, Aug. 30.—Members of the commission appointed by the Carnegie international peace endowment to investigate the alleged Balkan atrocities, have decided to abandon their work. Servia and Greece objected to certain members of the commission and declined to recognize. Their objections were chiefly against Prof. Paul N. Milukoff, leader of the constitutional democrats in the Russian duma, and the English writer, Dr. H. N. Trailsford, whom they consider pro-Bulgarian.

PORTER CHARLTON GUARDED FROM ALL INTERVIEWERS

Taken Back to Scene of Wife's Murder—Have Hidden Him From Crowds

(By Associated Press.)

BENOA, Aug. 30.—Porter Charlton, under escort of Lieutenant Franchini and Carabineer Rizze, of the Italian military police, was brought ashore here today from the steamship Re d'Italia. After a few hours in prison he was hurried to Como, where he is to stand trial for the murder of his wife three years ago.

The strictest measures of precaution were adopted to guard Charlton by a strategem. The newspaper correspondents and photographers were prevented from approaching him. The head of the police invited the newspaper men aboard his launch. The invitation was eagerly accepted in the belief that this would be a good means to reach the prisoner. The launch set out for the Re d'Italia but suddenly stopped in midstream. All protests were unavailing, even when some of the American reporters threatened to take up the matter with the american authorities.

Charlton appeared on the gangway supported on either side by Franchina and Rizze. He was handcuffed for the first time but tried to conceal the fact by the use of a waterproof folded over his hands.

Instead of the Marasni prison, where a great crowd had gathered, he was taken to the barracks of the carabineers. The crowd then rushed to the barracks but the gates were closed and guarded.

After a short interrogation by the captain of carabineers, Charlton was put on the 7:45 train for Como. Franchina and Rizze still acted as his guard.

SENATE FINISHES FIRST TARIFF BILL READING

Leaders Declare Belief That Measure Will Be Passed Within Week

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The senate heaved a sigh of relief tonight, when just before adjournment, it completed the first reading of the new tariff bill. Although many of the most important new features of the measure remain to be settled, senate leaders agreed that the disposal of the first reading of the bill had brought the passage of the measure within view and that another week may witness its completion and passage.

The rates of the new income tax; the proposed tax on cotton futures; many provisions of the administration features of the law; the suggested tax rebate of 3 per cent for imports brought in American ships; and many other sections of the measure that will occasion debate were put over without action, and will be taken up again next week. Senator Norris announced that before the bill was completed, he would propose an amendment directed at the Brazilian coffee monopoly, giving the president authority to levy 25 per cent duty on a product controlled through monopoly or conspiracy in another country.

CONFERENCE MONDAY.

Democratic members of the finance committee met again tonight and may continue their sessions tomorrow, to go over the sections laid aside by the senate in its several weeks of work on the bill. It was expected tonight that the Democratic senators would be called into a party conference Monday or Tuesday, to adjust all differences over the bill, including the question of the income tax on large incomes.

The senate today made a number of important changes in the bill. The proposal of the Democrats, to give circuit courts of appeal equal jurisdiction with the United States customs court, was withdrawn by Senator Williams, in behalf of the Democratic committee members.

He said the committee had decided it would be better to leave the final judgment in customs cases entirely to the customs court.

Just before adjournment Senator Poindexter offered an amendment for a tariff commission of five persons who would serve for 15 years and receive salaries of $15,000 per year. They could be removable by a majority vote of congress. The amendment which represents the views of the Progressive party will be taken up Monday.

The senate adopted a provision prohibiting importation of goods made by convict labor, or "produced by children under 14 years of age." Senator Borah, Republican, who had been instrumental in having the child labor provision considered as part of the bill, declared the amendment, as it had been drawn, did not meet the needs of the situation. The wording of the provision, he said, would admit goods made by child labor, because it would be difficult to show they had been made principally by children under 14 years of age."

The provisions giving the president power to establish maximum duties much higher than the usual tariff rates, against certain imports from countries that might discriminate against the United States, were adopted after several fruitless attempts by the Republicans to amend them by increasing the list of articles upon which extra duties could be levied.

Senator McCumber endeavored to have agricultural products included in the list; but his amendment was rejected.

MONUMENT TO MARY PHAGAN PROPOSED

Cohutta Pastor Starts Subscription to Erect Statue of Dead Girl

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 30.—Calling upon the women of the state, with the cooperation of the churches, to "let a system of work be instituted that will culminate in a monument to little Mary Phagan," Rev. J. C. Parrott, of Cohutta, addressed a communication to the Dalton Citizen, saying:

"Here is a dollar for the erection of a monument to Mary Phagan, the little factory girl who recently laid down her life on the altar of virtue for interment. She is survived by six sisters, Mrs. J. A. Stewart, Mrs. J. J. Verner, Mrs. Edmonds, Mrs. E. P. Chambless, Mrs. M. P. Elsberry and Mrs. M. L. Turner.

"In the town of Marietta there rests the mangled body of a little working girl—a heroine that, to my mind, outshines them all."

In calling upon the ladies and the churches, he terms "not a mean shaft, but a fitting statue of the martyred child reclining in the agonies of death."

Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain and Party Off For Montreal

(By Associated Press.)

WEST POINT, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Viscount Haldane, lord high chancellor of Great Britain, who is en route to Montreal, visited the military academy today. A salute of nineteen guns was fired and the battalion of cadets was up in review formation on the grass plain. Lord Haldane was enthusiastic in his praise of the cadets' appearance, and congratulated their commander, Colonel Fred W. Sladen, on their excellent showing.

After a reception, the academy buildings were inspected.

The Neel Mining Company
Abbeville County, South Carolina

Corporation Being Organized to Develop Rich Deposits of Gold Ore in Well Defined Veins---Outline of Plans for Organization and Work

The Neel Gold Mine property is located on three hundred and sixty acres of land lying nine miles south of Abbeville, and about one and one-half miles southeast of Parson's Mount. It is about eight miles from the old Dorn mine, which yielded something more than a million dollars. The entire section around Parson's Mount is heavily mineralized, and the veins seem to have focalized in the Neel property. There are five clearly marked veins of ore, three of which run entirely across the tract of land, and which have been more or less developed by shafts to water level. Work has been done on the property at long intervals, beginning with slave mining before the Civil War. None of the works have been driven below water level, and no effort has been made to save more than the free gold that could be caught with an ordinary stamp mill and copper plates. Even in this crude way several thousand dollars have from time to time been taken from the veins above water, and yet there are many tons of ore above water level that have not been touched, in the main veins and in the new veins more recently discovered.

The two main veins on the property are from eighteen inches to two feet wide at water level, and have every indication of continuing down to great depth. The values improve with depth—one sample at water level showing the very high value of $81.39 per ton.

The ore is a quartz pyrites, partly decomposed. The decomposed pyrites contains free gold in exceptionally rich values, while fully three-fourths the value is in the undecomposed pyrites. A simple process of treating the ore would be by the use of the regulation stamp mill and copper plates to catch the free gold, and a concentrating table. Such a table, if bought new, would cost $350.00. Fully three-fourths of the value of the ore will be found in the concentrates, which can be saved by an inexpensive process.

It would not be advisable, especially in the development stage of the mine, to put in a chlorinating or cyanide plant or a smelter, for when such high values can be handled in such small concentrated bulk, the cost of shipping and reduction should be nominal. There are several reliable plants that treat refractory ore in easy reach of Abbeville. One of these located in this state worked ore at profit, the average value of which was only $1.49 per ton, taking out $58,000 in round numbers during the year 1907. See U. S. Geological Survey, 1907.

This was possible because of the great quantity and accessibility of the ore deposit, which is a veritable mountain. The Candor Mine of North Carolina, that has an average value of $8.00 per ton, has a perfect reduction plant, and the owners would probably treat concentrates for other companies at a low cost per ton. The mine is being successfully operated, and, from first to last, has produced $600,000 of bullion.

Below will be found some of the values per ton found in recent openings, as per the assays made by experts.

Recalling that $6.00 per ton, free gold, in a vein a foot wide, of any considerable extent, will furnish profitable milling, and an average of $10.00 per ton is considered very good, one can readily conceive what these high values mean for a milling prospect.

PLAN OF ORGANIZATION

The land on which this mine is located is owned by W. W. Bradley, of Abbeville, S. C. When a development company has been organized, it is proposed to make titles to all mineral rights in the name of the organized company. This will carry with it the right to dig and mill at will; to use any wood and water on the land for mining or milling purposes, and to exercise every right of ingress and egress that is enjoyed by the owner in fee simple.

In addition to conveying to the corporation the mineral interest in the land of Mr. W. W. Bradley, he and his associates hold options and working leases on all adjoining lands on which mining has been successfully carried on by small operators for a number of years. All of these options and leases will be transferred to the corporation, in addition to the mining interest on the lands as stated above.

The capital stock of the corporation will be $20,000.00, divided into four thousand shares of five dollars per share. Of this amount, $10,000.00 will be issued to Mr. Bradley and his associates for the purchase of mineral interests in the 361-acre tract of land, and for the leases and options as above stated. $2,000 of the remaining $10,000 has already been subscribed in cash by Mr. Bradley and his associates, and paid in. There remains, therefore, stock to be sold which will be issued in shares of five dollars each, making in all 1,600 shares yet to be sold. The two thousand dollars already paid in in cash by Mr. Bradley and his associates has been invested in the property in sinking shafts at different points, in securing assays, consulting experts, and in locating the veins, and other work connected with the mine, and has been well invested. By the operations so far it has been shown to investors that the property is well worth working. In addition to this, Mr. Bradley and his associates have had many other expert miners investigate their property, and with one accord they agreed that they have rich veins of ore on this property which justify the belief that handsome dividends will be paid if the mines are worked economically by a small enterprise. These miners have expressed themselves as anxious to buy the property if it would justify the belief that the veins would furnish enough ore for mining operations for a period of twenty-five years.

One working shaft has been sunk to a depth of seventy feet, and the ore is richer and the vein wider than at the surface, and every indication points to the fact that this will continue for another seventy-five feet and possibly more. A few years ago, Mr. Alf Lyon, of Abbeville, S. C., now connected with the Abbeville Cotton Mills, took from this vein, from surface ore in free gold, something over $1,200 in a very few days, and he did not work the vein a distance of more than thirty feet and to a depth of twenty feet. Many other parties have mined on a small scale on Mr. Bradley's property, or adjoining lands, and the results have been as successful as the undertaking of Mr. Lyon.

EIGHT THOUSAND DOLLARS IN STOCK TO BE SOLD

When the $8,000.00 in stock is sold, it is proposed to use the mining machinery now owned by Messrs. W. W. Bradley and associates, and to rent other mining machinery, which can be had in the neighborhood of one hundred dollars per annum. It will only be necessary to purchase machinery to the amount of six or eight hundred dollars. All the other money paid in will be used for actual operations. No salaries will be charged by any of the officers of the company until the company has paid a dividend, and absolutely no commissions will be paid to any person or corporation for selling stock. Every dollar that is subscribed will be used in developing the property, and not one dollar will be wasted, or lost, or given away as a bonus.

Investigation of the character of the men engaged in the enterprise is invited. Any of the banks of Abbeville, S. C., will furnish prospective purchasers of stock with information to prove that what is said by them will be done.

The mine can be worked very economically. Labor can be had at the mine above the ground for seventy-five cents a day and board, and under the ground for one dollar a day and board. The only high salaried person necessary will be an expert miner, and it is the purpose of the corporation to secure the services of a practical miner, who has made a success of the business.

The Neel property offers best prospect for a rich return from small investment that has ever been offered either in this state or Georgia. No property has ever been offered on fairer terms.

When the proposed company is organized, every detail of business will be subject to the approval of the officers, and every stockholder will be fully informed of the progress and development of the work.

There are many people in this state who do not know that just across the river, near Thomson, Ga., mines are being operated today, which, even with crude machinery, are paying from $800.00 to $1,000.00 per week, and have been doing so for many years. Experienced men who are familiar with these properties say that none of them compare in the general high grade of the ore, with the Neel property.

Inspection of the Neel property is cordially invited, and samples of the ore will be furnished to any prospective investor in the stock of the company upon application. The prospective stockholder may take samples for himself, and he may have them assayed wherever he desires.

Parties desiring to subscribe to any part of the remaining stock of this corporation, will write at once to The Neel Mining Company, Abbeville, S. C., stating the number of shares they desire, and enclose check to cover subscription. Stock will be issued in the order of the receipt of the subscriptions, and if the stock be oversubscribed, the money will be returned after the $20,000 has been reached.

MRS. SAGE RESTING EASILY AFTER FALL

In Fall From Street Car Saturday, She Was Not Seriously Hurt

Advices from the Elkin-Goldsmith sanitarium late yesterday afternoon stated that Mrs. I. Y. Sage, Sr., who was hurt in a fall from a Peachtree street car at the corner of Ponce de Leon avenue earlier in the day Saturday is resting easily and attending physicians do not think her condition serious.

Mrs. Sage had come into Atlanta from her country home at Wallace station on the Williams Mill road to look over a suite of rooms she had engaged in the new Ponce de Leon apartment. As she started to alight from the step of the car her foot caught in her dress and she was pitched violently headlong to the hard pavement, the force of the fall breaking her arm. She was taken into Jacobs' pharmacy nearby and a few minutes after ruushed to the sanitarium.

It will be a source of gratification to the scores of friends of Mrs. Sage to know that her injuries are more painful than serious.

Drunk Man Fell Two Stories, Lit on His Hands, and O. K.

A state of intoxication was all that saved John Hoge, of 175 Marietta street, who fell from a second-story rear window at that address and landed on his head. When brought to Grady hospital, Hoge showed only a slight scratch on his head, was conscious, and complained of no pain.

Hoge landed directly on his head, striking several old iron pipes in the back yard.

Dixon and his wife are said to have quarreled on McDaniel street, near Whitehall shortly after 6 o'clock Saturday evening and during the argument Dixon took his wife four times, threw his pistol into a ditch and made his escape before the police arrived, it is said.

WANTS NEIGHBOR TRIED FOR ANTICS OF HIS DOG

W. E. Eberhardt, of 126 Flora avenue, called at police headquarters Saturday night and requested Chief Beavers to make a case against Jack Evans, his next door neighbor. He stated to the chief that Evans lost a large white dog, which early Saturday afternoon had attacked his eight-year-old son, Lamar Eberhardt, biting the boy on the hip. Chief Beavers assured Mr. Eberhardt that he would investigate the complaint.

DAN S. WALRAVEN IN RACE FOR ALDERMAN

Former Councilman Announces His Candidacy for Alderman From Seventh Ward

Dan S. Walraven, former member of council and of the finance committee of the city, has announced for alderman from the Seventh ward, subject to the primary election in September.

The friends of Mr. Walraven have been urging him to make the race for some time, but it was not until yesterday afternoon that he was finally prevailed upon to enter the field. He also favored the $5,000,000 bond issue that was finally lost and an issue of $3000,000 substituted.

For twenty-four years Mr. Walraven was a conductor on the Southern railroad and for the past six years he has been engaged in the automobile business.

Mr. Walraven's formal announcement appears elsewhere in today's Journal.

DALTON GREETS ITS FIRST AUGUST BALE

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 30.—Lee Cox, an energetic farmer of Murray county, just east of here, accomplished something for which farmers in this section have been striving for in vain for the past twenty years by bringing to Dalton a bale of new cotton in August.

The bale weighed 368 pounds and brought him $70. It was purchased by J. A. Loeper, a cotton buyer for the Crown Cotton Mills, at 12 1-2 cents per pound, but the mills added $5 as a premium, and the merchants made up a neat sum. In addition to this, Frank Vonberg, of Spring Place, gave Mr. Cox $10, the total received bringing the bale up to 15 cents per pound.

EMBROIDERY ALL THE RAGE IN NERO'S TIME

Ladies Who Delight in Dress and Home Decoration Should Read This

Today anything which looks like real embroidery is snapped up quickly, if a dealer, with the purpose to sell again, if a wearer to triumph over her less silent sisters. As a matter of fact, embroidery has played a most important part in the history of the social world, from king to peasant, and the belles of the fashionable element of society from Nero's time to the present day have invoked embroidery in all its phases to enhance their personal charms.

At all times embroidery has been classed in the luxurious and expensive class, but The Journal has identified itself with a proposition that will bring it to the humblest domicile as well as to the mansion at a cost representing about one-sixteenth what has been the regular rate. In addition this is free booklet of instructions and also a hoop on which to operate will be supplied, by which assistance any school girl can produce results that will defy the best work of a life-long expert.

Watch The Journal for future announcements and particulars concerning this great special offer.

SCHOOL BOOK PRICES TO BE INVESTIGATED

School Book Commission Gets Down to Work Early in October

A systematic investigation of the prices which the people of Georgia are paying for school books as well as a thorough inquiry into the feasibility of the state printing its own school books will be made by the school book commission created by the recent legislature.

This commission will get down to work in October. It would have been on the job already but for the fact that the state board of education has not yet selected the two commissioners which must come from its membership.

The state board of education will meet again probably on Thursday, September 25, and at that time an election will be held to determine the two members of the board who will serve on the school book commission. It is generally believed that the board will elect Dr. G. R. Glenn, of Dahlonega, and Prof. T. J. Woofter, of Athens.

These two gentlemen will complete *the commission, as Speaker W. H. Bur*well has already named the three members from the house and President Anderson has appointed the two members from the senate. The legislative members are: From the house—C. R. McCrory, of Schley, author of the school book resolution, chairman; Herman C. Shuptrine, of Chatham, and W. J. Nunnally, of Floyd. From the senate—B. S. Miller, of the Twenty-fourth; Judge John T. Allen, of the Twentieth.

BOARD TO CONTRACT FOR SCHOOL BOOKS

At Meeting on September 25 Books Will Be Adopted for Use in Georgia

At its next meeting, which will probably occur on Thursday, September 25, the state board of education will adopt the books to be used in the schools of Georgia during the next five years, unless the state decides to terminate the book contract before the end of that period.

It is expected that few if any of the books now in use will be abandoned. It is said that more than a million dollars a year is invested in school books in Georgia.

Heretofore it has been the custom of the board to let the book contract for a period of five years, but at the last session of the legislature, a resolution by Representative McCrory, of Schley, was passed which provides for an investigation of the feasibility of the state printing its own books, and also stipulates that the new book contract must carry a clause permitting its repeal if the state so desires.

NEW CITY CHARTER DRAWN BY COUNCIL IS BEFORE THE PEOPLE

inhabitants and the limits. All these are as now already defined.

Section 4 fixes the number of the wards of the city at not exceeding ten.

Section 5 extends the authority of the city of Atlanta over all of the limits, and this authority includes both powers of taxation as well as the enforcement of city laws.

Sections 6 to 8 inclusive define the police and sanitary limits, being sections outside the ordinary limits which it is deemed necessary to police, such as waterworks, etc.

Sections 9 to 17 define the duties of mayor, of mayor pro tem, of provisional mayor pro-tem, power of the general council to try impeachments, the oath of office of mayor, all these being as now defined except that it is provided that if the mayor fails to approve any action of council within four days, his failure shall have the effect of an approval. The present charter is silent as to the effect of the failure of the mayor to act within said four days.

Section 18 to 22, define the legislative department of the city, to-wit, mayor, board of aldermen and board of councilmen. These sections set forth how they shall meet and how they shall not meet, the power to succeed themselves, vacancies in office, all of which as are now defined.

COMMITTEES OF COUNCIL.

Section 23 sets out the committees of council beginning with finance and ending with freigh trates and transportation. The committees on public works, public safety, public recreation, health hospital and charities, are new but they include committees heretofore known as streets, fire, public parks, charities, health, hospitals and charity. It will be seen that the number of the committees are thus substantially reduced.

Sections 24 and 25 define a quorum of the general council as sixteen instead of eleven as now fixed. "The majority of the board of councilmen and board of aldermen constitute a quorum in each body. The aldermen and councilmen meet as one together to vote upon matters involving expenditure of money granting of franchises, etc. In these cases they vote separately. The meeting days are the first and third Mondays of each month are preserved. All of the foregoing as now defined.

Section 26 is the general welfare clause by which the general council are empowered to pass any law affecting the peace, order or general welfare of the city.

Section 27 provides that no franchise shall be renewed except during the twelve months immediately preceding the expiration thereof.

Section 28 provides for the installation of fire escapes under penalty.

Section 29 authorizes the mayor and general council to punish all offenses against the ordinances of the city by a fine not exceeding that sum, or imprisoned or sentenced to labor or imprisonment for not exceeding sixty days, either or both penalties to be inflicted in the discretion of the recorder. This power is subject to change by vote at this election.

Section 30 defines that ordinances shall undergo two readings on two separate meetings unless, by two-thirds vote, same may undergo the readings at one meeting, as is the present law.

AN ANTI-GRAFT SECTION.

Section 31 provides that neither the mayor, nor any member of the general council nor any city official nor the head of any department nor the member of any board, committee, sub-committee, committee, shall be interested, directly or indirectly, either by themselves, or by any corporation, nor by any firm of which they are officers, directors or employees, in any contract with the city having for its object the expenditure of the city's money in any way. This prohibition covers all contracts, including subcontracts or contracts to furnish labor or material to a city contractor.

Section 32 provides that the council may fill a vacancy in the board of aldermen or councilmen and the successor, thus elected, shall serve until the expiration of the regular term for which he is elected as is at present provided.

Sections 33 to 34 inclusive, provide for the election of election managers, the appointment of their clerks, the method of holding city elections, the trial of contest thereof, and prohibiting illegal voting thereat.

The following officers are names of those to be elected by the people: city attorney, city marshall, city treasurer, building inspector, city comptroller, recorder, clerk of council, city electrician and city tax collector.

Section 35 prescribes the oath of office to be taken by these officials, bonds to be given and salaries to be paid and generally defining their duties.

Section 36 gives the city authority to provide for registration of the voters and to appoint a registrar therefor.

TAX LIMIT FIXED.

Sections 37 and 38 put the tax limit to wit, 1 1-4 per cent per annum on all real and personal property and also a street tax as at present provided.

Section 39 provides that an emergency tax not exceeding one-half of 1 per cent, as at present provided.

Sections 40 to 49 inclusive, authorize the levy and collection of license taxes, not exceeding $300 per annum. Also the taxation of vehicles using the streets, the taxation of insurance companies, of itinerant traders, of theatrical performances. The city is authorized to require all licenses to give bond in the sum of $5,000 to protect all persons from injury by reason of dishonest or fraudulent conduct of the licensee so licensed. The ad valorem tax is made payable in three installments, namely, first, 15; second, July 15, and third, October 15. Interest is to be collected thereon if not paid when due. Street tax is to be collected on or before July 15 of each year.

However, an important change is made as to taxes levied as follows:

"Section 46. The amendment to the city charter approved September 3, 1881, in so far as same authorizes a levy for what is known as 'sanitary tax' and being the particular authority set out in the section of the charter numbered 139 of the city code of 1910 and all similar amendments providing for a sanitary tax, are hereby repealed and hereafter no assessment shall be made on any lot in the city of Atlanta for the purpose of collecting a sanitary tax thereon, whether such lots be vacant or improved."

(This abolishes the $3 heretofore collected on each house by the city for what is known as the "sanitary tax." If this charter is adopted, hereafter no tax of this kind will be collected. This is the only change made in the present scheme of taxation.)

METHOD OF ASSESSING.

Section 50 provides for the election of three tax assessors and authorizes the assessment of all personal and real property.

Section 51 provides that the chief clerk in the tax office shall perform such duties as may be required of him by ordinance or by the tax committee and gives him authority to receive returns of property for taxation.

Sections 52, 53 and 54, inclusive, provide that the books shall be open for the return of property for taxation on February 1 and close on March 15 each year and the taking day fixed as January 1. This is a change, as the taxing day at present is fixed by ordinance on January 21.

Any taxpayer may appeal to the tax committee, which reports their finding to the general council, and any assessment of his property at which such taxpayer feels aggrieved. Any taxpayer may recall from the return of assessor any other taxpayer where same appears to be either false, fraudulent or inaccurate and the tax committee investigates this appeal, and has a trial thereon, and their decision is reported to the general council, who finally passes an order settling the issue, as under present charter.

Section 55 defines the duties of the tax collector, points a penalty upon defaulters and gives the mayor and general council the power to relieve against such penalty as under present charter.

Section 56 gives the tax deeds of the city the same evidential value as the tax deeds of the county as under the present charter.

SPENDING PUBLIC MONEY.

Section 57 requires the council to apportion the revenue each year to the various departments of the city and prohibiting the expenditure of any money except by resolution as under present charter.

Section 58 puts a penalty upon the mayor and members of the general council who vote for any appropriation in excess of appropriation therefor and makes it the duty of the city clerk to bring suit against him to recover such penalty as under the present charter.

Section 59 provides that the annual expense of the city shall not exceed the annual income of the city, and Section 60 provides that the council may use any excess in receipts over appropriations provided such expenditures do not in any case exceed the receipts for such year as under the present charter.

Section 61 authorizes the mayor and general council to borrow $400,000 for any one year, and limits the annual deficit as under the present charter.

Section 62 authorizes the refunding of city bonds as at present, and Section 63 provides for the registration of city bonds in the same manner as state bonds are registered, and Section 64 provides for the issuance of registered bonds in lieu of coupon bonds following registration, all as under the present charter.

Section 65 authorizes any guardian or trustee to invest the funds of his ward in city bonds as at present, and provides that the city shall follow the state law in the issuance of any bonds for any purpose as to elections, voting and other formalities.

SEWERS AND DRAINS.

Sections 67 to 78, inclusive, vest in the mayor and general council the power to lay sewers, to prescribe their sizes, to extend same to the property line, to levy and collect the cost thereof from abutting property owners. These sections also set out how these ordinances are introduced, the requirement of advertisement of ten days, the passage of passage and the lien on abutting property for the cost thereof.

All these are now well defined and generally understood under the present charter, there being no change in same except as noted.

STREETS, GRADES, ETC.

Sections 79 to 105, inclusive, deal with the general powers of the city to open, widen, straighten and change streets or to abandon same under resolution therefor.

To establish and fix a system of grading and draining of the streets.

These sections set forth in detail the character of notice required, the signatures thereto, the method of passing same in the general council, the assessment of the cost of the work on the abutting property by the tax bills and fi fas therefor, the assessment of street car companies in the streets paved, their duty of curbing in certain and the collection of cost thereof, condemnation of pavement upon streets and alleys, the method of ordering condemning the pavement on sidewalks and streets and the assessment of the cost of repaving same and provisions for the collection thereof, the lien upon the abutting property for the cost of this work, the extension of water mains to the property lines and the collection of the cost thereof, etc. All of these matters are well understood and there are no changes in the present charter from the present provisions covering such work.

In these sections there is a new provision authorizing general council to establish a building line along streets and providing that the construction of a building or such line shall constitute a nuisance.

CAR COMPANY ASSESSMENT.

Formerly the street car company only paid for eleven feet of pavement. Under this charter, the street car company pays for eleven feet where it only has one track and sixteen feet where it has two tracks in the street.

These sections conclude in the right in the city to condemn property therefor, but this right has so far not been exercised and was only retained in the charter because council may some time see fit to extend this street.

Sections 106 and 108 provide that the city may require railroads to build bridges over streets hereafter where the railroad is constructed over the streets after the street or road was established.

RECORDER'S POWER.

Sections 108 to 112, inclusive, continue the present scheme as to the duties and powers of the recorder. No change is made in same and they generally continue as they shall hold recorder's court, have power to inflict the punishments prescribed by ordinance, has a clerk who is eligible for recorder pro tem, and also the members of the general council may act as recorder in his absence.

Section 113 defines the duties of clerk of council and his deputies, in the same terms as established.

Sections 114 to 115, inclusive, use the language as now prescribed by charter to define the duties of city comptroller. He prescribes that the income of the city must be apportioned to each department and shall not be exceeded except by action of the general council and that warrant must be presented for each payment, and drawn on a proper fund.

Sections 116 to 117 provide for the office of marshal and fixes his duties in the same language as the present charter, provides that he shall collect all fi. fas. issued by the city, sells property thereunder and makes deeds therefor.

Sections 118 to 122 prescribe the duties of the treasurer, being the same as now established, and also provides that the revenues of the city shall be deposited in four separate banks who shall be required to pay interest thereon.

THE DEPARTMENTAL BOARDS.

Sections 123 to 125, inclusive, prescribes the number and fix the names of the several boards as follows:

Board of education.
Board of public safety.
Board of health, hospitals and charities.

Board of public works.
Board of water commissioners.
Board of public recreation.
Board of trustees of Carnegie library.

The number of boards is reduced. For instance the board of public safety includes the two boards of police and fire. The board of health, hospitals and charities includes the board of health, trustees of hospitals, and commissioner on charities of the general council.

The board of public recreation includes the board of park commissioners and the cemetery commission.

The boards of public works is a new board and is intended to systematize the street and sewer work under a commissioner of public works, as the board should work out from year to year instead of change in views of the committees on streets and committees on sewers annually appointed.

TO PAY BOARD MEMBERS.

A new feature is here adopted, to wit, each member attending the regular monthly meeting will receive $5 per month. This is an effort to apply the wisdom of banks in securing attendance upon their directors' meetings to securing attendance at board meetings. The amount is small but sufficiently remunerative to make it interesting.

The mayor and general council reserve the right to fix the salaries of all officials, whether elected by the people, by boards or otherwise, provided, where boards elect officials, they have the right to recommend salaries to their department to the general council.

Generally, these boards consist of one member from each ward in the city, no two members shall come from the same ward, to be elected by the general council, the mayor and chairman of the committee to be ex-officio members of such boards.

Civil service is retained in the same language as present charter.

The head of the department under such boards, whether superintendent, or general manager, or chief, shall be nominated by the board. He in turn recommends all assistants and employes in such department. If the board does not confirm such nominations he shall continue to nominate others until suitable employees are submitted to and confirmed by such boards.

SINKING FUNDS.

These general provisions are set out in detail in reference to such boards in Sections 127 to 170 inclusive. Section 171 provides for a sinking fund commission consisting of three members, the mayor of which is one, and the mayor and chairman of the finance committee are added as ex-officio members. This commission carries out the state law with reference to sinking funds for bonds issued by citizens, and the same as provided in present charter.

Section 172 provides that all city officials, now or hereafter elected, shall perform such duties as required by ordinances of the city and where not specially assigned to supervision by a board, are to be generally controlled and supervised by the general council.

Section 173 provides that all officials now existing under laws which have been elected by the people, or council, or boards, or appointment shall continue to serve until the end of the term to which they have been elected or appointed. All charter offices not included in the list above stated are abolished from and after the end of their present term.

Section 174 authorizes the mayor and general council to elect a purchasing agent, whose duty it shall be to purchase supplies for all departments. This is a new provision in charter.

Section 175 prohibits city officeholders, that is, no city official of any kind can hold another city or state or federal office.

PENSION SYSTEM.

Sections 176 to 184 authorize the mayor and general council to establish and maintain the system of pensions now provided by the present charter. There is no change whatever as to any of these pensions.

Sections 185 and 186 authorize the condemnation of private property for public purposes, such as public parks, public buildings, parks, schools, fire, police, or any other public purpose, all as now provided.

Sections 187 and 188 authorize the regulation of limits in which livery stables are erected and authorizing ordinances providing for their cleanliness, etc., as now provided.

Section 189 authorizes the city to buy or lease a market house, as now provided.

Section 191 authorizes the city to regulate public meetings, parades, speaking in the streets of the city, as now provided.

Section 192 authorizes the regulation of charges by hacks, transfer companies, etc.

Section 193 authorizes the investigation of any office or board or depart*ment of the city; giving powers to send* for persons and swear them as witnesses, and to make all investigations necessary.

Section 194 gives power to control, regulate or prohibit boarding houses and sanitation in the residence portions of the city, as now provided.

CLAIMS FOR DAMAGES.

Section 195 requires all claims for damages to be submitted to the city before suit is brought thereon. Section 196 requires the superior court of Fulton county to give precedence to city cases in which the collection of city revenue is involved.

Section 197 provides that the county commissioners, when working on streets of the city, shall follow the grade and locality selected by council.

Section 198 authorizes any city official to justify his acts as such when acting in his official capacity.

Section 199 authorizes the establishment of a fee bill, there being no change from the present charter.

Section 200 authorizes the fixing of fire limits and the prohibition of buildings therein constructed of combustible material.

Section 201 grants authority to require all social, locker, or other clubs, keeping intoxicants for members, to secure permits therefor and regulate their operation without such permits, as now provided.

Section 202 gives the city authority to regulate hotels, lodging houses, dance halls, and similar places by requiring therefor and prohibiting the operation without such permit and license. Section 203 gives to the city the power to revoke such licenses in their discretion. All as provided in the present charter.

SMOKE LAW SAFEGUARDED.

Section 204 gives the council power to prohibit, by ordinance to the emission of soot, black or dense smoke from any chimneys, stacks or boilers within the limits and providing a penalty against same.

Section 205 authorizes the establishment of a system of street numbers and making penal the use of other numbers than those so established.

Section 206 prohibits a zone within which surface closets will not be permitted to remain and will not be hereafter constructed, and providing a penalty against same therein.

Section 207 provides for the filling of vacancies on boards by the general council. Generally they have authority to fill vacancies of all offices elected by them. Except members of the general council so elected only serve for the balance of the year of election.

Sections 208 and 209 provide for the buildings of bridges at the east and west end of the Union depot and the sinking of the railroad tracks therein.

FORSYTH STREET VIADUCT.

Section 210 provides for the closing of the openings in Forsyth street viaduct subject to the approval of the railroad commissioner and finally by the governor.

Section 211 provides that the provisions of all the amendments of the general act shall become effective on and after January 1, 1914.

Section 212 provides that all officials shall serve until the end of their present terms, including the members of the several boards, and

Section 212 provides that the mayor, aldermen and councilmen shall serve until the end of their term to which they have been elected. The members of the board of water commissioners, education, trustees of Carnegie library and sinking fund commission shall likewise serve until the end of the term to which they have been elected.

Section 213 authorizes the city to close Wyman street between Tennille street and the Georgia Railroad and Banking company.

Sections 214 and 216-b authorize the city to regulate steam boilers, freight and passenger elevators; to cause tehir inspection; to see that they are properly and safely operated, and to elect an inspector therefor.

CHARTER ELECTION ORDERED.

Section 215 provides that this act shall not become effective unless the majority of the qualified voters of the city voting in such election, shall vote in favor thereof at a special election called for the fourth Wednesday in September, 1913.

Those voting in favor of this act, shall have printed or written on their ballots the following words:

"For the amended charter of the city of Atlanta as provided by act of the general assembly of 1913."

Those voting against this act, shall have written or printed on their ballots the following words:

"Against the amended charter of the city of Atlanta as provided by act of the general assembly of 1913."

Said election to be held, managed, the votes canvassed and result declared in the same manner as city elections are now held.

RULES OF ELECTION.

All citizens who have paid their taxes prior to the year 1913, who shall have registered fifteen days prior to said election, are qualified to vote. If a majority of the votes cast is in favor of this act, the same shall thereupon become a law. If a majority of the votes so cast is against this act, same shall not become a law. The voting precincts and regulations to be in accordance with the booth method of the city primary of 1912. All ballots to be printed in the same type, on plain white paper, thick enough to conceal the character of the ballot when voted.

The result of said election shall not effect the several sections of this act which provides that the provisions of said act shall become a law when approved by the governor, nor the provisions of section 215 which submits to a vote of the people the question of vesting in the recorder's court of said city the power to impose a fine of $500 or a sentence of imprisonment or labor upon the public works for a term not exceeding sixty days, and section 215-b which provides for the submission to the people the question of incorporating into the charter of the city the principles of the initiative, referendum and recall.

At the same time that the other provisions are submitted to a vote of the people as provided in section 215, there shall likewise be separately submitted to a vote the following provisions:

RECORDER'S COURT.

That the mayor and general council are hereby authorized to provide by ordinance for the punishment of offenses against the ordinances of the city, on conviction in the recorder's court, by a sentence to work on the public works for a term not exceeding six months or by imprisonment for a term not exceeding sixty days or by a fine not exceeding $500, or by one or both of said sentences to be inflicted in the discretion of the recorder.

Those in favor of this provision shall have printed or written on their ballots the following words:

"(1) For vesting in the recorder's court power to sentence for a term of labor and imprisonment for sixty days and by a fine not exceeding $500."

The election shall be held and the result declared in the same manner as provided in section 215 of this act with reference to the other provisions of this act.

INITIATIVE—PROVIDED.

Sec. 215-(b). Whenever 10 per cent of the registered voters as disclosed by registration sheets of the last preceding general municipal election, shall request, in a petition filed with the clerk of council, any ordinance or resolution which may have already been adopted by the mayor and general council shall thereafter be submitted to the qualified voters of said city at the next regular election following the filing of said petition. Provided, said request is filed within thirty days after the approval of such ordinance or resolution. If majority of the votes in said election, are cast against such resolution or ordinance, the same shall be forever repealed and revoked and shall not thereafter be of any effect nor shall same thereafter be adopted by the mayor and general council until re-submitted to and adopted by the qualified voters of said city in the same manner as is provided herein where the city receives a majority vote of the people, when so submitted then said resolution or ordinance shall become a law and be in full force in same manner as other ordinances of the city.

Provided, however, that no ordinance or resolution shall be submitted to the people by referendum, as herein provided, at a date earlier than sixty days after the date of its approval, nor shall same be submitted at any other time than at the general city election held on the first Wednesday in December of each year, when it shall be submitted at each annual general election if a petition is filed therefor by the voters of the city as herein authorized.

RECALL—ELECTION—RULES.

The voting on questions submitted to the people at the general elections hereinbefore provided for under the known as the initiative and referendum, shall be held in the same manner as the ordinary city elections, by the same managers and clerks and the same rules under the same methods and the result thereof shall be canvassed in the same manner and declared and reported to the general council for confirmation as the city elections are now held, declared and reported.

The mayor and general council of said city shall be authorized to submit to the qualified voters of said city at any regular municipal election, any ordinance or resolution which they may deem proper and, in the event a majority of such voters shall vote for such ordinance or resolution, the same shall be adopted. In the event a majority of the votes so cast are against such ordiance or resolution, same shall be defeated and shall not be adopted or passed by the mayor and general council until resubmitted and adopted by the qualified voters of said city. If same receive a majority vote of the people and thus become effective, then same can only be repealed by a majority vote of the qualified voters at a regular municipal election.

RECALL AS PROVIDED.

The mayor, aldermen, councilmen, officers elected by the vote of the people, heads of departments and members of boards shall be subject to removal during their several terms of office in the following manner:

Whenever 25 per cent in number of the registered voters, as disclosed by the registration sheets of the last preceding general municipal election, shall so request, in a petition filed in the office of the clerk of council, an election shall be held within thirty days from the date of the filing of said petition on the subject only of the recall or non-recall of such official. It shall be the duty of the clerk of council to check the names on said list and report to the general council the number of registered voters thereon in order to see that the required number have signed the said petition. This report shall be submitted to the general council with the petition, which petition must be filed with the clerk of council at least five days before the meeting of the general council to which same is reported in order that it may be checked up as herein provided. When so reported, with this certificate the general council shall order an election to be held within thirty days as above mentioned. Such election shall be held under the same rules and regulations as govern regular city elections. At this election the ballots shall be as follows: With the names of such officer and office inserted in the blanks:

"For the recall of.....
"Holding the office of.....
"Against the recall of.....
"Holding the office of.....

If a majority of the votes cast in said election are for the recall of such officer, his office is declared vacant at the moment the votes are canvassed by the general council and the result announced. A meeting of the general council shall be called and held for this purpose, if no regular meeting intervenes, within not less than five days of the election so held. At this meeting the managers shall report and make a return of the votes cast in said election by report of same to the general council, and the general council shall examine this return and declare the result. If a majority of the votes so cast for the recall of the official, his office is vacated at the time the result is so declared by the general council as herein provided and a vacancy immediately exists. This vacancy shall be filled in the same manner as vacancies are otherwise filled for such offices.

SEPARATE INITIATIVE VOTE.

Provided, however, that the provisions of this section shall not become a law and submitted to the people as follows:

At the same time that the other provisions of this act are submitted to a vote of the people the foregoing provisions of this section shall also be submitted to a vote of the people as follows:

Those in favor of the provisions of this section shall have printed or written on their ballots the following words:

"For the initiative, referendum and recall, as provided by act of the general assembly of 1913 amending the charter of the city of Atlanta."

Those opposed to the provisions of this section shall have printed or written on their ballots the following words:

"Against the initiative, referendum and recall, as provided by act of the general assembly of 1913 amending the charter of the city of Atlanta."

If a majority of the votes cast in said election on this question is in favor of the initiative, referendum and recall, then the provisions of this section shall become a law.

If a majority of the votes cast in said election on this question is against the initiative, referendum and recall, then the provisions of this section shall not become a law.

The election shall be held and the result declared in the same manner as provided in section 215 for holding an election upon the other provisions of this charter.

Section 216-a provides that the tax assessors and receivers, acting jointly, or, in case of difference of opinion, by majority, shall be the head of the tax office; shall nominate the chief clerk therein and the assistants, subject to confirmation by the tax committee and finally by the general council.

SECTIONS ALREADY LAW.

The several provisions of the foregoing charter with reference to Wyman street, the inspection of boilers and elevators and the last section making the tax assessors the head of their department, became a law when approved by the governor and are not submitted by the people because these several amendments were passed after the amended charter was drawn and submitted to the legislature after the council had requested the original charter to be voted upon before adopted and these several amendments arise not part of the original charter amendments, and the legislature was asked to pass them without reference to result of the vote on the original charter amendment.

Section 217 repeals the conflicting laws.

WHERE CHARTER DIFFERS.

The principal changes in the proposed amended charter are as follows:

(a) The sanitary tax of three dollars per lot is abolished. This seems to be a relic of village days, and is removed as soon as the growth of the city permits, and that time has now arrived, and the tax should be eliminated.

(b) The repair and construction of streets, sewers and bridges, are put under a new board called the board of public works, which board is along the lines of such boards as the board of education, board of health, etc. The citizens from each ward are given representation on this board, and a hearing is assured on any and all complaints that they may desire to make as well as on any protests against proposed improvements which they think the city should hear. But the best idea of the board of public works is to provide an efficient and continuous supervision of the officers and employes in charge of the vast work which the city undertakes every year in connection with streets, sewers, bridges, and the board, so constituted, will secure efficiency and fairness and will secure continuity of plans and methods of work.

(c) The number of boards is reduced, and the same general provisions as established for all, to-wit, there is ahead of each of the several departments and the boards will exercise supervision over such heads of departments and the other officers of such departments and the management thereof, but one board is not given greater power than the other, all having the same general authority with reference to their particular departments.

THE INITIATIVE FEATURE.

(d) This revised charter proposes an initiative on the basis of 10 per cent of the registered voters; a referendum on the basis of 15 per cent of the registered voters, and a recall on basis of per cent of the registered voters, to recall applying not only to the mayor, aldermen, councilmen and other officers elected by the people, but also to the board members and all heads of departments, and all assistants, and neither too small nor too large and will give the citizens an opportunity to protect themselves in the event it should be desired. These provisions, however, are subject to separate vote and may be ratified or rejected without reference to general vote.

(e) Many provisions of the existing charter are brought down into the new. These are carefully revised in clear and shorter language; with a clearer and more logical grouping of the different subjects and provisions under appropriate heads. This work of revision is greatly needed and will surely be approved by all who are acquainted with these problems, no matter what may be their views as to policy of city government in other respects.

MEMBERS OF PARK BOARD LAUGH AT CIRCUS IDEA

Declare Proposition to Let Barnum & Bailey Show at Piedmont Is Preposterous

It appears from a canvass of park board members that they are not even taking seriously the suggestion of leasing the Piedmont Park stadium to Barnum & Bailey's circus, much less considering for a moment the idea of voting for it.

The consensus of opinion among them is that the circus would in one day destroy the work of years in beautifying the park.

Said L. C. Green, member of the board from the fourth ward: "Those heavy circus wagons would cut the park roads all to pieces. The stadium, where they propose to pitch the tents, would be as bare as the palm of your hand after they got through. And the thousands of people tramping through the park would absolutely obliterate the grass and flowers. The proposition is ridiculous."

Said Frank Reynolds, member of the board from the eighth ward: "The idea of spending thousands of dollars and years of work to beautify Piedmont Park, and then let a circus come along and tear it to pieces. Why such a thing is preposterous. I don't think the park board will consider it for a minute."

Said M. B. Young, member of the board from the ninth ward: "The city is not in the business of holding circuses. Because the old circus ground happens to be used for the motorcycle race track doesn't make it incumbent upon the city to turn over a beautiful park to all the circuses that come along. It would be an outrageous precedent."

These expressions are typical of the general trend of sentiment among members of the board, and citizens who felt like rising up in arms against the proposition may reassure themselves.

A delegation of eighth ward citizens are planning, or were planning, to go before the park board Tuesday afternoon and vigorously oppose the proposition, etc. other parts of the city The Journal has received expressions of disapproval in the most emphatic terms.

"AIDA" TO FEATURE FREE ORGAN CONCERT

Ferdinand Dunkley Is Organist Who Plays at Auditorium Today

The Grand March from "Aida," Mendelssohn's Spring Song, the Lohengrin Prelude ad several otheihr numbers of equal their rome will make the free organ concert this afternoon one of the most brilliant ever heard at the auditoriumarmory.

The organist will be Ferdinand Dunkley, fellow of the Royal College of Organists, London, who has been brought here for the occasion by the Atlanta Music Festival association. He will also play at St. Mark's Methodist church at the 11 o'clock service. Mr. Dunkley bears the reputation of being one of the finest organists who ever came from England to America. The program will be as follows:

Prelude to Lohengrin—Wagner.
Offertoire in D Minor—Batiste.
"The Little Shepherd"—Claude Debussy.
"Capricioso"—E. Lemaitre.
Grand Sonata, 94th Psalm—Julius Reubke.
"Spring Song"—Mendelssohn.
"Heve Angelique"—Rubenstein.
Grand March from "Aida."—Verdi.

The program committee of the Music Festival association considers this one of the finest programs it has ever offered, and there is reason to believe that the concert this afternoon will be in many ways the climax of the summer concerts.

However, Mr. Dunkley will be followed during succeeding Sundays by a number of other notable organists, among them Mr. Clarence Reynolds, who has probably played to more people than any other organist in the United States, in the big Ocean Grove auditorium.

A CALL TO JONES AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH MEMBERS

The pastor, Rev. Hugh S. Wallace, has requested The Journal to assist him in "locating" a large number of people who have their names on Jones Avenue Baptist church roll, but who cannot be found at the addresses now entered on the record.

"Out of a membership of about 400," said Pastor Wallace, "there are at least 100 members who cannot be located. Please ask my members to pay a visit to the church and let me know where they live. If I can find where they are in hiding, I will try to 'smoke them out,' and get them back into the service of the church.

"I am beginning a great campaign this fall to straighten up and cull out our church roll. When I get through I expect to have a roll of names that stand for something. I want to get every member who desires to retain membership in Jones Avenue church and cooperate with the church in its work, to come forward, get in line, get to work, and stay at work. I want to get every member who is not willing to co-operate with Jones Avenue Baptist church to either ask for their letter and put it in a church where they will get in line and work, or else ask our church to exclude them from membership on the ground that they are unconverted and unfit for membership in any church.

"I think the time has come when our churches should set up a standard. To-day it means nothing to belong to the church. Some of the worst kind of people in this city have their names on some church book. Our church rolls should be purged, pruned off, 'cleaned up,' so that church membership will mean something."

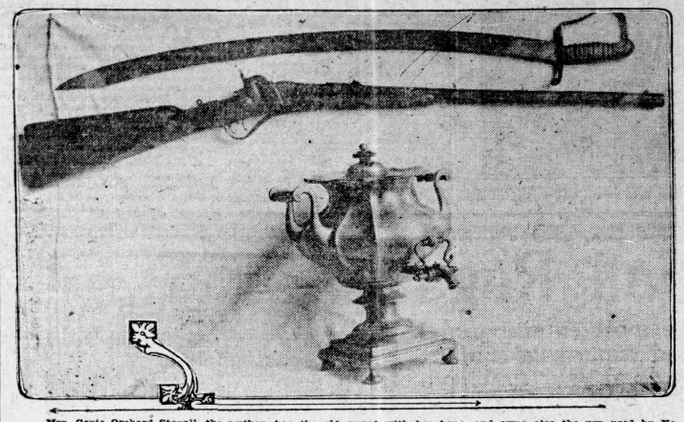
This entertainment marks the introduction of a new Masonic lodge in that section of the city of Atlanta known as Capitol View, and all Masons, their friends and the general public are cordially invited to attend and help make it a success.

General Scott's Sword and Green's Urn Are Now Owned by Resident of Atlanta



Mrs. Genie Orchard Stovall, the author, has the old sword with her here, and owns also the urn used by Nathaniel Green's family. The picture shows the general's sword, the gun used by the first home guard company in Columbia, S. C., during the Civil war, and the historic urn.

An interesting reminder of days of war is an old sword which is now owned by Mrs. Genie Orchard Stovall, the southern writer, and which has been highly prized in the Orchard family as the sword of Winfield Scott, the famous general.

Mrs. Stovall's family is connected with the Scott family, and through the relationship came into possession of the sword, which is now blackened and burnt through having passed through the fires which laid waste the old homestead in Columbia, S. C., during the civil war.

Mrs. Stovall, who now resides in Atlanta, has the sword and a number of other interesting curios here with her; and owns many more which are kept in her South Carolina home.

In talking of the sword, Mrs. Stovall said that it was left to her father, W. H. Orchard, by General Gwynn, who secured it at the death of General Scott.

During the civil war, the sword was among other things burned when the family home was reduced to ashes, and a month afterward it, and other family possessions, were dug up out of the ruins.

It is of fine Damascus steel, but now is so rusty darkened weapon it looks as though it were made of iron. It was left so, because the family thought it would be of more historic interest.

Another of Mrs. Stovall's possessions is a gun which was used by the first company of men formed in Columbia to protect the homes of the city during the war between the states. She also has a handsome urn which was rescued from the fire. It is darkened by the heat, and shows other traces of the flames, but is valued very highly by Mrs. Stovall, as it is the one which used to belong to Nathaniel Green and his family. It was used on the noted general's table and possesses the charm of age and association.

It came to Mrs. Stovall from her mother, Mrs. Helen Orchard, who inherited it from her mother. It was owned by Mrs. Stovall's great-grandmother, a cousin of Nathaniel Green, after the general's death.

Among other interesting reminders of the war is an oil portrait of Mrs. Stovall's mother. It is pierced full of bayonet holes and shows the wear and tear resulting from rough handling by the federal soldiers. It was taken from the Orchard home while it was in flames.

Mrs. Stovall's married name is Mrs. Thomas Pleasant Stovall, but she is known to her friends as Mrs. Genie Orchard Stovall, having adopted that name as her pen name. She is the author of "A Son of Carolina," a southern story, and has contributed to the magazines.

At present she is beginning a new novel, the name of which will be the experiences of a Confederate officer.

BABY DISFIGURED WITH RED HUMOR

Came in Patches. Almost All Over Her. Like Ringworm, Made Sores and Itched. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured.

Clarendon, N. C.—"My baby was broken out with a red, thick and rough-looking humor when about two months old.

It would come in patches and went almost all over her in that way. The places were like ringworm and as they would spread they would turn red and make sores and itch. The trouble went to her face and disfigured her badly. Her clothes irritated it.

"I used several different kinds of salves that were recommended for the trouble and ——— and ———, but they did no good. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I got a sample and in one night's time I could see a change in the redness and in two days the place would be nearly gone. I sent and got one twenty-five-cent cake of Cuticura Soap and two fifty-cent boxes of Cuticura Ointment, which cured my baby. She was well in three months." (Signed) Mrs. Bertha Sawyer, Oct. 11, 1912.

Why not have a clear skin, soft white hands, a clean scalp and good hair? It is your birthright. Cuticura Soap, with an occasional use of Cuticura Ointment will bring about these coveted conditions in most cases when all else fails. Sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

JESSE ARMISTEAD IN RACE FOR ALDERMAN

Prominent Labor Leader Formally Announces for Seventh Ward Representative

Jesse W. Armistead president of the local printers' union, one of the most widely known labor leaders of Atlanta, has formally entered the race for alderman from the Seventh ward.

Concerning his candidacy, the Journal of Labor contained the following this week:

The Journal of Labor takes pride and pleasure in presenting to the readers of Atlanta the name of Mr. Jesse Armistead for the office of alderman from the Seventh ward.

Mr. Armistead is president of the printers' union, and holds positions of trust and honor in several beneficiary organizations, and is one of the best known men in Atlanta.

The candidacy of Mr. Armistead is in keeping with the opinion long held by the Journal of Labor, to the effect that we as wage-earners should, in common with the voters of Atlanta, aid in the election of men who are not only acceptable in other respects, but eminently qualified for the position to which they aspire. Mr. Armistead is well fitted for a place in the legislative body of Atlanta. He has been accustomed to preside at large deliberative bodies, and a man that is able to think and act under all conditions; a man of courage and conviction.

Mr. Armistead was born and raised in Atlanta, and has been a close student of Atlanta's progress, and his connection with progressive, civic bodies has enabled him to form a clear idea of what would be beneficial to the city.

Mr. Armistead can, in every respect, be commended to the people of Atlanta —a man of sterling character, intelligent; in every way qualified to make, not only an acceptable legislative officer, but will bring to that body an experience and knowledge that will make him valuable.

The Seventh ward is to be commended in presenting to the city at large the name of Mr. Armistead for alderman, and an indorsement of him by the city at large would be the means of encouraging men of like character and ability to allow their names to be used in connection with our city's legislative body.

BAPTIZING TO CLOSE REVIVAL AT BUCKHEAD

The revival meeting at Buckhead will come to a close Sunday night when the ordinance of baptism will be administered to a number of candidates recently uniting with the church.

Evangelist A. V. Pickern did the preaching with power, and the vicinity of Buckhead was greatly stirred. Twenty-five have already united with the church, and the hand of fellowship will be extended to all new members after the baptising Sunday night.

Last Sunday marked a great day in Buckhead, when one hundred and fifty members of the Sunday school, just before the preaching service at 11 o'clock, marched up Peachtree road to the five points and back to the church, singing Sunday school songs.

They carried a large banner and each child a United States flag.

Preceding the services Sunday night will be music by the large choir led by Mr. Fred Torrance.

To reach the baptizing take Buckhead car at postoffice.

PUPILS MUST HAVE ADMITTANCE CARDS

When Atlanta's Public Schools Open September 8, Children Should Be Prepared

Parents of children entering city schools for the first time at the beginning of the fall term, September 8, must procure cards of admittance at the offices of the superintendent during the coming week.

Superintendent of Schools William M. Slaton Saturday morning urged that parents have their children visit the superintendent's office at once and avoid the rush that always marks the opening days of school. On Monday, September 8, no children will be allowed to take up their studies unless they have the proper cards of admittance.

Superintendent Slaton announced also Saturday that pupils in the higher grades who will enter school for the first time must take their entrance examination on Friday, September 5. This is for the purpose of determining which grade the applicants are eligible to.

NEEL GOLD MINING CO. FORMED IN ABBEVILLE

Eight Thousand Dollars' Worth of Stock on Market for Popular Subscription

The Neel Gold Mining company is being organized in Abbeville, S. C. Eight thousand dollars' worth of capital stock in the proposed company has been placed on the market for popular subscription. This amount when paid in, together with sums already in the treasury will be used for the scientific development of the holdings of the corporation, a mile and a half southwest of Parson's Point, and nine miles from Abbeville, S. C.

The new company will take over the mineral rights of the property of W. W. Bradley, together with options and working leases held on adjoining property by Mr. Bradley and his associates. Assays of ores taken from the mine prove, the promoters declare, that the company will pay a handsome dividend. A small part of the cash paid in will be used in the actual purchase of machinery. The rest will be held in reserve for the employment of labor until the workings are on a self-supporting basis. The total stock of the corporation is $20,000, $10,000 of which goes to Mr. Bradley and his associates. These men also have subscribed $2,000 in actual cash.

The holdings of the company are surrounded by a group of mines which are said to have paid handsomely for years The property itself also was worked on a small scale in past years. Even before the Civil war slaves mined gold from shallow shafts. They never worked the mine below the water mark, however, and extracted only enough ore to prove that the veins on the property were rich in precious metal.

One of the working safts on the holdings has been sunk to a depth of seventy feet. The ore is richer and the vein wider than at the surface. Every indication tends to show that the ore will be found in the same quantity deeper in the earth.

The property was worked a few years ago by Alf Lyon, of the Abbeville Cotton mills. He took out over $1,200 worth of ore in a few days. This is cited as an example of the richness of the property by the promoters of the new company. Others duplicated Mr. Lyons' feat, it is said.

NEWS OF THE MOVIES

"Gloom-dispelling, laugh-compelling, comedies that bubble, sorrow chasers, merry bracers, tonic for all trouble," was the reply of Manager Jackson, of the Savoy, when asked about his schedule of pictures to be shown at this theater for the coming week, "and for an eye-opener Monday," he added, "a feature picture play, entitled 'The Better Father,' a soul thrilling story that teaches a great moral lesson and a comedy entitled 'Everybody's Wearing Them,' will be shown."

The popularity of Miss Anna Von Hoffman, the grand opera prima donna, has made it necessary for the Montgomery theater to retain this talented singer for another week. All who have heard her are loud in their praise of her clever work.

In the afternoon Miss Von Hoffman will sing the more lighter operas and in the evening her work will be confined to grand opera selections.

The Vaudette managers regretfully stated that this will be the last week at the theater of the engagement of Jack Lamey and Joe Coombs. For many weeks these popular boys have entertained thousands of people at the Vaudette and they will be missed by all. They have a surprise to spring each day, the kind, as one of them remarked, that will keep their memory fresh in the minds of Atlantians long after they are gone. Picture Jack Lamey giving a burlesque on "September Morn" next Monday, but that is one of the "surprise stunts that they are going to pull off.

The feature picture for Monday is a two-reel Thannhouser entitled "The Ward of the King" and will feature Flo. La Badis and James Cruze.

The Alcazar has engaged an interesting duo, Charles Lowe and Ethel Sterling, who will entertain in clever ragtime stunts of unusual merit with plenty of dash for the coming week. A photo play of two reels, entitled "The Jeweled Slippers," a brilliant detective story of mystery and adventure, and "The Railroad Conspiracy," a stirring drama of the rails, will be the opening bill for Monday—Labor day.

HIS DESIRE TO SMOKE GOT ESTHER IN CELL

Esther Dunnigan, colored, of the male species despite his name, was arrested Friday afternoon by County Policeman R. E. Jackson for stealing a five-cent sack of smoking tobacco from J. Billett at Lakewood. He has been indicted on a charge of larceny and will be tried in the city criminal court.

So far as known, Dunnigan's theft is the smallest recognized officially on court records in Fulton county. He is alleged to have stolen the tobacco on August 23, but was not arrested until several days later when he was recognized by his victim in the vicinity of the latter's store.

OFFICER HASLETT SAVES COMRADE FROM INJURY

But for the prompt action of Call Officer E. B. Haslett Saturday night, both he and all Officer L. W. Evans would probably have been seriously cut by Ed Moss, a negro.

Moss and his father, Jim Moss, were having a row at a house on Tollvard's alley, just off Butler street, north of Decatur street. The police were summoned, and when they arrived Ed Moss drew a vicious looking knife with an eight-inch blade and started for them.

Officer Haslett, who was leading the way, pulled his pistol from his scabbard, and using it as a club, knocked the knife from the drunken negro's hand. Both Moss and his father were locked up and charged with disorderly conduct.

JOURNAL WANT AD Horoscope

SEPTEMBER 1.

Persons born on this date come under a most interesting sign, "Virgo," which is called "the hidden fire of the earth," and their greatest power is in their remarkable magnetism, many of them being magnetic healers, whose very presence in the sick room soothes and strengthens.

When the mental and spiritual side of these people is fully developed, they are powerful characters, especially in public life.

Note the success of such Virgo people as Julia Marlowe, James K. Hackett, William H. Taft, Marcus W. Hanna, all of whom come under the same sign and are governed by the same planet. The principal fault of these people is their desire to dominate and their unwillingness to recognize any fault in themselves.

The Journal Want Ads are under favorable planetary influences for the finding of new homes, new apartments and employment. In store, office and factory will all be reached through The Journal Want Ads.

Some Want Ads are inserted free in The Journal. For charge ads. ask that they be sent for, or telephone th m to Main 2000, or Atlanta 423.

Poultry at Public Exhibitions

IF ever there was a time when the fancy poultry breeders had an opportunity and the advantage of improved breeding than has ever been known before it is at the present time. Nearly every county and state fair throughout, not only Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina, but all other adjoining states has made special efforts and offered large premiums for their poultry departments this year, but most of them have set aside their best building and have secured good superintendents and competent judges to handle these particular departments, and it will give to the general public a better opportunity to study conditions and do more towards educating the people, to the advantages of having fancy poultry than has ever been presented to the general public before.

People who have thoroughbred chickens certainly should begin now to take care of them and put them in condition to exhibit at these shows during this fall and winter. It will not only secure for them a large amount of business for the time being, but will lay a foundation for them to bring their product before the public in a way that means by far more revenue and income hereafter than it does at the present on account of the great scarcity of both poultry and eggs, and on account of the people being in position to buy them. During the next season there will naturally be the greatest demand for fancy poultry and eggs during 1914 that this country has ever seen, and by exhibiting your birds and meeting the public you can rest assured that you will get your share of business for this work during the coming fall and winter, and you cannot afford to stay away from your county and state fair or nearest poultry show, if you have anything to sell or to buy.

It is just as important that you should attend these exhibitions and put yourself in position to know just who has the goods or who wins on them, and you cannot afford from a financial standpoint not to keep your self well posted on each of these things and be in position to get some of the business that is sure to come to you this season. Take your best birds out and show them in the pink of condition, and be sure to carry enough to each show to let the public see a fair representation of what you are doing. It will get business for you that you could never get by staying at home. On the other hand, by attending these shows you will come in contact with those who have better specimens than you have, and if you need new blood you will know where to get it. There are many things and many ways by which one can gain information by attending poultry shows and fairs, if you have anything to sell or buy, and the birds offered this fall at a large number of these exhibitions that will be conducted throughout the entire country will do much towards stimulating and educating the general public, and much good will eventually come from these exhibitions.

The greatest trouble is there is not one-hundredth part enough fancy birds to go in and fill up these exhibitions this coming season, and it will be much easier for the breeder to win this year than it has been during the past two or three years. The man who goes out this fall and does this can certainly get it, and be rewarded for his efforts. The small poultry shows and exhibitions are doing a great work for the general public and are helping to educate and support many people, but few believe that this is being done, but nevertheless it is true.

And as so much better opportunities are now offered for the poultryman and breeders to exhibit their products, and have them passed on by competent people that no one should fail to take advantage of the opportunities offered them, not only to win prizes and make business hereafter, but the general attendance during the exhibitions that they do not have the opportunity to get if they stay at home. Many profitable connections that will spend thousands of dollars in the years to come are and are are secured probably from a small sale first secured at a public exhibition, and it is the cheapest and best way if you can possibly throw yourself in contact or become acquainted with these general public.

These public exhibitions are doing a great work in this respect and should be well patronized during the coming fall and winter.

Yours very truly,

AUTOMOBILE OWNERS, ATTENTION!

No more worry about punctures. PUNCTURE SEALO solves the trouble.

PUNCTURE SEALO injected into your tubes will seal any puncture up to a twenty-penny nail, will preserve and lengthen the life of your tubes and lessen blow-outs by eliminating rim cuts. It will not stick the tubes to the casing, will not gum, become hard or evaporate, is not affected by heat or cold weather, does not interfere with the removal of tubes or with vulcanizing.

PUNCTURE SEALO pays for itself many times a season by preventing punctures and rim cuts.

We charge less for PUNCTURE SEALO than any of our imitators. Good territory open to agents who write at once. We are in business to stay.

SAVE TEMPER, TROUBLE TIME AND TIRES BY USING PUNCTURE SEALO.

Puncture Sealo Co., Atlanta Ga.;
Gentlemen:—I examined your preparation for the stoppage of punctures in rubber, "PUNCTURE SEALO," and have found that it contains no substance injurious to rubber. It has a decided advantage in that it may be used in the coldest weather without freezing.
Yours very truly,

A BETTER HOME

DOES your home give you all the comfort and satisfaction you would LIKE?

THERE'S a big difference in homes. Some have the cozy, inviting atmosphere which makes men want to hurry back. Others are pleasant enough, but they lack something.

THOSE little touches that make houses cozy and "home-like" are not hard to attain. They are not the expensive things. A new chair with the right atmosphere here, a new dresser, a new davenport, a new sideboard, a new china cabinet, a new table—just a few things and your home is transformed. All these and lots of other good things can be had at Ed Matthews & Co. from 15 to 25 per cent cheaper than in the high rent districts.

JUST pay our store a visit and see how easy it is to buy furniture of us. Our Liberal Credit System is at your service.

The NEWS of REAL ESTATE

St. Charles Avenue, Colquitt Avenue, Elmira Place and Other Residence Sales Announced Yesterday — Acreage Tracts to Be Offered at Public Sale at Marietta. Home Sales and Unusual Number of Cash Offers Are Features of Week's Market

RESIDENCE sales were the pronounced feature of the market last week, and a feature of these sales was the large number of cash transactions.

At least a dozen cash offers were made during the week. Three or four have been closed. One of the latter was above $25,000. One offer of $40,000 cash and another of $20,000 were turned down.

This indicates a loosening up of cash funds and an unwillingness on the part of buyers to sacrifice their holdings.

Swaps are still popular, but not every transaction is an exchange, as was the case a while back.

Inquiries were probably three to one as many last week as the week preceding. Agents are being kept busy showing property, even if they don't sell every time.

Residence considerations ranged as high as $10,000. Many of them were on streets where improvements have only recently been made.

REAL ESTATE SALES.

The Martin-Osburn Realty company has sold for S. Whitner to a client 241 St. Charles avenue, a residence on a lot 50x150, for a consideration of $7,000.

The M. C. Kiser agency sold for a client to G. B. Greenwood 25 Colquitt avenue, an eight-room, two-story house on a lot 50x186, for $5,500.

No. 65 Elmira place, a seven-room house on a lot 50x200, has been sold by Mrs. Lucia Carmichael to Mrs. Fannie E. Young, of Augusta, for $5,000 cash. The property is between McLendon street and DeKalb avenue. The transaction was handled by the W. E. Treadwell agency through B. H. Treadwell.

The M. C. Kiser agency sold for J. B. Brook to D. A. Small 21 and 23 Ashland street a six-room house, for $1,200. It was the Kiser agency which sold for C. B. Ashford to Mrs. Jennie Ellendorf a flurt street residence for $7,000.

MARIETTA PUBLIC SALE.

J. B. Jackson will on next Tuesday offer at public sale at the court house in Marietta eighteen acreage tracts, averaging from one to twenty acres each, fronting the Marietta car line.

The tracts are at Turner's crossing and Fair Oaks and are two miles south of Marietta.

ARMY TEAM MAKES FINE RECORD AT CAMP PERRY

International Matches Will Open Monday—Many Foreign Cracksmen

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 30.—The last events of the National Rifle association program were shot here today. Tomorrow will be a day of rest. On Monday the international matches will be begun to continue until Tuesday, September 9.

Today's events included the united service match, open to the regular army, navy, marine and organized militia branches of the military service, and the Casey problem match. Brigadier General Evans, commander of the camp, and Mons. D. Merillon, of France, president of the International Union of National Rifle associations, have exchanged formal felicitations over the progress of the matches.

Practically every foreign shooter will be on the firing line when the individual matches open Monday.

The first stake of the united service match, the 200-yard surprise fire, ended with the United States army team in first place with a score of 922 points. Other scores were:

United States marine corps, second, 914; United States navy, third, 903; National Guard, fourth, 880.

By making a fine spurt in the skirmish stage, the last of the event, the United States army team, led by Captain R. H. Allen, today won the united service match. The final score of the winning team was 4,414. The United States marine corps was second with 4,409; the United States navy third with 4,358, and the national guard fourth with 4,269.

At the conclusion of the third stage the 1,000-yard slow fire, when the marine corps team had taken the lead with a score of 2,705, and the navy had jumped from third to second with a score of 2,691, the chances of the army, which had slumped from first to third with a score of 2,669, appeared to be dwindling. However, in the last stage, the army by making a run of 1,745 regained the lead.

The other scores in the skirmish fire were:

Marine corps, 1,704; navy, 1,667; national guard, 1,610.

The tabulated scores of the four teams were:

	200-yard slow fire.	600-yard slow fire.	100-yard surprise fire.	Skirmish	Total.

BUTTS COTTON SUFFERS FROM LACK OF RAIN

JACKSON, Ga., Aug. 30.—Need of a general rain throughout Butts county is beginning to be felt. Complaints of damage to cotton from the dry days are beginning to be heard. Late gardens and truck have been injured seriously by the dry weather.

Following the heavy rains of a few weeks ago there have been a dry spell of several days, during which time not a single general rain has fallen, though there have been local showers over the county. Just how much damage has been done to the cotton crop in this county is problematical, but unless there is a general shower soon the situation may become serious.

GERMANY AND AMERICA CLASH ON THE WATER

Only International Yacht Race This Year in American Waters Comes Monday

(By Associated Press.)

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Aug. 30.—The only international sailing yacht race in American waters this year will take place off here next week in the fifth German-American Seawolf boat contest. As in former years, the two countries will be represented by teams of three boats each, selected with much care and manned by expert Corinthian sailors.

The challenging fleet is composed of the Germania I, owned by his Imperial and royal highness, Crown Prince William, of Germany; the Serum, owned by Weldemar Tietgens, of Hamburg, and the Wittelsbach X, owned by Christof Ait, of Berlin.

The defenders are the Cima, owned by Guy Lowell, of Boston; the Ellen, owned by Charles P. Curtis, of Boston, and the Sprig, owned by John L. Saltonstall, of Boston.

The races will be sailed in Massachusetts bay. The courses will be alternately windward and leeward and triangular, the former being twelve miles, or twice to the outer mark, three miles from the start and return. In the other course the sides of the triangle will be two and one-half miles and the yachts will sail twice around.

The sport will start on Monday an hour before noon and the races will be held on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday of next week and on the Monday of the following week, provided no postponements are necessary through lack of wind, there being a five-hour limit on each race.

The owner of the yacht that first wins three races or which wins the fifth race in the series, will receive a massive silver cup for which President Wilson stands as sponsor, while the second prize, awarded on points, is given personally by Governor Foss, of Massachusetts.

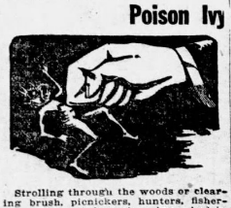
Look Out For Poison Ivy



Strolling through the woods or clearing brush, picnickers, hunters, fishermen—look out for poison ivy. And in the meantime keep your blood pure by using S. S. S. If your skin is rough with eczema, pimples or any other eruption, S. S. S. stimulates the fine network of blood vessels in the skin to dry up and heal all sore spots.

S. S. S. will do this positively. It dominates the principle of osmosis, stimulates the cells of the skin to select their own nutriment from the blood, made pure and healing by the wonderful medicinal ingredients of this famous blood purifier. It is a safe remedy, as it contains no minerals, and yet its action is a marvel.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. The Swift Laboratory in Atlanta, Ga., prepares this famous blood purifier, and you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend a substitute. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address the Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Company, 186 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

DOUBLE DEALS CHARGED TO SULZER BY GLYNN

Declares He Was Requested by Sulzer to Take Confidential Message to Tammany

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Double dealing was imputed to Governor Sulzer in his direct primary campaign by Acting Governor Martin H. Glynn today. Mr. Glynn declared that just prior to the opening of his direct campaign, Governor Sulzer requested him to convey privately to Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, th assurance that "he must not pay any attention to what Mr. Sulzer might say on the stump regarding direct primaries," as what he would say on the stump would be considered to be good for himself and the party.

Mr. Glynn said that he was further requested by Mr. Sulzer to "assure Mr. Murphy that when the campaign was over, Governor Sulzer and Mr. Murphy could get together and fix up matters to their mutual satisfaction."

This happened, Mr. Glynn explained, just before Mr. Sulzer made his first speech on direct primaries. Mr. Glynn said he "positively refused to take any such message or to have anything to do with the matter."

According to the acting governor, this is the "only time that Mr. Murphy's name was ever mentioned in an interview between Mr. Sulzer and Mr. Glynn."

WORLD RECORD IS MADE AT CAMP PERRY SHOOT

George W. Chesley Makes Run of 224 Out of Possible 225 on 800-Yard Range

(By Associated Press.)

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 30.—George W. Chesley, of New Haven, Conn., made a world's record on the rifle ranges here today, when, in the Palma match elimination shoot, he made a run of 224 out of a possible 225 on the 800-yard range. His total in the elimination shoot on the 800, the 900 and the 1,000-yard ranges was 438. This places him first in the line-up in the final tryout, which will be held next week.

Private J. S. Stewart, of the Massachusetts cadets corps, also established a record for a nineteen-year-old boy when he scored a total of 438 in the elimination shoot, which places him in second place for the final tryout next week.

The other ten sharpshooters of the United States who will take part in the final tryout are Second Lieutenant Fred R. Daniels, Second infantry, Massachusetts; Captain K. K. V. Casey, Pennsylvania; Lieutenant Colonel C. B. Winder, Ohio; Lieutenant L. W. Weller, Jr., marine corps; Captain E. W. Eddy, Ohio; Second Lieutenant Robert Sears, First United States infantry; Sergeant J. T. Lawless, Fifth infantry, Massachusetts; Captain C. H. Emerson, Sixth Ohio; C. G. Duff, Texas, and First Sergeant James H. Wolford, Fourth company, coast artillery reserve, Oregon.

Four teams of three men each from the United States infantry and marines, took part this afternoon in the Casey problem match. The result of the shoot has not been given out.

This match was held on the 300-yard range in stages as a skirmish run, each contestant having ninety rounds of ammunition. The targets represented a platoon of infantry firing, and the shooters were supposed to be defending themselves.

Chaplain Thomas J. Dickson, of the Sixth field artillery, will hold memorial services Sunday for Francisco Zegarra Ballon, of the Peruvian team, who was accidentally shot and killed Thursday by a teammate.

CLAYTON'S CASE MAY CAUSE EXTRA SESSION

If Senator From Alabama Is Not Seated, Governor Will Have to Convene Solons

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 30.—If Henry D. Clayton is not seated, Governor O'Neal must call an extra session of the Alabama legislature to provide the machinery for selecting a federal senator, in the opinion of those intimate with the present sieuation.

While things look dark for the seating of Mr. Clayton, all hope is not lost. The "faithful" here still see a glimmering ray and there is yet one other plan, it is said, which may result in the seating of Mr. Clayton. This plan, however, is known only to those interested in Mr. Clayton at Washington.

Should the senate decline finally to recognize Mr. Clayton, it will be because it thinks that the selection of a senator should be authorized by the legislature, and no other course will be left them, it is believed, but for Governor O'Neal to assemble the legislature, unless he would choose to allow the vacancy to run on until early in 1915.

Liberal Buying Overcame Heavy Selling And Active Market For Grains

In Addition to Buying of Corn by Shorts, the Market Was Strengthened by Higher Cables—Wheat Was Helped by Rise in Corn

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—All grains advanced today, almost in spite of the anticipation of the two-day holiday—Sunday and Monday (Labor day)—creating a strong and active market. Corn, the most active of the pits, made a net gain of 1-4 to 5-8 to 2-4c. Wheat rose 1-8 to 1-4 to 1-2 to 5-8c, and oats finished with an upturn of 1-8 to 1-2 to 5-8c. Provisions closed irregular, 12 1-2 to 15c lower to 15c advance.

In addition to buying of corn by shorts, the market was strengthened by higher cables by estimates that the year's crop would show a shortage of 488,000,000, as compared with last years output, and by the fact that offerings here comparatively limited.

September quickly advanced to 73 and December to 69 1-8c. Both options showed firmness and except for a few small reactions following profit taking sales, values held up finely all day, closing at or near the top.

Firmness of cash corn also held futures. Some experts predicted that corn prices next winter and spring will break all records.

Wheat was helped by firmness of corn after a rather easy opening on weaker cables and reports of favorable weather. A feature of wheat trading was changing of large holdings of September to December. This helped support prices for the deferred months and yet it did not materially depress the near option, as there was renewed talk of considerable export business in prospect. Primary arrivals today were 1,101,000 bushels, against 1,821,000 last year. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equalled 1,097,000 bushels.

Oats were helped by firmness of other grain but trade was not large.

Provisions were dull and lower except in pork, which scored a 15c advance in the September delivery, owing to covering by shorts.

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW.

Bradstreet's Review says:
"In some respects trade reports suggest something like irregularity. Western advices indicate reports of record crops, presumably a relief from the effects of crop failure in fields, but at the same time they proclaim that trade is equal to or in excess of that done at this time last year, when operations certainly were growing. On the other hand, the more important eastern markets, particularly those having to do with textiles, display more caution. Here trade has enlarged and mills, instead of making additions, are insisting upon higher prices.

"Incidentally there are few dissenting notes as to the outlook for fall trade and advices as to low stocks are well nigh unanimous; but, as before stated, conservatism is likely to be practiced in sections where crops fall short of earlier expectations.

"Wheat, including flour, exports from the United States and Canada for the week ending Aug. 28 aggregate 7,062,180 bushels, against 3,540,124 last year."

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

GRAIN GOSSIP

Chicago Inter Ocean says: Wheat is regarded as in a rut by most traders; the investment confident of lower prices, while the bulls are not looking for prices to go any better than liquidation will permit. Corn is regarded by the best corn traders as if the market has grown stale for the time being, and that it should have a good break.

Kansas City says corn and winter region bulls the show no rain is coming; Missouri and Oklahoma. Temperatures in Kansas 92 to 99; Oklahoma 92 to 99; Missouri 91 to 96.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say:

Corn—Despite the weaker market, though much depends on the volume of liquidation still to take place in the September delivery. We are of the opinion that a good part of such liquidation has already been accomplished.

Wheat—Continues to show strong features on all ill-ife setbacks.

Oats—The market is showing a somewhat firmer undertone, which would indicate that liquidation has been pretty thorough.

Provisions—We are inclined to think that prices have had break enough.

Chicago Tribune: We have been big buyers of corn; selling scattered.

Grain bee: Fair to warm.

Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota and eastern Dakota—Fair to fair tonight and Sunday, cooler. Dakotas and Nebraska—Cloudy generally, tonight and Sunday cooler.

Armour Grain company buying December wheat; cash corn scattered.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

SEPTEMBER sounds the ringing of the school bells and in a few weeks study will claim the morning hours of the school and college set.

While numbers of Atlanta girls are planning their wardrobes for boarding school other girls busy throughout the day in shop or factory are looking forward to the opening of the night school.

The night school is not a charity institution but is a part of the regular public school system, teaching the grammar school course and shorthand and typewriting.

Mrs. Oscar Gamble is principal, the teachers including Miss Eva Motes, Miss Rosa Sugarman and Mrs. Mabel Mather. The classes are held in the Emory-Steiner building and will begin with the other schools on Monday, the 8th, at 6:45 o'clock, a simple nourishing dinner to be served before the study hours begin.

The term ending last June closed with an enrollment of one hundred and sixty pupils, an earnest of the need and appreciation of such a school.

The attendance is an inspiration to boys and girls whose school days have come as a matter of course—sometimes as an unpleasant task, with little thought that education is a privilege which leads to success and usefulness in the fuller days of their manhood and womanhood.

Heat Very Trying to Women's Nerves

They Neglect their Bowels and the Poisons Vitiate the Blood.

Hot weather has a very weakening effect on women. They are too languid to exercise, and as a result have appetite only for foods that seem light and tasty, such as salads and other cold concoctions. But these frequently produce indigestion, and with it comes constipation.

It is especially in hot weather that women should keep up the highest standard of health, for it is necessary to have strength to resist the heat. The first essentials are good digestion and regular bowel movement, and then good red blood and steady nerves will follow. The best way to obtain these is not by an over-indulgence in fruits, which often are not ripe, or over-ripe, and hence are dangerous, but in the use of a gentle and pleasant-tasting bowel stimulant like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Use it tonight and your constipation, indigestion and sick headaches will vanish by morning.

Mrs. Henry Moeller, 2958 Lee Ave., Chicago, uses it herself and gives it to her children, and Mrs. A. C. Caldwell, Denver, Colo., was once pale and sallow-looking, but now has a pretty complexion, and naturally they are great believers in the value of Syrup Pepsin as a seasonable laxative-tonic. It can be obtained of druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter size for family use. Its tonic properties make it an ideal laxative for women and children. You will never again use strong cathartics, purgatives and salts after trying Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

For Music Teachers

Brenau has a prestige as a training school for music teachers second to no other institution in the South.

BRENAU Conservatory has probably educated more music teachers, who are now occupying responsible and remunerative positions, than any other institution in the South.

THE recent addition to the faculty of Dr. Henry G. Hanchett as Principal of the Normal Department still further enlarges the opportunities for young women who desire to secure the very best training. Dr. Hanchett is one of the best known teachers in America today, and the fact that he is willing to undertake the work of teacher training in this institution is another evidence of the fact that Brenau is recognized as one of the foremost institutions for the study of music in America.

DR. Hanchett has made many successful Concert tours of America and has done perhaps more than any other living man to popularize classical music. He is not only a performer of rare artistic finish but an entertaining lecturer as well, and a distinct feature of all of his recitals is the careful explanation of all the distinguishing characteristics of the numbers which he plays on the piano or the pipe organ, in the playing of which he is equally skilled.

DR. Hanchett first outlined a course in musical pedagogy and analysis when a member of the faculty of the Metropolitan Conservatory of Music in the city of New York in 1893, and it is a development of this course which he will give at Brenau during the session beginning September 11, 1913, and which he will probably repeat in the summer session beginning in June 1914.

THE addition of Dr. Hanchett to the faculty undoubtedly gives Brenau the most distinguished coterie of musicians in the South. In addition to Dr. Hanchett the faculty includes Otto Pfeffenkorn who has been head of the piano department for a dozen years, J. T. Sinnette and Benj. F. Havens who came with Dr. Simmons from Shorter College, Bruno Michaleis, a native of Leipzig and graduate of the famous Royal Conservatory there, and several others. The vocal department presided over by Mrs. Lessie Southgate Simmons will maintain its usual high standard. Mrs. Simmons has a rare gift of inspiring her pupils with the utmost enthusiasm and she is ably assisted by Miss Mary Helen Howe, Ellmer Zoller and Miss Nellie Laing.

THE normal and theoretical course which will be offered by Dr. Hanchett and Mrs. Simmons during the year beginning September 11th, affords unparalleled opportunities for Southern teachers, and for students who are preparing to teach.

THE normal course will embrace a general discussion of the application to musical pedagogy of the following subjects: Sensation; The Brain; Nervous Activity; The Unconscious Man; Habit; Consciousness; Attention; Perception and Conception; Memory and Association; The Sense of Time and Space; Reasoning; Impulse, Instinct, Volition, Expression; methods of securing Attention; methods of developing Musical Intelligence; methods of enhancing Emotion; methods of improving Action; the Body as the Organ of the Soul; Education is Drawing-out; Aim and End of Teaching.

IN CONJUNCTION with this specifically pedagogical course teachers are offered the course in Musical Analysis, Musical History, Harmony and Salfeggio.

AS PREPARATION for self-sustaining life work a course in music and musical pedagogy at Brenau affords opportunities which cannot be found elsewhere in the South.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

NUMBERS of Atlanta people are planning to attend the opening of the National Conservation exposition in Knoxville Monday. Mrs. J. Y. Johnston, Mrs. William S. Shields and Mrs. David S. Chapman, who was Miss Sue Johnston, will give the first formal social affair of the two months' exposition, a luncheon to which four hundred invitations have been issued, a number to Atlantians.

Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Shields and Mrs. Chapman form the capable committee in charge of the Van Wright, the attractive house boat restaurant which will be such a delightful part of the National Conservation exposition in Knoxville. Under their direction the Van Wright is engaged for some important social function every day and evening of September and October, though of course its size permits many entertainments at one and the same time.

The opening affair to which invitations have been issued as above is a luncheon for some four hundred guests in honor of the president of the exposition, Mr. T. Ashby Wright, and his charming wife, who was a Miss Tarwater, of Rockwood, and the president of the woman's board, and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Horace VanDeventer.

Governor Hooper, attended by his staff, will formally open the exposition on September 1 at 10 o'clock in the morning and the exercises will be followed by a reception for Governor and Mrs. Hooper in the greenery. At 1 o'clock on the house boat the governor will introduce little Miss Dorothy Wright, who will break a bottle of champagne on the bow of the house boat and christen it "Van Wright."

Immediately luncheon will be served. Mrs. Johnstone, Mrs. Shields and Mrs. Chapman are three of the most popular and most prominent matrons in Knoxville, and they will make the event a brilliant inauguration of gaiety at the exposition.

IN EVENT of general interest was that which took place in Gainesville Wednesday morning when the C. Sanders chapter, Children of Confederacy, unveiled the memorial fountain erected by them in memory of the late Colonel C. C. Sanders, one of the distinguished generals of the war between the states.

The memorial is the first one ever erected by a chapter of Children of Confederacy and also the first public confederate monument on federal ground. It stands on the lawn of the postoffice and just in front of the place where a statue of Abraham Lincoln is being erected.

The presentation to the family and city was made by Miss Katherine Sadler, who organized the children's chapter.

The speech of acceptance for the family was made by Dr. A. W. Van Ness, of Rome. The fountain is four feet in height. At the four corners are marble columns, fifteen feet in height, which support the foundation on which rests the life-size statue of Colonel Sanders. The front of the fountain bears the words: "Christopher Columbus Sanders, 1840-1908, patriot, soldier, colonel Twenty-fourth Georgia regiment volunteer infantry, first corps, army of northern Virginia, C. S. A.," and at the side, facing the entrance of the postoffice, is the inscription: "Erected by the C. C. Sanders chapter, Children of the Confederacy." Carved on the front is: "He climbed to God on little children's love."

The children of the Confederacy, dressed in white with sashes of red ribbon and carrying a garland of evergreens formed a circle about the fountain. At the close of Miss Dozier's speech, the six grandchildren of Colonel and Mrs. Sanders, Frances, Lou Price, and Sanders Hinton, of Athens, and Maynard, Helen and Amontine Sanders, of Gainesville, unveiled the fountain.

SIGNOR DOMENICO BRESCIA is an interesting acquisition to musical circles. Signor Brescia is a native of Milan, the home of Italian opera, where he studied under world-famous masters and where later he was a teacher of operatic roles, some of his pupils being the principal singers and stars of the royal opera. Signor Brescia has had a wide experience in New York, where he has been before coming to Atlanta. While here he will be connected with the Atlanta Conservatory. Madam Bescia, herself a gifted musician and linguist, to have charge of the conservatory's department of languages. The institution of the new department of opera will be an interesting feature of the conservatory work and Signor Bascia, representative of "bel canto," composer of opera, voice specialist and opera conductor, is eminently fitted to the undertaking.

Dances for the most part have been the only events of the week except for a few informal affairs at which the younger set have been entertained. The Athletic club's country home at East Lake has instituted a mid-week dance, the first being an event of Wednesday evening, the dances to be repeated throughout the coming month.

The Thursday evening dinner dance at the Capital City Country club always assembles a congenial number of members, many of whom go out earlier in the day for golf or swimming, both exercises making the dinner which follows doubly enjoyable.

The week closes with the usual dinner dances at the East Lake club and the Piedmont club, where throughout the week the members meet for afternoon tea on the cool terrace.

The past week has also seen the return of a few of the people who have been missed from the circle of stay-at-homes during the past few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Manley, who have been at Greenbrier Sulphur Springs, have returned. Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Arnold, who have spent August in Virginia at Hot Springs and the old Sweet returned Saturday. Miss Mary Helen Moody has returned from Toxaway, Miss Marion Goldsmith, from Rangeley Lakes, where she was the guest of Mrs. Orton Bishop Brown. Mrs. George McKenzie has returned from Atlantic City and New York.

News has come from the travelers abroad of their early return. Mrs. R. C. Congdon and Miss Mazie Thurston sailed Saturday for home. Miss Thurston to remain in New York and Mrs. Congdon to come direct to Atlanta. Judge and Mrs. Ernest Kontz, who have been on the continent for several months are now in Ireland and will arrive home at an early date.

Mrs. Barbour Thompson will sail for home this month. Mrs. Wayne Wilson, who has been in Berlin through the summer will return on the 17th. Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCandless to remain in Europe until November.

* * *

THE recent return of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Von Skibinsky has been of notable pleasure to their Atlanta friends. Mr. Von Skibinsky is professor of violin at Cox College Conservatory and is one of the most widely known men of his profession in the south. During the summer he has appeared in concert at a number of the leading cities of Russia, Germany and Holland and is even better known on the continent than in America. He is a composer as well as a concert artist and a number of his own selections will be included in a recital at which he will be heard at an early date.

THE marriage of Miss Adeline Thomas and Mr. James Leech Wells was of interest to a wide circle of friends, taking place Wednesday afternoon.

The wedding was a quiet one, the plans having been changed on account of the recent death of Mr. Wells' father.

The ceremony was solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Alice Muse Thomas, and witnessed by only the family and most intimate friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Wells left after the service and are at Asheville for a short stay. They will spend several weeks on their return with Mrs. Thomas and after October 1 will be at home at 2 Barksdale, drive, Ansley Park.

The home was formerly owned by Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sheridan and in its quaint architecture suggests the artistic taste of its builders and the appreciation of Mr. and Mrs. Wells in its purchase.

Its furnishing is the wedding gift of the bride's mother and when finished it will be one of the most attractive and complete of the many new homes which have been bought or built by Atlanta's recent newly-weds.

A NUMBER of parties were given during the week in compliment to Miss Louise Broyles, who left Saturday for New York, and will sail from there early next week for Paris where she will spend the winter at Miss Yeatman's school.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Margaret McCarty was hostess at tea at the Piedmont club in compliment to Miss Broyles, and Wednesday Mrs. George Brine entertained at a beautiful luncheon at the Piedmont club in compliment to the young guest of honor.

The idea of "bon voyage" was seen in all the details of the luncheon, the centerpiece of the table was a floral boat which rested on an oblong mirror fringed with smilax, and the place cards were inscribed with good wishes for the voyage.

An event of Friday at the Piedmont club was the luncheon given in honor of Miss Broyles by Miss Dorothy Arkwright.

Luncheon was served on the porch and twelve young girls were guests of the occasion.

Brightly colored zinnias formed the center of the table. The place cards were dainty water colors and ices and bon bons continued a lovely color note of pink.

Mrs. Preston Arkwright chaperoned the party, which included Miss Louise Broyles, Miss Rebecca Hill, Miss Katherine DuBose, Miss Dorothy High, Miss Dorothy Barman, Miss Josephine Mobley, Miss Helen McCarty, Miss Margaret McCarty, Miss Margaret McKee, Miss Jessie McKee, Miss Mary Brown and Miss Dorothy Arkwright.

Miss Mary Brown, who will leave this week for Vassar, is another attractive school girl who has been entertained prior to her departure. Miss Brown having been the honor guest at the dinner at which Miss Jessie McKee was hostess at the Country club Thursday evening.

THE Lipscomb cottage, at Tallulah Falls, has been the scene of many house parties and bright gatherings during the summer months.

A merry party of young people including a number of girls from a distance, went up Friday to the falls to be the guests of Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb and Miss Virginia Lipscomb for a week's stay.

Among the young girls who are members of the house party are several of Miss Lipscomb's classmates who were at college during the past winter in Staunton, Va.

Miss Sallie Elaine Deatheradge, of Kansas City, arrives Tuesday to join the party and Miss Gladys Teague, of Augusta, who was a visitor of the early summer when she was delightfully entertained during her stay is one of the guests.

Miss Lipscomb's guests include Miss Gladys Teague, of Augusta; Miss Sallie Elaine Deatherage, of Kansas City; Miss Nelle Phinizy, of Athens; Miss Helen McCarty, Miss Mary Peabody, Mr. Clark Howell, III, Mr. Howell Foreman, Mr. Robert Forrester, Mr. Charles Caverly, Mr. Carl Selple, Mr. Edwin Broyles, Mr. Perrin Nicolson, Mr. Joe Blount, Mr. William Dickey, Mr. John Lucas, Mr. George Harrison, Mr. Theodore Smith, Mr. Henry McGowan, of Augusta, and Mr. Albert Rayle, of Lexington, Ky.

Beck-Batterman Wedding Interesting Afternoon Event

The wedding of Miss Margaret Beck and Mr. Lyle K. Batterman was a beautiful event of Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Judge and Mrs. Marcus Beck, on Columbia avenue.

The porch was enclosed and transformed for the occasion with palms and growing plants into a garden of blooming plants. Wall pockets held brightly colored garden flowers and jardinieres were filled with asters and zinnias.

The living room, where the ceremony was performed had green and white for its color motive, which was evidenced in the drapery of smilax which covered the walls, and in the improvised altar of palms, and in the mantals banked with white roses.

Snowy candles in Russian branch candlesticks illuminated the scene.

The bride entered with her father, and wore her going-away gown which was a tailored model combining shades of gray, a small close-fitting black hat trimmed with aigrettes completing the costumes, and she carried bride roses.

Her maid of honor and only attendant was her sister, Miss Rachel Beck, who wore a gown of white net combined with shadow lace and carried an armful of pink roses.

Mr. Russell was best man.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. Landrum and was witnessed by the immediate family and close friends.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Batman left for a wedding trip to Dakota and upon their return will make their home in Inman Park.

"I could not keep away," she said. "My intention after leaving Corfu and Albania was to go to Italy, but I simply had to come back to this place, where I had known such dreadful suffering.

"My plans? I have no plans. Dancing seems impossible. I cannot endure even the sound of music. I have been released from my South American engagement.

"Sorrow, I have learned, means immobility. Nothing now interests me much, except the fate of those poor women and children at Santa Quarranta, in Albania, whom my brother and I are trying to keep alive.

"Near Santa Quarranta forty villages were ruined by the retreating Turks. I have been looking after 200 women and 200 children who need food and schools and shelter.

"To build a model school house and support these poor Albanians through the winter we need about $20,000."

Princess Amelia Rives Troubetzkoy, the authoress and former wife of John Armstrong Chanler, began suit in the New York supreme court Tuesday to recover $3,000 damages from Charles P. Du Vergey, of Coxsackie, N. Y., as the result of a riding accident in Virginia, for which, she says, the defendant and his automobile were directly responsible.

On October 29, 1912, according to the complaint of the princess, she was riding horseback with her husband, Prince Pierre Troubetzkoy, and her sister, Miss Landon Rives, on a road in Virginia, near Cobham, the present home of Chaloner. when an automobile, in disregard of her warning signal, rushed by at full speed, striking her horse and thereby causing her to be thrown. The injury to the horse she places at $1,000. Her fall, she says, decreased her literary output in the sum of $2,000.

After the car had flashed by the princess her party telephoned to surrounding towns, and learned that the number of the automobile was 86,757, New York. By communicating with the secretary of state of New York the identity of the owner was established. Upon information and belief the princess states that the owner was the driver of the car at the time of her accident.

(By the Countess of Blankshire.)

LONDON, Aug 20.—Denmark Hill, which has long been associated with royalty, was en fete for the opening of the New King's College hospital, which has been removed from the city to the more salubrious neighborhood. The king and queen paid a private visit and performed the opening ceremony, his majesty uttering the words, "I now have great pleasure in declaring the King's College hospital to be opened, and I trust that the splendid work of this great hospital may continue for many, many years in its new home."

Denmark Hill was once th eresidence of an ancestor of Queen Alexandra, Prince George, of Denmark, who was husband of Queen Anne, and lived in a mansion near Coldnarbour-lane, and which was standing so lately as the year 1970.

The king and queen was received at the entrance to the hospital by the Hon. W. F. D. Smith and Lady Esther Smith, the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of Southwark, and Lord Metheun, who is vice president of the institution. Their majesties were attended by Lady Desborough, Lord Acton and Lord Charles Fitzmaurice, and entered the hospital between lines of nurses and sisters, who formed a guard of honor. There were many presentations, and after Miss Edith Smith had handed to her majesty a bouquet of carnations, a number of purses were presented. Some little incidents brought a ready smile of amused pleasure to the lips of the king and queen, especially when a small boy about three years of age daintily handed his purse to Queen Mary, and then boldly thrust forward his hand to shake hands with the king.

The crown princess of Rumania has been made colonel of the Fourth regiment of Rochiori, and looks smart in her new uniform. Admirers would say that with her October had much influence. She was born in the opal month, and so were her elder son and eldest daughter. And she is amusing and witty, a clever talker, a good musician, and plays the violin extremely well, like her father, the late duke of Saxe-Coburg. And she likes sport and outdoor life, is a good whip and a first rate horsewoman. She dresses extremely well, and is splendidly served by the dressmakers. Her friends relate that she has a fancy for pinning on her clothes as she believes that her gowns set more smartly when pinned than when sewn. She collects turquoises, and has some fine specimens.

During the past week the king and queen paid an unexpected visit to Broadstairs to see their sons, Prince Henry and Prince George, where they are at school, and arrangements were then completed for the entrance of Prince John as a pupil after the summer vacation. The school is St. Peter's, Broadstairs, and the educational facilities offered there, together with the care and attention bestowed on the health of the princes, are greatly valued by their majesties, as is evidenced by their entrusting yet another so... and the Benjamin of the royal family, to the care of the headmaster. Prince John has just had a very charming photo taken by Ernest Brooks, where he is depicted seated in a high chair, richly carved, and wearing a white suit with a dark knotted tie.

Their majesties of Spain were staying at the Ritz, the hotel which they always make their headquarters when visiting the metropolis. Queen Victoria Engenie is not looking at all as well as in former years, and appears to be slighter, but no doubt the change of air will greatly benefit her majesty. King Alphonso has left Cowes for Santander for the regatta there, in which he takes an active interest. During the week their majesties were in town they attended at the theater on the greater number of evenings. On the night of their arrival the palace was honored by their presence, and after her performance Anna Pavlova was presented to the distinguished visitors. The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," at the St. James theater, was also visited by the queen, when her majesty was accompanied by her mother, Princess Henry of Battenberg, her brothers, Prince Leopold and Prince Alexander of Battenberg, and by Prince Arthur of Connaught.

Princess Henry of Batenberg, prior to her return to town in order to meet the king and queen of Spain, has been making a stay of short duration in the Isle of Wight as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Oglander at Nunwell Park, from which place she motored to witness the first contests for the silver shield which she has presented for the annual competition among the Women's volunteer detachments of the Red Cross society. Princess Henry was immensely interested in the display given, and congratulated all the competitors on their proficiency.

The duchess of Albany was attended by Lady Katherine Meade and Captain Edward Seymour on the occasion of her visit to Slough in order to distribute the prizes gained by the scholars of the British orphan schools. The headmaster of Eton, the Rev. the Hon. Edward Lyttleton, D. D., presided, and an interesting cermony was the unveiling by the duchess of a portrait of Mr. Algernon Gilliat, who has given invaluable service to the school during the fifty years he has acted as a director of the board. The portrait was then presented to Mr. Gilliat.

During the week Princess Marie Louise, of Scholewig-Holstein, was the guest at Petwood, Woodhall Spa, of Captain and Mrs. Weigall in order to perform the opening ceremony of a two days' bazar organized in aid of the Lincoinshire Nursing association. During the week a cricket festival was held, and for both events Captain and Mrs. Weigall entertained a large house party. In addition to the names mentioned in our notice of the event last week, there were Lady Margaret Spicer and her daughter, the Earl and Countess of Yarborough, Sir Frederick and Lady Robinson, Sir John and Lady Thorold, Mrs. Montague Thorold, Baroness de Rosencrantz, Lady Constance Allesley and the Hon. R. Stanhope.

There has been considerable alteration and modification of the royal plans for the autumn owing to the fixing of the royal wedding for the early days of October. There will be a large number of foreign royalties present, and their disposal was the largely deciding factor in the choice of a place for the ceremony. Mar Lodge was thought of, but it would have been impossible to house the guests in such more or less restricted space, and the same applied to Sandringham, which place also came in for some consideration. It was finally the decision of the king and queen that London, and London alone, was the most suitable place for the marriage of such a notable pair as the duchess of Fife and Prince Arthur. London affords requisite accommodation for all the exalted personages who undoubtedly will be present and as the Chapel Royal is, of course, quite small, it is anticipated that the royal bride and bridegroom may drive through the streets after the ceremony, so that their good friends the British public may give them sincere greeting.

Also owing to the royal wedding the queen of Norway is expected some weeks earlier than heretofore, and she will be accompanied by Prince Olaf. While in town they will stay at Buckingham palace, but in Norfolk Appleton will still be the residence chosen. It is possible that Queen Alexander may postpone her visit to her native country, if not abandon it altogether for this year. His majesty will adhere to visiting Studley royal for the opening of the shooting season. These plans are, of course, all liable to being again altered. Meanwhile Buckingham palace is being smothered in scaffolding and workmen are reigning supreme whilst the alterations to the facade are being carried out.

Cox College Opening

The formal opening of Cox college and conservatory will take place in the college chapel at 10 o'clock on the morning of September 11. A brilliant program of music has been arranged and several prominent speakers will address the student body. All friends of the college and the higher education of woman are cordially invited to attend. An especially hearty welcome will be extended to former students of this institution who are annually invited to greet the incoming pupils and gather in informal reunion.

Classification of pupils begins on the 10th and all students are expected to report to the college on that day.

The many improvements on the building and grounds are now complete and everything is in order for the opening of school. A larger number is registered for the coming year and it is hoped that the seventy-first session will be the best in all the college history.

New Color Born Here; What Is It?

tlanta aHs Been Selected as the Only City in the South Where a New Color, a Beautiful Color, Commemorative of a Beautiful Picture, Will Be Presented to the Public on an Appropriate Day

Today a new color is born.

It is—well, now, wait a minute.

In the windows of M. Rich & Bros. on Whitehall street, Atlanta, you can see that color today. There is the only place in the south where you will find it—yet. Rich is the first southern store to display it. That distinction is recorded because Porter Bearden, silk and dress goods buyer of Rich's, originated it.

Some weeks ago a certain very beautiful picture was displayed in a certain gentlemen's window on Whitehall street. Hundreds flocked to see it, because its fame had preceded it. Among those hundreds were some prudes who professed to be shocked mightily by the display of human beauty there revealed. Among them also were some minions of the law. These latter looked, and appreciated. Among them, too, was Mr. Bearden. He looked, and looked again, and studied not alone the beauty of line but the beauty of color—for Mr. Bearden is a man whose eyes are keen for that; else he would not be buyer of valuable fabrics in exquisite colorings for a big department store's customers.

The longer Mr. Bearden looked, the more he saw in the delicate hues of the painting's reproduction. The morning mists, the flesh tints, the blue of the rippled water—these appealed to him as an artist. The beauty of the blue grew upon him. And finally there came to him the suggestion of the new color—a color just a bit of a shade darker than the blue of the water in which stands the young lady of the painting, just an infinitesimal fraction stronger.

And the name of that color is "September Morn."

Tomorrow is the first day of September.

When business resumes tomorrow forenoon, the new color, "September Morn," will be on display at M. Rich & Bros.' Co., in silks and chiffons and brocades and all the other fine fabrics that the fair sex costume themselves with to please the eye of mankind.

In New York, in two big department stores, the same color will be revealed tomorrow—but unlike the Atlanta firms, those Gotham merchants will not know the name of it until September morning dawns. It has been kept secret even from them. This is the agreement which was effected many days ago between M. Rich & Bros. Co., of Atlanta, and the manufacturers to whom they imparted their idea—M. C. Migel & Co., of New York.

"Its color is bound to please," says Mr. Bearden. "It suggests the painting, which is one of the most beautiful things I ever saw. We have anticipated a big demand for it, and are prepared to meet its popularity in about everything else except where to buy. Nowhere else can the color be found this season than among the goods manufactured by Migel & Co. It is not even on the 'fairs' syndicate card."

Atlanta's fair ones, therefore, have been accorded a privilege which may be esteemed highly.

Tomorrow they'll be asking each other, "Have you see 'September Morn'?"

And in Rich's window they'll find it.

The mayor and council some time ago signed a contract with the J. B. McCrary company, of Atlanta, for the installation of electric lights. According to contract the lights will be in operation November 1, this year.

IN THE LOCAL PLAYHOUSES

Forsyth, Grand, Bijou and the Lyric Will Present Many Interesting Features for the Season—This Week's Bills at the Various Playhouses Will Be Unusually Strong

At the top, Den McGrath and "The Modest Little Models" from "Mary's Lamb," the opening attraction at the Atlanta theatre, September 3 and 4. Below in the center is Emma Bunting in "The Circus Girl" which opens at the Lyric. To the right is Miss Margurite Lucier with Williard Simms, coming to the Forsyth this week.

Forsyth Headliners Will Break Records.

There are more real headline features on the bill for the Forsyth this week, than have been assembled since the close of the old season at the beginning of summer. All the Keith houses have opened or commence the new season with Labor day, and feature and headline acts take up their campaign that will keep them traveling until summer comes again. Many great star acts have been booked into the Forsyth. Some of the big features that have never been brought south before are on the route and will positively appear at Atlanta's busiest theater.

And as an indication of what all this means, the bill for Labor day week, commencing with matinee performance on Monday, contains some star acts that are going to help wonderfully in setting up an attendance record for the bills of the new season to follow.

The acts have been chosen with a view of starting the season in a regular fashion. There are stars that have helped to make Broadway brilliant and there are others that are going to become acquainted in the fashion that will make them favorites.

There are hundreds and hundreds of people who would like an idea as to the Monday morning rehearsal in a vaudeville theater. Sam Mann figured the idea out a couple of years ago and built an act that was so clever that for two years he has not been able to take a road tour as he has been held in the larger cities. He calls his act, "The New Leader," and it is all about what happens at the Monday morning rush in a vaudeville house. Mr. Mann has a company of players who assume the roles of stage hands and performers. He appears at the leader's stand in the orchestra and his troubles begin.

The act is conceded to be one of the cleverest that has been put in the varieties and has proven to be such a grand novelty that it is a drawing card of more than average strength.

Willard Simms and company will present "Flinders Furnished Flat." This is the funny wall papering stunt that was the headliner of the opening week at the Grand a year ago. Simms is one of the funniest men in vaudeville. He is a natural born comedian and has won more laughs than any other sketch entertainer in the profession; it is hard to think of a performer who could get as many laughs from efforts to post a few rolls of wall paper.

It is assured that Alexander and Scott will get a mighty warm welcome. These clever young men, who hail from the south have become great favorites in the circuits in one of the highest quality character impersonation ideas that vaudeville knows. They have all new songs and have established themselves so well here that they will be drawing cards.

Miss Mamie Elmore, with new songs and some beautiful gowns will make her first vaudeville appearance in Atlanta. Miss Elmore is a clever entertainer. She is original and talented and one of the recognized Keith features sent here as a special attraction.

Art Bowen, the cartoonist, who is also a comedian, of more than ordinary talent, promises a novelty and the Gasch sisters in a gymnastic performance that is going to be worth while will add to the merit of the attraction.

As a feature for the ladies and children, Camille's poodles, a miniature dog circus and one of the prettiest acts in vaudeville will be offered and all in all the Forsyth patrons may expect a bill of unusual entertaining powers.

Stock Company Will Open Bijou Season.

The opening week of the Jewell Kelley stock company at the Bijou has demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that local theatergoers have still a warm feeling in their hearts for melodrama, of the good old fashioned sort that was so popular years ago. From the opening performance Monday afternoon to the closing of the week Saturday night, the little Bijou was packed to its capacity at nearly every performance and the cordial reception that was given the players and the many complimentary remarks that were passed on the play have assured the management that the change of policy was a wise one and that a splendid season and a most successful one awaits the Jewell Kelley Stock company at the Bijou.

For the second week the management announces a play that should prove a most popular success. It is entitled "The Man from the West." From a dramatic standpoint it is one of the strongest of plays and tells one of the most interesting stories that has been given the stage in recent years. The plot deals with the efforts of a clique of conspirators to ruin a prosperous mine owner by depreciating the stock of the San Diablo mine in Wall street. The fight that is made to bold up the price of this stock and the charming love story that is carried through the four acts makes the play most interesting and affords the company exceptional opportunities for good comedy and strong dramatic work. The rehearsals which have been in progress the entire week, demonstrate the splendid capacity of the organization which Jewell Kelley has gotten together for the fall and winter season, and it is confidently expected that "The Man from the West" will make even a greater hit than the first play which was so well received here last week at the Bijou. The story of the "Man from the West" is one that will appeal to every theatergoer. There is not a dull moment from curtain to curtain and the intense dramatic scenes, flavored with good comedy will keep the Bijou audiences interested.

The entire company will be seen in the production including Jewell Kelley, Eddie Black, T. C. McDonough, Earl Higley, Richard Mandell, W. D. Jenkins, Marie Claire, Clare Summers, Rose Morris. Each of the four scenes has been especially painted for this production and will be triumphs of the scenic artists' art.

The entire action of the play takes place in New York City, the first act showing Matthew Lawton's drawing room, where the stock of the San Diablo mine is above par. Act second will be a garret in New York, where the stock of the San Diablo mine falls and its owners are threatened with ruin and poverty. Act three shows Matthew Lawton's office, where the great fight is going on to rescue the stock of the "San Diablo" mine, and act four will be Matthew Lawton's drawing room, where the fight is brought to a successful climax, "The San Diablo" stock soars to 175, the villian is thrown out, and all ends happily. Few plays that have been presented in Atlanta offer such a strong plot or tell a better story than will be unfolded in "The Man from the West."

It is confidently expected that the second week will do much toward establishing the Jewell Kelley company in Atlanta and add thousands of friends to the already long list of patrons of the home. Matinee will be given every afternoon at 2:30 and night performances at 8:30. The box office of the Bijou will be open every morning at 9 o'clock, and seats may be secured for the entire week.

Kinemacolor Will Stay at the Grand.

Kinemacolor has come to the Grand to stay. Never in the life of motion pictures in Atlanta has there been such a keen interest in this class of entertainment. The beautiful natural color pictures have drawn hundreds and hundreds of people to the big theater who had not visited the house since pictures were introduced. These people have found that the theater is delightfully comfortable, that a magnificent picture is being exhibited, that it is the only place to see Kinemacolor and that the exclusive first run regular motion pictures are as good as can be seen in any picture theater.

The regular black and white first run pictures are changed every day. The Kinemacolor subjects are changed every other day and the subjects have been selected with the greatest care that they be of sufficient strength to call attention for more than one day.

The Kinemacolor program for Monday and Tuesday will be "The Struggle," a powerful drama in two reels. This picture is of wonderful interest and its natural color will surely interest. The other feature will be a one reel gem showing motor boat races and the big waves at Brighton Beach. Kinemacolor makes wonderful water pictures. For the next two days the subjects will be a two-reel comedy called, "Keeping Up Hubby," and an educational reel, "Life in Lapland," and for Friday and Saturday the wonderful three-reel feature, "Steam," will be used. This is conceded to be the greatest natural color picture ever made and has had a wonderful run in New York.

Kinemacolor is exhibited at the Grand from 2:30 to 7 p. m. daily at 5 cents, and from 7 to 10:30 daily at 10 cents.

Emma Bunting Will Open Lyric Theater.

Emma Bunting and her company will begin a week's engagement at the Lyric theater tomorrow afternoon, and will at the same time inaugurate the new season at that theater, presenting a three-act play called "The Circus Girl," written by Sydney Grundy.

"The Circus Girl" was originally produced under a different title at the Globe theater, London, and was also given on Broadway by the late Augustin Daly at the theater which still bears his name. It has long been recognized as one of the best samples of rapid fire farce ever written and has been drawn on largely by latter day dramatists, as inspiration for their work—not to mention innumerable vaudeville sketches for which it has been the foundation. Quite likely is it that the late Clyde Fitch took pattern from this play when he wrote the sensational farce, "The Blue Mouse," which received so much criticism but which all agreed to be one of his cleverest plays.

The role of Rose Colombier played by Miss Bunting in "The Circus Girl" is not unlike the heroine of the Fitch play but is said to be without certain features that marked that character.

Miss Bunting will play next week in Atlanta and the following week in Birmingham, and then will open a stock engagement at the Dauphine theater in New Orleans, which is expected to last the entire season. The New Orleans house is the one that was used for the past two seasons for the Shubert road attractions and it is expected that little Miss Bunting will duplicate in the Crescent City the success that has been allotted her on her numerous engagements in Atlanta.

Mr. George Whitaker, Miss Bunting's leading man, on each of her appearances here, remains in that capacity and others in the company are Louis Dean, Sam C. Miller, Jack Ball, Walter Woodall, Charles Houson, Louis Webb, Marie Harcourt, Eva Sargent and Virginia Hadley.

The advance sale of seats already indicates that the little actress will draw large houses to the Lyric next week, and as this will probably be her last engagement in this city for a long while her many friends and admirers will not miss this opportunity of paying her homage.

One of the early bookings at the Atlanta will be the much-talked of musical comedy success, "Little Miss Fix It," coming September 9 and 10. No musical offering in recent years has attracted more attention or earned more favorable criticism than this product of Harry B. Smith and George V. Hobart, which has been generally referred to as a "musical gaiety." It has enjoyed a season's run at the Globe theater, New York, which was followed by an entire summer's engagement at the Chicago opera house, Chicago. The original scenic production as presented during the engagements referred to above will be seen here, and all the song hits of Nora Bayes will be introduced, including "Turn Off Your Ligh Mr. Moon Man," "Staying Out Late," "Love's Wireless" and "I've a Garden in Sweden."

Septembr 12 and 13 will be featured at the Atlanta by the coming of "The Merry Countess," which has to its credit a run of one year in London and six months at the Casino, New York. The score of "The Merry Countess" is acknowledge to be the most exquisite exposition of the delightful Viennese school ever launched in this country. It contains the charming melodic gem, "The Beautiful Blue Danube," and many other immortal Strauss measures that have gladdened the hearts of young and old for two score years or more.

"Mary's Lamb" Will Be In Atlanta on Monday

When ""Mary's Lamb" comes to the Atlanta for the opening of the season Wednesday night, Thursday matinee and night, Atlanta will see one of the most famous musical comedies of the last five years, a musical comedy which has refused to be put on the sheet.

It is Richard Carle's masterpiece, the most successful musical comedy he ever wrote. The present revival has been made under his supervision.

William Pfirrman, who is responsible for "Mary's Lamb," has engaged Den McGrath, the Anglo-American comedian and vaudeville headliner, as star of the piece, and he is eminently fitted to exemplify the Carle brand of humor, which is at its best in this offering, and a cast and chorus in conformity with the importance of the production.

The scenery was painted and built by best scenic studios in New York and is on an elaborate scale; the the costumes are the product of one of the exclusive designers of the smart set's best creations and may be taken as criterions of the latest that Dame Fashion has to offer for the fall.

"Mary's Lamb" tells the humorous story of the martyrdom and emancipation of Leander Lamb. This thoroughly married man is henpecked to the extreme by a jealous and domineering wife, who has told her husband a story of stabbing a former admirer with a knife. This story, aided by constant sight of the knife, which she has had framed and hung in the drawing room, has so worked upon the delicate sensibilities of Mr. Lamb that he no longer dares to call his soul his own, and allows himself to be locked into a room by his wife when she goes out so that he will not fall a prey to any chance fair charmer.

All his attempts in this direction are summarily suppressed by Mrs. Lamb until by accident he discovers that the story which he has believed for twenty years is a falsehood. By confronting his wife with the evidence of her duplicity and by threatening her with exposure he obtains his emancipation.

Not the least of the charm of the piece is the music. The songs, "The Modest Little Model," "Betsy" and "If Number One Met Number Two," are among the best music to be heard in musical comedy.

GRIFFIN

The contest for the occasion was questions with answers beginning with cali, the prize being a can opener. While Miss Nina Jenkins softly played the wedding march little Miss Monter Brown entered the drawing room carrying a big pink bag from which she took tiny scrolls and presented one to each guest. The scrolls were ribbon bound and sealed with a heart. Upon being opened they were found to contain the following proclamation:

"Know ye all, whereas, Odis, son of William, the house of Kendrick, and Leila, the daughter of Barney, the house of Randall, having reached years of discretion and understanding, seek admission into the state of matrimony,

"I, Daniel Cupid, governor of said state, hereby proclaim them candidates for such admission on or after September 1, 1913.

"Written under my hand and seal on this 23d day of August, 1913.

After Vacation Peel Your Discolored Skin

(From Broadway Weekly.)

Women returning from the seaside with browned, reddened or freckled complexions will be wise in immediately talking up the mercolized wax treatment. Weatherbeaten skin has best come off, for no amount of "beautifying" will ever make such skin pretty to look at. The surest, safest, easiest way to shed the despoiled cuticle is with the treatment suggested. Put the wax on before retiring, as you would cold cream, and rinse it off next morning with warm water. Minute particles of scarf skin will peel off day by day, gradually showing the healthy, youthful skin beneath. One ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is enough to make any discolored or spotted complexion clear white and satiny soft. Its action is so gentle no injury is caused and the face shows no trace or its use.

Burning heat, irritating winds and sun are such wrinkle-makers that the daily use of the following astringent tonic lotion at this season is highly advisable: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissoved in witch hazel, 1-2 pt. Used as a face bath this is a splendid wrinkle remover and preventive.—(Advt.)

Pelicans Split Two Games With Crackers

One Bad Inning for "Slim" Love Lost First Game of Double-Header to New Orleans–Bisland's Timely Rap in the Seventh Inning Gave the Second to Crackers

Atlanta broke even with New Orleans in a double-header at Poncey Saturday afternoon. The second game was won by the Crackers with a regular old-fashioned batting rally. Izzy Bisland crashed out a single in the seventh and last inning with the score tied, 3-3, bringing in Smith with the winning run and busting up what had been one of the prettiest batting feats staged at the old park in a long time.

Slim Love, the Mississippi left-hander, lost the first game when he blew with a loud and terrifying detonation in the fifth. He allowed six hits for six runs in that inning, which was enough for the Pelicans to win, as the final score was 7-5.

The Crackers' wrecking crew was right on the job and hit with a gusto. Tommy Long speeded the ball to deep center for two home runs, one in each game, while Harry Welchonce got another when it counted.

The Mobile crowd was losing to Chattanooga while the Crackers were breaking even, and Atlanta advanced to only five full games behind the Gulls. If the Pepper Boys can take their two Labor day games from the Birds, and Atlanta take both from the Pelicans at the same time, Smith can win the pennant by taking the last four games of the season from Mobile here. However, this is a 599-to-1 shot by actual calculation. Anyway it is a safe bet the Crackers will have the satisfaction of finishing second this year, after two years in succession finishing in last place.

Bean to Coach Georgia Nine

Ex-Marist Instructor Will Also Aid With Gridiron Candidates

Joe Bean, formerly athletic instructor at Marist college, is to instruct the University of Georgia baseball candidates in 1914 and during the 1913 football season will act in the capacity of trainer.

The above information has not yet been definitely given out, yet it is just about as sure as anything you know of. Alex Cunningham, the athletic boss at the university, wants Bean and Bean wants to go to the university and as it is understood that the terms are satisfactory to each there is not the least hitch and the signing is only a matter of a few days.

The university has made a most wise move in the landing of Joe Bean. He is an old ball player who knows baseball all the way and above all has the knack of handling men. He demonstrated at Marist college that he is there when it comes to handling ball players and with the big batch of material at Georgia he should turn out a grand team. He makes friends quickly, keeps discipline and knows baseball from every angle, so what is to keep him from succeeding.

At football Bean has never had any experience, yet he is a past master at the art of training and will come in as a big help to Alex Cunningham. The time has come when all football players have to have plenty of physical training so as to make them ready for the hard battles and Bean will take up this line of work with the Red and Black players. Vanderbilt has already adopted the trainer in Owsley Manier and in Bean Georgia will land a man equally as good.

HUMAN TELEGRAPH POLE NEEDS CURVE BALL TO WIN

"Slim" Love Has Everything That Goes to Make Successful Hurler Save the Slants–Washington Boss Promises to Equip Him With a Curve, and Then He Should Prove Major League Star

With a frame that closely resembles a telegraph pole, a pair of arms a couple of yards in length and a true eye Haughton Love, known the southern circuit over as "Slim" Love, is listed in the baseball calendar to eventually become one of the star slabbers of the game. To go out and take a look at this human flatiron building you would never pick him out to be a beisball pitcher, but Manager Clark Griffith, of the Washington club, believes so strongly in Love's future that he has picked him up for use next season.

Love has everything except a curve ball, and what he lackes in curves he more than makes up for in speed, height and reach. And rattle him, well that is just an impossibility. He is from the farm and when you get these exfarmers in the air you are traveling at a clip no one has ever before shown.

The tall Cracker pitcher is the kind who eats baseball, sleeps baseball and plays it the year round. Often he does not have the regulation baseball but there are plenty of rocks down on the plantation in Mississippi and he takes up his spare moments chunking at a rabbit, squirrel or killing chickens. He has just got to be using that old left wing and when it isn't a chicken or bird he is bringing down it is a tree or post that is stopping the alley apples that he flings so swiftly.

"Slim" started to playing baseball when quite a lad. He was raised on a big farm down at Love, Miss., his parents owning something like nine-tenths of this thriving village, and about half of his time "Slim" spent in playing baseball. He could not hit or play a good infield, the distance from his hands to the ground handicapping him in the fielding of ground balls, and so he took up the pitching end of the game. And here is where he has starred.

For a left hander Love has remarkable control. He can throw the ball most anywhere he wishes and can do it with regularity. This is what has enabled him to get away with so many good games without the use of any curves. Right now Love is not a finished pitcher yet he is sure to come fast and eventually will prove a star. He has the sticking spirit and with a good curve to mix in with his speed will make many a batter walk to the bench after looking over three fast ones.

Love began his baseball career only a couple of seasons ago and since that time has fared well. He was first picked up by Bill Bernhard at Memphis and then farmed to Selma from where he was purchased by Atlanta and in turn sold to the Washington club. And Griff says he is going to give Love a curve ball and make him Walter Johnson's side partner.

Atlanta Club Stands Chance To Take Flag

Protested Games Against Mobile Club Likely to Be Thrown Out, Which Will Place Club Within Hailing Distance of the Cracker Clan

Atlanta has a good chance to win the 1913 Southern league bunting.

The discovery of three protests against the Mobile club, none of which have yet been touched and all games of which will most likely be thrown out, places the Mike Finn club much lower in the percentage column than the present figures show and gives Atlanta a corking good chance to take four straight battles here next week and jump into the lead. All three of the protests were filed during the first Mobile-New Orleans series on April 18, 19, 20 and 21 and though they were made in official form have been allowed to be held up in the league headquarters.

The protests against the Mobile club were filed owing to a raised pitching slab which was later admitted by Manager Mike Finn and ordered trimmed down. The protests were filed in legal form, are backed up by affidavits from Managers Frank and Dobbs, Scout Bobby Gilks and Umpires Pat Wright and Bill Hart. This should carry enough force to show that there was something wrong and when the protests are heard, which has now been demanded, it is most likely that the games will be thrown out and the percentage of the Mobile club cut to such an extent that it is possible for the Crackers to jump ahead.

SHOULD DEMAND ACTION.

But for the exceedingly close race there would possibly be no use in demanding that President Kavanagh take up the matter, but with the present close race between Atlanta and Mobile it is essential that it be decided and the directors of the Atlanta club as well as Manager Charlie Frank, of New Orleans, will demand that some action be taken and that right away.

The raised hurling box was on the Mobile ground with the beginning of the season, but was not noticed until th arrival of the New Orleans club on April 18 when Charlie Frank's keen eye detected the big raise and he at once entered protest. He fulfilled every league rule by protesting to both umpires and league president. For four days he protested and as he won but one of the games the three that he lost will most likely be taken from Mobile's won column and will place the team within hailing distance of the Crackers.

When the protest was first made it was claimed by Mike Finn that the rules allowed him a fifteen inch raise and for this reason he had raised his box. This raise, however, has been found to be strictly in violation of the rules and has been so construed by President Kavanaugh, who soon after the start of the season order the the raised boxes in Mobile, Nashville and Chattanooga to be leveled. This order that the boxes be lowered is direct proof that they are against the rules of baseball and as Frank entered his protest properly there is nothing for the league head to do but throw out the games and give Atlanta a chance for the pennant.

To support the claim that the Mobile box was raised in violation of the rules Mike Finn himself, admitted the New Orleans management that he had cut the box three inches following the second protest and he later cut it something like eleven more inches. Frank's claim is also backed up by affadavits from Umpires Pat Wright and Bill Hart, who were in charge of the series, Manager Johnny Dobbs, of Montgomery, who later played on the same field and Scout Bobby Gilks, of Cleveland, who inspected the grounds at the solicitation of Manager Frank.

All the evidence in the case is in the hands of the league officials and though they were filed soon after the opening game of the year they have not been decided. However, now that pressure has been brought to bear they will likely be decided and it is only reasonable to suppose that the games will be thrown out, it being admitted by all concerned that the box was built in violation of the rules.

The Mobile club comes to Atlanta on Tuesday for a series of four games and the matter will likely be decided before that time. In case the games are thrown out, as Frank is confident they will be, it gives the Crackers a chance to make a grand rally and go in the lead and win the pennant.

The facts in the protest are that Frank and Dobbs have both made affadavits that the box was raised, the two umpires in charge of the series have made affadavits to the same effect, Manager Bill Bernhard, of Memphis, has come out with a statement that the pitching box was not in conformity with the rules; Scout Bobby Gilks has stated positively that the box was raised and Finn by cutting it down fourteen inches confessed that it was a violation. Never with all this is does look as if the games won with such a box should be thrown out.

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

Although the Crackers failed to win both games of their double bill with the Pels they gained a half game on the Gulls at that.

The Noogas took Mobile's measure in Saturday's game and helped bring this change about. This leaves five games separating the teams.

There are some protest games which, if they come the Crackers' way, will cut down this lead to three and a half games.

Mobile plays four games with Atlanta, and must have not more than a three and a half games lead on the Crackers at the beginning of that series if the Crackers want a chance to win. Even at these figures Atlanta must woin all four games and nose out by half a game.

Anderson Cops Big Elgin Race

Driving Sultz Car, He Crossed Line Ahead of Ralph Mulford, Second in Mason

ELGIN, Ill., Aug. 30.—Gil Anderson, driving a Stutz car 302 miles at the rate of 71 1-2 miles an hour today won the Elgin National road race in 4:13:38. Ralph Mulford finished second and Spencer Wishart third. Summary:

1—Gil Anderson; Stutz; 4:13:38.
2—Ralph Mulford; Mason; 4:20:31.
3—Spencer Wishart; Mercer; 4:29:58.
4—Harry Grant; Isetta; 4:42:14.
5—Ralph DePalma; Mercer; 4:47:24.

Joe Dawson, driver of a Marmon, was on his last lap when the race was called and Bill Endicott with a Case car had completed 259 miles.

The weather was perfect and 60,000 persons saw the contest, in which twelve cars started. Rickenbacher, pilot of a Mason, went out of the race in the first lap. The car ahead of him had skidded and to avoid bumping it, Rickenbacker drove into a ditch, breaking a rear axle. Haupt, another Mason driver, was a contender in the race for 245 mells when ...s engine burned out and he limped off the course.

Bob Burman drove a pretty race in his Keston, but he quit at 159 miles with a cracked cylinder. Henning's Velie car lasted only 23 miles. Bergdoll who drove an Erwin Special, seemed to have third place secured at 259 miles, but he ran out of gasoline on the back stretch and ceased to figure.

Anderson by his performance today broke the record for the event. His speed, 71 1-2 miles an hour, compares with 62 1-2 made by Mulford in 1910; 66.42 in 1911 by Len Zensel and 68.4 a year ago when De Palma won.

Anderson did more, for he emerged from under the shadow of racing misfortune which had gained him the title of the champion hardluck driver of the country. At Indianapolis last May he held second position until the last thirty miles and in this city a year ago he again was second.

Today's race was the first win of his career as a driver for which he forsook the earlier calling of a marine engineer. The race was remarkable for the number of cars that stayed on the track and for the closeness of the contest as indicated in the summaries. At 100 miles Dawson, Haupt and Burman were only a few seconds apart.

Morning Game On Labor Day

Morning Affair With Pels at 10:30–Afternoon Game at 3:30

On Monday, which is Labor day and calls for two ball games at Ponce de Leon park with the New Orleans Pelicans, the Atlanta club is going out to get a big attendance and so down Birmingham that this city will never again make the boast that it is in the same class with the Georgia capital when it comes to supporting baseball.

There is to be a morning and afternoon game on Monday. The morning affair commences at 10:30 with the battle in the afternoon at 3:30. There is no Labor day parade booked and this will give all a chance to turn out to the morning battle. There is nothing else to do and by attending the game you can help the local club show its superiority as a baseball town.

AUTODROME STOCK ON SALE; RUSH TRACK TO COMPLETION

The canvass for the sale of stock in the Atlanta Autodrome association will be started Tuesday and from all indications it is to go fast. Already many have taken stock in the new association, the men who have studied out the proposition believing it is to a good proposition as well as the best advertisement ever given Atlanta.

The work on the track has already been started and owing to the level conditions of the ground can be rapidly pushed to completion. The track is to be the fastest automobile race course ever constructed and will be almost right in the city, being just off Peachtree Road at the 4-mile post. This closeness with the best of street car service will make the track easily accessible and will go a long way toWards making it a grand success.

Race drivers the world over have long clamored for a board track course and now that they are to have one right here in Atlanta the best drivers in the country will flock here to enter every race meet. The old dirt track has served its time and something new and faster is what the drivers want and will surely get in the new board structure here.

The grandstand at the local track is to seat 10,000 people and will be directly in front of the home stretch. Owing to the level condition of the surface in the middle of the track one can sit in the stand and see the machines every second of their trip around the one mile saucer. This level condition in the center is also to make the track easy to build.

Jack Prince, who is to look after the building of the track, already has received comunications from all the leading race drivers stating that they will most certainly be here for the race meets, it being their idea that his ideal of the triple radius board track is the last thing in fast motor racing.

PURSUIT RACE FEATURES MONDAY'S MOTOR EVENTS

The postponement of the motordrome races has given the schedule-maker just enough time to add the famous pursuit race to the program, all of which goes towards making the program for Monday night one of the best yet attempted. Usually the first races of the week have been held on Tuesday night, but this time they will come on Labor day night and should prove an added feature to the sporting events of the day.

For a long time the Atlanta fans have been told of the famous pursuit race and now they are to see one. It is the plan of the starter to put the four fastest riders on the track and start them after each other. Now there is a great deal of rivalry between the racers as to which is the best and you can bet they will go their fastest to keep ahead of each other. This plan will also keep on the track four fast machines and will serve to keep interest alive.

Besides the regular pursuit race there will be the usual number of swift events. There will be the big sweepstakes and motordrome purse in which all the riders will participate as well as a big match race. It has now been a long time since the riders have purtrayed their machines around the track at the fast clip they usually show and racing is sure to be seen.

WILL NAPS BEGIN A LATE SPURT AND NOSE OUT MACK'S ATHLETICS?

Are the Naps off on another spurt, such as characterized their playing of 1911 and 1912 under George Stovall and Joe Birmingham?

It will be remembered that after changing managers in midseason of 1911 and 1912 the Naps sprinted to the finish and played as good, if not better, ball than any team in the league.

Under Stovall they sprinted from seventh place to third, and for Birmingham last fall their work was sensational.

This year the team has been a contender all of the way, and but for a streak of hard luck, which seems to visit every team once a season, would now be closer to the Athletics, if not leading the league.

The Naps are now apparently upon another such spurt as marked their work for the last two years. With Vean Gregg, Fritz Blanding and Willie Mitchell pitching great guns, and the rest of his team playing a brand of ball that is unbeatable, Manager Joe Birmingham has every reason to believe that the pennant is within his grasp.

Three games out of four taken from Connie Mack's men in the last series was the bomb the Naps tossed into the Athletics' camp as a warning to Mack not to name his battery for the first world's series game for a few days to come.

Barons Third; Shutout Billies In Both Games

By Winning Both Games of a Double-Header With Montgomery, Birmingham Crawled Into Third Place

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 30.—Birmingham supplanted Montgomery in third place by blanking Montgomery in a double-header, 1 to 0 and 2 to 0. Hardgrove and Case pitched invincibly in the first, but Messenger's daring dive into the plate scored the only run on an infield hit. Case did not yield a clean hit.

In the second, Gregory and Manning fought another pitchers' battle, but Messenger's timely hit downed Manning. After pitching nicely, Gregory weakened in the seventh. Hardgrove relieved him and saved the game.

After losing the first game, Manager Dobbs assigned every batter a different position in the line-up, but this failed to bring a victory. Score:

Valdosta Won Second Game In Post Series

Otto Jordan's Club Made It Two Straights From Thomasville Team in Post-Season Series for Empire Honors

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Aug. 30.—After defeating Thomasville in Valdosta Friday and drawing first blood in the post season series to decide the Empire State league championship, Otto Jordan and his team invaded the enemy's camp. The result was that Valdosta came through with the second game of the series Saturday afternoon and has only to win two more to claim the rag in the Empire.

The Valdosta batters landed on Day and pounded out a victory. Can fire at a time was put across, starting in the first chapter, until the total was five. Walker was hit fairly hard by Thomasville batsmen but the team behind him gave him great support playing errorless ball.

The games are drawing large crowds and the interest runs high. The teams will play the third game at Valdosta Monday and will come back to Thomasville Tuesday. In case a seventh game is required a coin will be tossed by the managers for the game.

Pennant Won Large Purse

SARANTOGA, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Pennant won the $15,000 futurity at six furlongs here today after a desperate drive to ward off Southern Maid and Addie M, who finished second and third, respectively. The result was in doubt until the last few strides. The time was 1:15:

Both Pennant and Southern Maid came from far behind in the stretch, and had McTaggart been able to keep Southern Maid going in the early stages she probably would have beaten Pennant. Brighurst took the lead in the first few strides, followed by Forum and Early Rose, with Addie M close up. The trailers were Pennant, Southern Maid and Anytime and they were widely separated from the leaders.

Turning out of the back stretch Binghurst had a command lead on Forum and Early Rose, but as they swung for home Pennant entered the argument and Forum and Early Rose dropped back, beaten. A furlong from home Pennant challenged Brighurst and the two had a race for a sixteenth of a mile where Pennant began to draw away. Then Southern Maid came up with a wonderful burst of speed. She was taking two strides to the winner's one in the last fifty yards.

Borel went to the whip on Pennant and the colt answered gamely, holding a length's advantage at the close. Addie M. was beaten only half a length for the place.

DUBUC HOLDS SOX AND TIGERS WIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Chicago failed to hit Dubuc safely with men on bases today and lost to Detroit, 5 to 8. The local's errors also proved costly.

Scott, taken out in the fifth to permit Rousch to bat, was supplanted by White. Pitcher Scroggins, a recruit from Hugo, Okla., was released by Chicago to the Lincoln club of the Western league. Score:

First Baptist Wins

First Baptist plaed about its best ball of the entire season when it defeated the crack team of the Southern Shops at Piedmont park yesterday. The feature of the game was the pitching of Collier for First Baptist, allowing only five scratch hits, winning his game with almost faultless support from the rest of his teammates. Parker did about the best pitching of any pitcher First Baptist has been afainst this year. He struck out eighteen of their strong batters, and but for the fact that First connected safely for ten hits when hits meant runs, and ragged support, there might have been a different tale to tell. First Baptist featured a fast double play in the eighth inning, and on bases, from Abbott to T. Forbes to Chase.

The management of First Baptist wants it understood that it challenges any team of amateurs in the city and is at present claiming the city amateur championship, having won twenty-one games out of twenty-two played. If you think your team can beat us, call up Lester Forbes, captain, M. 3078, or C. J. King, manager, Associated. Press.

The writer believes the First Baptist team to be the hardest hitting amateur team he has ever seen in the city of Atlanta, averaging over twelve runs for each of the twenty-two games played. Score:

Nothing New From Army-Navy Game

WEST POINT, N. Y., Aug. 30.—There was no change today in the army-navy football situation. Having arranged to play the Carlisle Indians in place of the navy, November 29, the army expects to go through with its program.

It is reported that pressure is being exerted from the war and navy departments in Washington to reach an amicable decision as to an arena for the army-navy game, but nobody here today would confirm or deny the report. The cadets will go ahead with their preliminary football preparations. Practice will begin next week.

The championship is still unsettled, each team having taken a game each and one game tied.

Tennis Cracks in Tournament to Decide Club Championship — Good Practice for the Coming Cotton States Meet

The Atlanta Athletic club's annual tennis tournament opened yesterday afternoon with a large entry list. The play started yesterday afternoon and will continue the rest of this week. The entry lists contained the names of sixteen men who desire to take a crack at Carleton Smith, the winner of last year's tournament. The first round must be completed by next Tuesday afternoon and the finals played by Friday, August 5.

The match that attracted most attention was the doubles match between Smith and Mansfield and Carter and Grant, in the semi-final round of the men's doubles. The play in both sets were close and although Grant and Carter won in straight sets at several times during the last set it looked as if Smith and Mansfield would walk away. The individual playing of Smith and Carter were the most prominent features of this match. Smith's place shots were puzzling to his adversaries while the smashing game put up by Carter was beautiful to watch.

Here are the drawings:

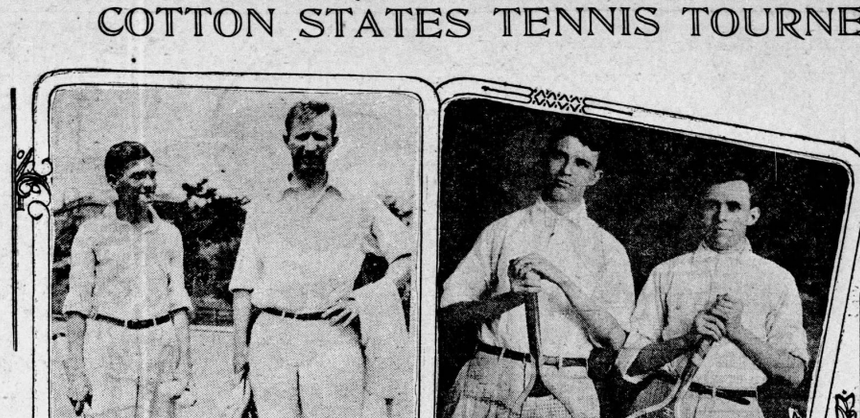
YOUNG PLAYERS WILL FEATURE COTTON STATES TENNIS TOURNEY



These are four of the cracks from out of town clubs who will compete in the Cotton States Tennis Tournament to be held at the Atlanta Athletic clubs courts at East Lake September 9. The players on the left of the group are from Chattanooga and Knoxville. The smaller player on the left is Ed. Whiteside from Chattanooga, the other is "Stan" Crawford from Knoxville. The picture on the right is Bartlett (at left) and Brooks, the present holders of the Cotton States title in doubles. Brooks holds the singles title. They have entered the tourney and are expected to figure in the final honors.

Journal Club Flag Winner

By defeating the Producers' team composed of the best players in the city, The Atlanta Journal team of the Grocers' league, cinched their hold on the pennant. It was Arthur Mullins' pitching that did the work. He had the hard hitting Producers eating out of his hands at all times.

Twice the opposition threatened to score, but failed in their attempt. It was just simply too much Mullins.

Clowers at third featured in the field and also cracked loose a wicked smash to left for three bases, which helped in the scoring.

Simmons had a busy day on the bases, getting on three times and each time counting a run, and stealing bases at will. He also hit at the right time, cutting loose a triple and a single out of three trips to the plate. Osborne and Simmons pulled some pretty baseball in the eighth when Simmons scored on his perfect bunt and he reaching first for a hit. Wilson in left for The Journal pulled off a pretty play when he nailed a would-be scorer on a sacrifice fly. The peg was perfect, and the runner did not have a chance to score. Both teams played sensationally, playing errorless ball. McGee caught a great game.

The Journal's team was at the bottom of the ladder some weeks ago, but the team got together and won eight straight games. It was a great spurt and the team has played good ball.

W. Simmons, who has managed the team since their eight straight victories, has been a big factor in the winning and deserves all the credit that can be handed to him, for keeping the boys together so well. The score:

Jackson Wins a Series From Forsyth

JACKSON, Ga., Aug. 30.—In a series of three games played between Jackson and Forsyth on the home grounds Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Jackson won the first two games, while Forsyth copped the last contest. The score of the first game was 6 to 2 in favor of Jackson. Thursday's game was 8 to 4 in favor of the home team and Forsyth won Friday's fray by the score of 10 to 6. These teams have met in a number of games this season and the series stands about even to date.

Since then Buckley has frequently had occasion to back his own judgment regarding Smith's ability against that of his friends. So far he has yet to make a serious mistake, although now that he is on the verge of matching Smith against Sam Langford he is practically alone in his belief that the Lanky Gunboat has a sporting chance. That Buckley really believes that Smith has a chance is beyond doubt.

Foxes Win In Shutout

ALBANY, Ga., Aug. 30.—Columbus took the final game of the final Albany series this afternoon by the score of 3 to 0, with Redding only allowing three hits. Albany will remain in Columbus for two games Monday instead of going to Charleston, as the victory of Savannah this afternoon cinched the second pennant, making it unnecessary to play the championship series, as they won the first half of the full scheduled season, and making it unnecessary for Albany to go to Charleston.

Won Marathon Swim

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 20.—Robert Godbey, of Memphis, won the annual ten-mile marathon swim in one hour and thirty-seven minutes here today. With one minute each separating them, Davy Jones, of Memphis, was second; Russell Heath, St. Louis, third, and Everett Cook, Memphis, fourth. The race was sanctioned by the Southern A. A. U.

The course was down the Mississippi river, finishing at the Memphis wharf. Jones, who is 15 years old and weighs but ninety pounds, led for the first six miles. Tom Martin, Birmingham, Ala., A. C. Southern champion, was attacked by cramps and was forced to quit at the end of the fourth mile.

Gulls Drop To Savannah

CHARLESTON, S. C., Aug. 30.—Savannah won the final game of the local Sally league season here today, 5 to 0, Adams pitched steady ball at all times for the visitors. Foster was given poor support, errors being made at the critical moments. A one-hand stab by Dowell, which robbed Menefee of a sure double, featured the game. A pretty catch by Mayer also saved a hit from being recorded against Adams. The Savannah team played great ball.

By winning today's game, the Savannah club wone the championship of the South Atlantic league, as the victory cinched them the second half honors, and as they have also won the first half no post series is necessary.

Smith Picked Up When Broke

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Jim Buckley, who is leading, and whenever necessary driving, Gunboat Smith along the rocky road to the heavyweight championship, was recently telling how he came to pick up the "Gunner," as he terms him.

"I was out in San Francisco with Murphy, who was matched to fight Mc-Farland at the time," said Buckley, "when I heard them talking of a lanky sailor who had a terrible wallop but nothing else. He had just had a fight and they were talking it over at the Imperial Yacht club (a noted gathering place for fight fans in Frisco). Some one remarked it was a shame the sailor was so yellow as otherwise he might amount to something. I recalled having read of this same fellow knocking down Jack Johnson during a training bout. Promoter Coffroth has a roll of moving picture films depicting this feat.

"I needed a heavyweight at the time to send against Al Palzer back in New York, so next day I looked up Smith. After I had talked with him I came to the conclusion that the boy was all right. He was broke, had no friends and was forced to do what he was told in order to get a few dollars to keep from starving.

"When Coffroth heard that I had signed him up he gave me the laugh. 'Why, that fellow's a joke,' he said. But I had my own ideas and I brough tthe Gunner eas twith me."

"I know Langford and just how good he is. I gave him his first fight in New York when he fought for me at the Sharkey club. I don't say that the Gunner is a sure winner, but I'm ready to take a chance. If the Gunner wasn't equally willing I'd give him a taste of a club," says Buckley, who is thoroughly Irish and believes in an Irishman's argument.

Tennis Meet Draws Cracks To East Lake

Star Players From Clubs in Southern Cities Will Fight for Cotton States Title—Atlanta Youngsters Enter

When the week of September 9th rolls around the white lined and netted courts at the East Lake Country club will be the scene of a lively struggle for the gulf states tennis title. About forty knights of the racquet will battle for this most coveted honor.

The holding of a big tennis tournament this late in the season is an idea that has met with much success as the large entry list indicates. The Atlanta Athletic club, under whose auspices this tournament is being conducted, is making every attempt to have the tournament a success and it is believed that the local tennis enthusiasts will get to see the best tennis since the famous southern tournaments of years past.

Most of the country clubs of the nearby southern cities boast of stars in their ranks who have won various tournaments and these cracks will gather in Atlanta for this tourney. They come from New Orleans, Chattanooga, Memphis, Augusta, Knoxville and Birmingham and represent the very best in each of the cities mentioned.

The local cracks are preparing for the invasion and are putting their final touches on the game by holding a local club tournament that is bringing out some good tennis itself and is furnishing great practice for the players.

Most of the sharks entered in this tournament have been playing all season and at the top of their form and will let loose all they have to cop the honors in this play.

This is the fifth time the title has been played for. There was no tournament in 1912. Lee Allen Brooks, of Birmingham, won the singles title then and will defend his title in Atlanta. Brooks paired with Bert Parish will enter from Nashville, Ed Whiteside from Chattanooga, Charles Rodgers and possibly Robert Cowan from Knoxville, Bill Gary and Henry Garrett from Augusta, and Leroy Cooper and Ben Cornelius from Memphis.

The local players include some of the stars of the south who are familiar to all tennis followers. Carleton Smith and Carl Thornton have entered and a fight between these two in the final honors is likely. Ed Carter and Bryan Grant are again in for the doubles and look like the strongest pair entered yet. Carl Ramspeck, who played in such form at Augusta, and Jake Orr are also in readiness for the laurels. Estom Mansfield will play the doubles with Carleton Smith. And there are other lesser stars in the bunch who will put up good tennis during the tournament.

The club is anxious for the younger cracks of the city to enter, as it is going to be much practice. At present there have been several of these youngsters to enter. Harry Hallman, fresh from south Carolina victories; Hardy Hall, Rolf Sims Vernon McMillan, H. M. Ashe and others.

Frank Reynolds will again assume charge of the tournament and the tournament under his management will be run in good shape.

REDS DOWN CARDS IN SLOW GAME

CINCINNATI, Aug. 30.—Cincinnati won a slow and ragged game from St. Louis today 7 to 4. Doak was so wild that he retired in favor of Perritt in the fourth inning. Leifer came in freely, while Geyer appeared too late to save the day. Ames, on the other hand, pitched old ball. Score:

Daubert Best With Willow In National

Ex-Southern League Star Has Been Pushing the Ball Out With Great Regularity—Many Over the Mark

Jake Daubert, an ex-Southern league star, is showing the way to the batters in the National league with an average of .371. Pitcher Yingling, a teammate, has a better average than the first sacker and Brooklyn team captain, but he has been in so few games that he cannot be counted as the leader.

Gabby Cravath, the Philly home-run hitter, is yet right around the top and going fine. McDonald, the Boston youngster who does pinch hitting for George Stallings, is also right there with the best.

An unusually large number of the National league players are over the 300 mark at this time and from all indications they promise to be right there with the end of the campaign.

Track Trotting Now the Rage

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The versatility of the American trotting horse has been proved times beyond number in recent years, not only in this country, but in Europe, South America and Australia, says an expert. Originally a horse used for general purposes of a light nature, and largely thoroughbred in and about 1830, when trotting races under saddle were the vogue, later being relegated to speedy work in harness on prepared tracks, the American bred trotter has developed along lines far removed from that of his progenitor, the blood horse, yet compares favorably with the thoroughbred saddle horse under a variety of conditions where stamina and endurance are called for.

Of late there has been a popular decency for horses that can trot vigorously under saddle, and advocates of the matter, who realize that a great many colts from trotting stock are not being trained for racing, are now urging what is to become of the horses. Since the advent of the automobile is but a small market for them, and it has been suggested at times by wealthy horsemen and others that quite a number of colts should be trained to trot under saddle to meet the growing demand. The ladies in large cities are today crowded riders who ride for the exercise to be derived from it, and they get this exercise on their horses move at a sharp trot.

This trade has long realized this, and dealers have been buying up trotting bred horses and training them for such purposes rather than for use in harness, as was the practice up to four or three years ago. Picked specimens have won repeatedly in the show ring, and the riding academies frequently include horses of this type to meet the wishes of their patrons. If public taste is trending this way it must be observed to, and there is no doubt that a choice field is presented for breeders to operate in if the new fad is engineered in the proper way.

There can be no doubt that a number of properly conducted races for trotting bred horses, under saddle carrying riders in colored silk would be going attractive, and while it would be going back to first principles, the public would unquestioningly flock to any course where such spectacular events are scheduled.

Horse Show to Open Sept. 25

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The twelfth annual horse show of the Agricultural society of Queens-Nassau counties will be held at the fair grounds, Mineola, September 25, 26 and 27.

Practically all of the local exhibitors will be represented again this year, and many new ones have signified their intention of being present to compete for the prizes. Indications are that this year's show will be a banner one. The prize list, which has just been issued, contains classes for trotters, ponies in harness and under saddle, breeding classes, saddle horses, polo ponies, military horses and hunters and jumpers.

Robertson Has Fallen a Bit at the Hit Game

Welchonce and Kniseley Are Pressing Mobile Player, and It Now Looks as If the Cracker Will Win

With Dave Robertson holding up his hitting mark, Harry Welchonce and Pete Kniseley have been unable to pass him during the past week. The Mobile outfielder has an average of .347, against .338 for Kniseley and .335 for Welchonce.

Since the averages here shown were compiled Welchonce has jumped a bit, while Robertson and Kniseley have fallen and the Cracker is much nearer the top than the figures would show. In gaining his high average Welchonce has made more hits than any other player in the league and is out to eclipse all previous hit marks.

Tommy Long, of Atlanta, has already passed the run-getting record and is bettering it by one or two runs with the playing of each game. He is now going great and with the coming of the end of the season will probably be 15 better than the old mark of 99.

Here are the figures on all who are over .250 for the games through Tuesday:

Becker Help For Phillies

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 30.—One of the surprises of the year in baseball dom has been the comeback of the Phillies after their crushing setback by the Dodgers and Giants. While looking around for a solution to the problem among the import t factors, don't fail to overlook one Beals Becker, who has hung up his suit in Boston, New York, Cincinnati and Philadelphia club houses.

One big trade that has been overlooked all around the circuit was the swap of Dodie for Becker. Neither man was of any practical use to Cincinnati or Philadelphia, but when the trade came both did yeoman service for their new masters.

Becker was hitting around .260 for Tinker, and was not fielding in any too sensational style. Besides Joe had a number of good outfielders after the trade with the Giants. Dodge had the reputation as a wonderful fielder but a weak hitter while with Philadelphia. He was given little chance to show in Quakertown, but Charlie Doolin gave the statement that he was the premier fielding sacker in the business.

Since he came to Philadelphia Becker has picked up fifty points in his batting, and is the second leading slugger of the league. Many of his long smashes have broken up a game for the Phils. Becker has thirteen doubles, ten triples and eight home runs. His teammate, Cravath, is the only man that tops him in this line.

Dodge started off like a streak with the stick for the Reds, and won a number of games by his timely clubbing. His pinch hitting featured the work of the Reds during the month of July. Dodge has dropped back to .260 which is good for an infielder, and his fielding has been excellent.

Great Britain's supply of horses for home defense number 462,910. The territorial forces have at their disposal 316,612 horses for emergency mobilization, while the regulars can call upon 146,306.

Truly the grand old man of baseball is John Henry Wagner. The greatest of them all.

Today as you see his face while he sits on his bat watching the games roll on we look at that old familiar face, tinged at the temples by the gray touch of time, wrinkled his brow and lined his face, yet with a touch of softness and sadness over all.

Wagner has grown old in a quiet, silent way that we hope shall be our lot. We are almost afraid to speak of him as growing old. He has made laughing stock of so many prophetic writers who have predicted a victory for age. In the last ten years, who have predicted the downfall under the crushing weight of years.

Each year brings with it the news that the great Dutchman is through and will play no more, and each year brings in Hans Wagner playing at the top of his game. This year particularly was it true. Injuries at the start of the season made it seem as if he would never play again. But he did.

The murmurs did not entirely down as the old fellow's batting average was below .300. Now he has just started to hit again, and in the last week boosted his batting score far over that mark. It looks as though it is impossible for age to impeach him.

He probably feels relieved to find the .300 figure behind him and back, for in all the eighteen years of big league s. ce he has never hit below that standard. No other player of modern times can boast of such a record, or of so high an average for so long a time.

Now, don't allow this to obscure his other abilities. One is apt to forget that the old boy is a grand base runner and possesses an uncanny ability to move those awkward limbs and long arms in carrying certain death in a ground ball.

One can say without fear that his equal will never be seen, and he is not through yet. Judging from the pace he is not setting, it is difficult to hazard when the grand old warrior will carry his glove in from the field for the last time.

He has been playing ball since time began, I guess. Anyway, as far back as history goes we find him doing nothing else.

He and "Pop" Time must have been boys together. But he conquered after a weary while. Deep delving into the cobwebby past revealed that about twenty-five years ago a fat, rosy-cheeked, curly-headed German boy was learning the barber trade in the little town of Carnegie, Pa., the city of his birth.

You wouldn't ever imagine that Honus was ever a barber would you? It seems as though he is part of the game—something that always has and always will be connected with baseball.

But it's true, the "Flying Dutchman" would now be shaving 'em close in a barber shop, if he couldn't play ball. It's hard to imagine that, isn't it? It is a little too much to ask you, I guess. But just the same if the guy who invented baseball didn't, why then if you should ever be in the city of Carnegie you could just drop into old Hans Wagner's barber shop for a mouthful of soap and a nick in the face.

First Baptist Team Is Good

The Sunday school has just completed one of the most successful seasons of its history and are looking forward to a still better one next year. It is true that there are only one team which had a real chance from the beginning if the season, so the other teams settled down to see if they could not be the covered ones to beat the First Baptist.

The First Baptist boys deserve a great deal of praise for the way they played and the spirit that they showed while on the diamond. They went through the season with only one defeat and eighteen victories. If there is another team in Atlanta which can boast of such a string of wins then thinks that it is fully able to defend they have failed to make themselves evident.

Of the individual players on the team there is much to be said. No other team in Atlanta can boast of an outfield that can hit the sphere at a five-hundred clip, while in Westmoreland, Suddith and Myers, one of the heaviest hitting outer guards in that has played in Atlanta amateur ball since it has started here.

The infield was another strong point of the team. With Priest and Chase covering first and Tulu Forbes, Nicholson and Tommie Abbott taking care of the other stations there was little chance of a grounder slipping through them for a hit. The infield has a batting average of at least .400 and and here again was another reason for so many wins. The battery, consisting of Wooten and Smith as catchers and Adams, Sime and Shin as pitchers, was one of the strongest in the league. The club does not claim to have the best pitcher in the league, but do claim to have a fair one. The games this season have been won mostly on heavy hitting and good fielding.

It is on this mainly that the club claims the championship of Atlanta and thetitle of city amateur champion. If there is any team in Atlanta that thinks the claim is unjust then the club is open for a contest with them.

Castoffs Are Going Good

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Five of the younger players in the big leagues are men who have been either tried out or signed by the Giants in some previous season. In a recent fanning session it was declared by a supporter of the Giants that John McGraw had never permitted a star, in embrionic state, slip away from him. The retort by a fan, who recounted the instances of players being passed along, added keenness as an additional topic to the discussion.

"Dick" Rudolph, of the Boston Braves, belonged to the Giants in the fall of 1910 and the following spring. A year ago George Pierce a southpaw twirler, now with the Cubs, was taken on a spring trip with the Giants. Five years ago "Benny" Meyer, who has been utility fielder for the Brooklyn team this season, was tried out by McGraw. "Jack" Johnson, of the St. Louis Browns, was sized up for two springs by McGraw and passed along. Two years ago Hugh High, of the Detroit team, was listed for an infielder, and his fielding has been excellent.

The Dorval Jockey club will stage a $20,000 international derby at Montreal next summer. The subscribers are given the privilege of naming three horses within a specified date or of selling their subscription should they desire to.

CUP FOR 'DROME RACES

Always interested in real good sport, "Bill" Stoddard has come forward and offered a handsome loving cup to the motorcycle rider who thrice wins the big race at the local track. The cup is to be known as the "Stoddardized Trophy" and goes to the rider who wins it three times.

At each racing meet there is a battle which figures in the southern championship, the race being run on the point system, and it is the rider who thrice wins the final heat in this race who gets the trophy. The cup does not necessarily have to be won three times in succession, but three times during the present season.

There is a great deal of rivalry between the leading racers at the local track and you can bet they are out to take the cup offered by Mr. Stoddard. It is an incentive for faster time and you will surely get it.

Pacific Coast boxing promoters announce two important fights at Vernon outside of Los Angeles, promoter Tom McCarey has matched Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette, the colored heavy-weights for a 20-round contest on October 7. On the night of September 23 in the same arena Arthur Pelky, the heavy-weight champion, and Charley Miller, the San Francisco motor man will clash in a 20-round bout.

Morris D. Brown, the national Class A amateur billiard champion, has sailed to Paris, provided with credentials to the French Federation, which includes all the Europeans, with the idea of interesting that association in an International series for the world's championship. It is the idea to conduct the contest as a team match, with five of the leading Frenchmen challenging a team of five American defenders, the nation scoring three victories to become the holder of the cup and to defend it annually if challenged.

Prough Takes Hurling Prize Over the Pole

Baron Slabber Has Not Worked in as Many Games as Lookout, but Has Better Average for the Season

Clinton Prough, the elongated Birmingham hurler, is out to win the pitching honors in the Southern league race for this season. Though he has not worked in as many games as Harry Coveleskie, the Chattanooga Pole, he has a better average, the figures really being a bit better than shown below, as Prough has won a game and Coveleskie lost one since these figures were compiled.

Conzelman, Price and Dent, three members of the local staff, are out above the .500 mark and going better with each day. Thompson is also better than an even break since he joined the local club, though his losses with the Baron crew kept him below the mark in the figures for the season.

Here are the figures on all hurlers over .500 through the games of Tuesday:

Three Hopes Who Are Good

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—There are just three "hopes" in the pugilistic world today who stand out as above the other "bums" and "hopeless" ones.

They are "Gunboat" Smith, Jess Willard and Arthur Pelky.

Sam Langford would be brought into the discussion but his bulk. Outside of a preponderance of weight and size Willard is rather a disappointing possibility. His is slow to think, and naturally it follows that he is slow to act when in the ring. He may possibly overcome these defects in the ring, but he is by no means a young man, as boxers go today, and the chances therefore are all against his getting to the top.

Pelky, it might be said, is more or less of an unknown quality. Around twenty-nine years of age, he has not done much in the ring to demonstrate what is to be expected of him. Most of his matches have been short contests, and the affair with McCarty ended so abruptly that my critic can tell what is in the new man.

Truth to tell, the field doesn't look the most encouraging in the world. Smith might do, but he is undersized. Pelky hasn't been sufficiently tested, and Willard appears to be a slow thinker.

More Players Now Eligible

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Nine more players have been made eligible to compete in the national amateur championship tournament over the links of the Garden City Golf club September 6.

The following players received a rating of six in the handicap list of the United States Golf association:

E. E. Giles, C. C.; R. S. Kampmann, San Antonio C. C.; S. C. Mabon, Nassau C. C.; H. F Mayberry, Charleston C. C.; H. L. Nichol, Midland, C. C.; W. Thompson, Allegheny C. C.; and A. C. Ulmer, Florida C. C.

The United States Golf association also issued a warning recently to the effect that the entries for the national amateur championship will not be accepted after August 30.

Whitney Winner

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Harry Payne Whitney's Pennant won the fourth race of the day this afternoon. Robert Davis' Southern Maid was second, Addie M. third. Time, 1:15.

Cobb Leading Closest Rival By Two Points

Figures Through the Games of Wednesday Show That Detroit Star Has Passed Star of Cleveland Club

Through the games of Wednesday Tyrus Cobb was leading Joe Jackson by a couple of points ,the Tiger having an average of .393 against .391 for Jackson. These two players have been just about this close all season and right now both have a chance for the honor.

In the number of hits Jackson leads the bunch with room to spare. He has hit safely 164 times in the 118 games he has played, while Cobb in 92 games has hit safely 125 times. Speaker is third in line in the race, but he is too far behind to make the race close with the two rivals.

The usual bunch of star hitters are out in front and will have the same old marks. Lajoie, Baker, McInnes, Crawford and Gandil are batting at their usual strides and will be well above the .300 mark with the coming of the end of the season.

Good Fighters Going Abroad

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Dan McKetrick, the dapper little fight manager, is going to make another trip to Europe. He has been across the big pond so often that he forgets the number of times. On his next journey to the other side he will take with him the largest string of fighters that any manager ever piloted to a foreign country.

McKetrick recently received a letter from Theodore Vienne, naming his terms for the appearance abroad of five American fighters, and McKetrick lost no time in hustling to the cable office and wiring his acceptance. It is believed that little Dan will take abroad are Joe Jeannette, *Frank Moran, both heavy-*weights; Barney Williams, a middleweight; Youpng Ahearn, a welterweight, and Mickey Dunn, a bantam.

This party will start for Paris the latter part of September. Most of the battles that will be arranged for them will be held in the Cirque de Paris, the big club of the French capital.

Two of the boxers—Williams and Ahearn—are proteges of Dan Morgan's and Vienne wanted them, but Morgan agreed to loan them to McKetrick, who is his side partner.

Williams has been promised three fights, the first of which will take place within fifteen days of his arrival.

Moran will first get a slam at the best of the French and English swells, after which he will be pitted against the British heavyweight champion, Bombardier Wells.

Moran is confident that he will again make good abroad. He was over there once before and made an awful hit. He knocked out Tom Cowler and Fred Storback, both of whom have tacked K. O.'s on the Boer, George Rodel, and also put away Fred Drummond and Charlie Wilson.

Jeanette has been promised two matches, both of which will take place within five weeks of his arrival. He is likely to get the winner of the bout between George Carpentier and Al Palzer, and also he may be given a chance at Jack Johnson.

Young Ahearn, who was born on British soil, will be matched with Johnny Summers, holder of the welterweight title, for the Lord Lonsdale belt. He will also encounter the French welterweight champion, and if he wins from both of these boxers he will return to the united States and will be ready to fight for the world's championship.

Mickey Dunn, who is a promising local lad, will probably be booked to meet Charlie Ledoux, th. French champion, who is back in his native land, and Champion Benyon, of England.

Promoter Vienne has requested McKetrick to have all his men in Paris so that they can all have their training stunts in full swing October 15.

Before sailing McKetrick expects Jeannette to hook up with Sam Langford in a twenty-round bout at Los Angeles on September 15.

Ithaca, N. Y., will witness the annual athletic competition among Chinese students from many of the Eastern colleges and universities, on Saturday August 30. Several hundred Chinese will attend the annual conference and it is expected that 100 will take part in the track meet, including some from the West.

The Portola athletic association having charge of the track and field competitions which will feature the celebration in San Francisco in October will give a trophy worth $100 for each world record broken. The committee expects the national amateur athletic union to approve the unusual feature of amateur athletics.

Football Soon To Hold Sway In Sportdom

Though Baseball Is Popular, Most Will Welcome the Arrival of Autumn and Playing

Aug. 30.—While the sports are still taking up columns the first faint whispers are that lord of all the fun of game that draws a more nsiastic crowd of fans than

On the Cornell is to tackle Ursinus. the big league will begin.

On Saturday, September 27, all the biggest teams will be seen in action. Harvard opens its season with the University of Maine as its opponent in the great amphitheater at Cambridge and the Princeton eleven will start the ball rolling on the home field with Rutgers facing the Tigers. The Army will meet Norwich at West Point. Cornell takes on Colgate and Pennsylvania is slated to try its strength against Gettysburg. That's a card that is really worth while. Thereafter the Saturday games will bring the teams into weekly struggles, and looking ahead to them the coaches are busily preparing to put the gridiron squads through some of the hardest training that the game has known.

Harvard, especially, desiring to hold on to the premier honors gained by the Crimson team last season, has been careful to keep tabs on her players. Captain Storer has planned to jump his men into strict training during the first week in September, and in fact has urged them to pay more than a little attention to their condition during this latter end of their play time. It was decided at Cambridge last spring that the men who hope to gain an "H" from football must work for it, and that no time should be wasted in light, easy preparation. Therefore the squad must be ready when it reports to Head Coach Haughton to get right into the heavy elementary work. In this way the usual conditioning period, which has claimed too many valuable weeks, will be cut down to a few days.

Haughton has let it be known that any man who reports to him for the squad without being ready physically and mentally for the hardest sort of work need entertain no hopes of making the team, and indeed will have to prove himself invaluable to gain a steady job on the varsity squad.

At New Haven a slightly different procedure will be followed. It was a surprise to the football squad there when Howard Jones, the new head coach, issued his orders for the men to report ready for duty on Labor day, three weeks before the actual beginning of play. That is a new wrinkle at Yale, for heretofore the Bulldog has been rather set against so-called "summer training." However, as methods tended toward all forms of athletics is gaining favor in all the colleges and Yale is only falling into line, having seen the benefits to be derived from such an early start.

There is more than condition gaining, though, in the wish of the coaches to start practice as soon as may be. Rule changes made this year, while not radical, have brought a need for close study of the more open game and then, too, the season of 1912 did not give the teams enough time to master the entirely different game which the rules of that date called for. Now, with most of the varsity team rosters still bearing the names of last year's veterans, there is every chance that the fine points of football which were just glimpsed at last year, will be brought out in all their keenness.

Since the old time "slaughter house" mass play game was abandoned in favor of football has been on the increase. Each year the opening up of the play has let the spectators more into the meaning and spirit of the game, allowed them to follow the course of the ball and know the why and wherefore of each move as their eyes were looking down on a gerat chess board. As football stands at present under the shaping hands of its rulers, there is more for the man on the sidelines to see than ever before. Ergo, that man and all his family go to the games oftener and more often. Say what you will, it's public support that keeps football alive and the greater that support is, the more vitality the game will feel.

Fight Has Started Against Boxing Game

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 28.—Official approval was given to the crusade for the prohibition of boxing in California last night when the county supervisors adopted resolutions declaring this the only means to prevent prize fight fatalities such as the death last Saturday of John ("Bull") Young, after his fight with Jess Willard. The sport is conducted by professional athletic clubs was condemned.

Announcement has been made that the initiative law would be invoked at once to bring the matter before the voters of the state. The proposed measure has not been drafted yet.

MEN WHOM BASEBALL HAS MADE RICH

Frank Navin, who, like Murphy, of the Cubs, has jumped from nothing to riches, was an attorney and is a close student of the bang tails.

The president of the Detroit American league club is the second of the shoestring brothers, the other being MurphyoftheCubs.

To elucidate: Navin and Murphy came into the National drama with just about enough cash to wad a crutch, and today never complain of a gnawing sensation in the region of the solar plexus, due to hunger.

Navin is a native of Adrian, Mich., and was admitted to the Michigan bar (judicial) before he graduated from the Detroit College of Law, thus demonstrating how bright he was at an early age.

Having graduated, he hung out his shingle as barrister. He was interested (extent not reported by biographer) in the "booky" end of the Canadian racing circuit, although not a bookmaker himself. But he followed the geegees so successfully that he made money, meanwhile permitting Blackstone to suffer, for want of exercise. Today Frank Navin is one of the best posted race followers in Detroit and can shed a tip at any time without exertion.

It was because of Navin's intimacy with things of a sporting nature that he was employed as secretary of the Detroit club by S. F. Angus when the later was trying to make Detroit a big league town.

Just about the time Angus was groggy from his effort along came one William H. Yawkey, youthful, a sportsman and with an eye like an eagle for a good thing.

Navin became part owner of the Detroit club with Yawkey, his experience and what money he happened to have getting him some stock. Later, when Yawkey's interests demanded his entire attention, he slipped the club presidency to Navin, with a large bundle of stock that was then paying what our leading magnates cautiously refer to as "a fair dividend."

It was Navin who employed Hugh Jennings to win three American league pennants in as many years—and Hughie did it. It was Navin who secured favorable legislation for Sunday baseball, and it was Navin, up to the time of the last world's series which the team lost, who did all the clerical work in the club's business office.

Winter Work For Johnson

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 30.—There is no pitcher better qualified to tell his fellow craftsmen how to succeed in their profession than Walter Johnson, the star of the Washington American league club. Mathewson, of course, is looked up to more, but what "Matty" would advise and what Johnson advises are undoubtedly as like as two peas.

Johnson attributes his success to the following program of living:

"I was born on a farm, and I love the life. A good many ball players don't but I do. When the baseball season is over I go back to our farm out in Kansas and work on the place right through the winter, just like any of the men. I get enough of the big towns and the bright lights during the summer, and I am glad to get back to the farm and do farm work just as soon as I can. And I always hate to come back east every spring to begin playing baseball again.

"I have often said, and no one has disputed me, that I work harder every winter than any other ball player. The result is that in the spring I am just as hard as I was in the autumn. Instead of hanging around hotels and poolrooms in some big city I am out on the farm, getting up every morning before daylight and going out to help feed the stock. Then I come back to the house for breakfast, have a good, healthy appetite and eat accordingly.

"After that there is a lot more work to be done around the place. I put in a good day every day in the week, and by the time night comes I am ready to turn in early, for I know that the next morning I must get up just as early and start out again, lantern in hand, sometimes with the thermometer way down below zero, for we have it cold out our way lots of the time during the winter. I don't do it so much because I have to, but because I like to, and I haven't yet run across any ball players with whom I would swap places during the off season."

Tried to Farm Star Flinger

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—The uncertainty of baseball has made heroes of some and dubs of others. The caprices of fate have made some managers a success and others rank failures. A bunch has often brought a star, while well founded reports have produced lemons. Ball players who later star are often passed up for recruits who prove lemons.

"Rebel" Russell is one of the most promising youngsters in the major league. The effective work of the southpaw has enabled the White Sox to remain in the first division with Ed Walsh unable to pitch. But the wise leader of the White Sox was willing to part with his star before the opening of the Southern league season and the Birmingham team of the Southern league had an opportunity to land a phenom. Comiskey was especially anxious to place the youngsters with the Barons.

In March, when "Chubby" Molesworth was searching for a twirler, the White Sox offered the young southpaw "Rebel" Russell. The owner explained that possibly Russell could stand the pace in the Southern, for he proved a wonder in the Texas league in 1912. The price was not an enormous one, but the Barons hesitated.

A. C. Kraentzleln, the ex-University of Pennsylvania athlete and coach of the University of Michigan track teams whom the German athletic authorities will endeavor to secure as instructor to train their athletes for the 1916 Olympic games which will be held in Berlin, has been one of the greatest athletes the world has known. He could sprint, broad jump and high jump as well as hurdle, all in championship form, and do well with the weights besides. His preceptor was the late Mike Murphy and experience has added to his knowledge of the game.

$14,000 Purse For Futurity

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 30.—With the Futurity as the feature, the closing races of the Saratoga association will be staged here today. Of the original 414 nominations only nine are carded to go to the post in the final turf classic of the Metropolitan racing season.

J. N. Camden's Bringhurst, with 126 pounds, is top weight. Robert Davis' Southern Maid has been allotted 119; Harry Payne Whitney's Pennant and Forum will carry 119 and 117 respectively; E. R. Bradley's Black Tony, 117; Early Rose, 119; Iridescence, 114; Addie M., 114, and Anytime, 119.

The running of the Futurity at Saratoga is by special arrangement with the Coney Island Jockey club, as was the case in 1911, 1912, Distance is furlongs as usual. According to present computations the value to the owner of the winning 2-year-old will be close to $14,000, as against the $30,000 to $40,000 prizes in the heyday of racing.

Cochran Attracts The Eyes of Scouts

ROME, Ga., Aug. 28.—John Cochran, the left fielder of the Rome baseball team, is a scond Ty Cobb in the opinion of his fellow-players in the Appalachian league. Cochran has broken the league record by knocking twenty home runs during the season. His batting average for the season, which is about to close, is .397 to date.

He is being looked over by several scouts from big league teams, and it is believed he will be drafted direct to the majors.

Illinois Swimmers Are Best in Big Meet

PUT-IN-BAY, Ohio, Aug. 28.—Illinois Athletic club swimmers made a clean sweep, capturing all events constituting the central states championship series, a feature of "Aquatic Sports' week," a continuation of the Interlake Yachting association's Perry's victory centennial program. They won easily from the best entries of Cleveland, Detroit and Toledo Athletic clubs.

Winners in the several events were:

Fifty-yard swim, A. C. Raichel, Illinois Athletic club.

One hundred and fifty-yard wash, A. J. Hebner, Illinois Athletic club.

Plunge and swim under water, L. C. Reitman, Illinois Athletic club, who was in the water a depth of seventy-five feet for fifty-five seconds.

Quarter-mile swim, A. J. Hebner.

The Culver summer naval school crew of Culver, Ind., won the cutter contest by ten lengths in a close brush with a crew representing the naval training ship Essex. The Essex crew won the "snippy race" for naval militiamen weighing under 135 pounds.

Canadians Show Well In Tennis Tournament

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ontario, Aug. 28.—The weather favored the players in the international tennis tournament. The hard fought set between Baird, Canadian champion, and Deveraux, of Utica, interrupted by the storm, ended in Baird's favor, 7-5, 6-2.

Continuing the second round of the singles, Hargest, Toronto, beat Wang, Fort Erie, 7-5, 5-7, 7-5. Calder, Toronto, beat McLean, 6-2, 9-11, 6-4, and Boultbee, Toronto, beat O'Grady, 6-2, 6-3.

In the ladies' singles Mrs. H. Bickle, Toronto, Canadian champion, was defeated by the American doubles champion, Mrs. Robert Williams, of Philadelphia, 6-1, 2-6, 6-2; Miss Mary Browne, of Los Angeles, beat Miss Boultbee, of Toronto, 6-1, 6-2.

Baird and Sherwill, Canadian doubles champions, won from Larned and McLean in straight sets.

Cochran Team Claims Honor

COCHRAN, Ga., Aug. 28.—By winning two out of three games from East Point Cochran won the state championship among the amateur teams. In a hair splitting, fast and exciting game, the last of a series of three with the crack team from East Point, former champions of the state, Cochran won by the score of 4 to 3.

The game throughout was replete with brilliant plays, daring base running and fast fielding from the time the umpire called play ball until the last man was out in the ninth inning, on a double play. There was not a dull moment.

While East Point played in their usual jam-up championship form, they were outclassed and outpointed in every department of the game, and for once during the entire season, after defeating every team of note in north and south Georgia they met a team not only their team of note in north and south Georgia, they met a team not only their equals, but their superiors, as the result of the series clearly proved. Skelton, of Eastman fame, before whose deceptive benders more than one crack team of south Georgia has bit the dust, essayed to do the twirling for the visitors, but he met his Waterloo, giving up nine hits, made at will by the opposition, and had to be yanked in the eighth inning a defeated and disappointed champion. Norris was on the mound for the locals and held the visitors completely at his mercy throughout the game, giving up only five scattered hits and striking out nine men. He was given a substantial purse at the end of the game. Other features of the game was the daring base running and batting of Neal. The brilliant playing of Ellison on first and the catching of Burns. Dukes for the visitors did the best work with the stick. Three runs were scored in the eighth inning by a hit by Taylor, followed by a two-base hit by Norris and a single by Neal. The details follow:

Score by innings:

	R.	H.	E.
Cochran.....	000 001 03x	4	9	3
East Point.....	000 010 002	3	5	1

Cochran: Norris and Burns; East Point: Skelton, Dukes and Wise. Umpire Coley.

Eddie Hanavan, who with Billy Paull, of the University of Pennsylvania, extended John Paul Jones, of Cornell, to his first intercollegiate mile run record in 1911, has retired permanently from athletics. The former Michigan university runner is in business in Detroit and has put on considerable weight.

Lightweights Most Favored By Bout Fans

Big Gate at Ritchie-Rivers Match Clearly Demonstrates That the Public Wants Plenty of Action.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—When Willie Ritchie and Joe Rivers drew a gate of $29,000 for their recent championship battle the fact was again strikingly demonstrated that the lightweights of fistiana are the ones in highest favor with lovers of boxing. Of course there have been bigger receipts than $29,000 for a ring battle, but these other record houses were attracted from the country over, while Ritchie and Rivers drew their patronage almost entirely from the territory tributary to San Francisco.

There is no question but that for actual fighting qualities and spectacular ring men the lightweight division has always led the other classes, and this fact is what has tended to make the 133-pond boys such prime favorites with the public.

What a brilliant array of champions have reigned in the lightweight class. McAuliffe, Lavigne, Erne, Gans, Nelson, Wolgast, Ritchie—each a champion in every sense of the word.

In the old days of twenty-odd years ago Jack McAuliffe, one of the three famous "American Jacks," was the king pin in his division, and there are many who still maintain that his equal never drew on a pair of fighting gloves.

When McAuliffe was the champion lightweight of the world Jack Dempsey was the middleweight leader and the only John L. was the heavyweight title holder. The trio was fondly known as "the three American Jacks." They were steadfast friends and a great combination. Dempsey and McAuliffe were inseparable. They worked together as boys in a cooper shop at Williamsburg, near Brooklyn. When Dempsey fought, McAuliffe generally seconded the Nonpareil, and when McAuliffe boxed Dempsey was usually his chief second. And in the days Sullivan beat Jack McAuliffe seconded his old pal, John L. Sullivan.

McAuliffe was a most dashing fighter-an d picturesque character. He was always full of rollicking Irish humor and the possessor of a clever intelligence. Jack loved the good things of life and when he started to train for a contest it was nothing unusual for him to show up for the training period weighing as high as 174 pounds.

McAuliffe beat such ones as Horace ...eeds, Stanton Abbott, Jimmy Carroll, Billy Moyers, the Streator Cyclone, and that sort, and he's the only lightweight boxer in the history of the sport who retired undefeated champion.

To show the consummate skill of McAuliffe only one of his battles need be recalled. This was his first fight with Billy Myers, the "Streator Cyclone." In those old days everything was fair in a boxing contest. McAuliffe met Myers in an Illinois mining town. The pair fought in a big loft over a livery stable. Myers' friends were out in legion and they came prepared to see their man win by fair means or foul. The miners of that day were an uncouth lot. They armed themselves with slungshots and small clubs. McAuliffe knew the conditions he was up against, but the iron heart of Irish Jack never quaked. He went dancing into that hell hole like a Dervish dancing his Mullah's tunes into battle.

McAuliffe and Myers started the battle. The uncouth miners, armed with slungshots and short clubs, stood as close to the ropes as they could get, and more than one of them brandished an ugly weapon in an attempt to injure Williamsburg Jack.

But McAuliffe was equal to the emergency. He kept Myers close to the center of the ring and himself out of reach of those terrific weapons, and he gave Myers a most unholy beating; still he only got a draw. Subsequently, McAuliffe met Myers in the first battle of the famous New Orleans carnival, where McAuliffe and Myers, Skelly and Dixon and Sullivan and Corbett fought. This was back in 1893. McAuliffe knocked out Myers in fifteen rounds.

When McAuliffe felt himself slipping, a little cherub of a lightweight, George Lavigne by name and the Saginaw Kid by reputation, was coming along famously. McAuliffe felt that he was through, and he passed the emblem along to Lavigne.

What is Ritchie's successor! Many of the old timers still hold that the equal of the little Lavigne Kid was never seen between the ropes. Wasn't he the lad who beat the terrible Joe Walcott, the Barbados Terror, in two meetings?

And wasn't it the little Lavigne who invaded England and beat the great Dick Burge, a man who frequently defied Jack McAuliffe? What more might be asked of a man?

BOSTON BRAVES HAVE USED MOST PLAYERS THIS YEAR

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Aug. 30.—Exclusive of players obtained by major league clubs from minor league teams through optional agreements, 293 players either have been traded by major league teams, purchased from each other or purchased from minor league teams during the last year, according to a list handed down by the national baseball commission today.

All trades or sales from August 20 to date are included.

The Boston Nationals lead in men obtained. Twenty-three players, new to the Boston National team, have been contracted for during the above-mentioned period. Cincinnati comes next with twenty-one. Detroit is third with nineteen, while the others are as follows:

Cleveland, 17; New York American, 15; Pittsburg, 14; St. Louis Nationals, 14; Chicago Americans, 14; St. Louis Americans, 12; Boston Americans, 11; Washington, 11; Chicago Nationals, 10; Brooklyn Nationals, 10; New oYrk Nationals, 4; Philadelphia Nationals, 4; Philadelphia Americans, 2.

The commission allowed the claims of the St. Louis American league club against Player E. Walker for $67.25 and against Player C. E. Wares for $27.50. The players now are with the Montgomery club.

Our old headline friend, the speed fiend, is back in our midst.

One thing is certain: none of that emergency currency is going to be sent to Huerta.

Preposterous!

The suggestion that a circus be granted the use of Piedmont park is so obviously improper and absurd that it should not receive a moment's consideration from any responsible city official. To pervert this valuable playground and civic center to such an end even for a day would be nothing short of an outrage upon the community. However large a price the circus might offer, it could not repay the damage and destruction that would follow the crush of wagons and tents and crowds. The walks and driveways which have been constructed with much expense and labor would be ruined. Shrubbery and flowers would be trampled to dust. Trees would be endangered, if not destroyed, and all the comfort and beauty which have required years for development would be sacrificed between a single sunrise and dusk.

If Piedmont park should be opened for one circus, it would thereafter be open for all; and so, within a few years this now delightful recreation center would become an unsightly waste, used only as an occasional show ground for caged animals and itinerant freaks. Instead of ministering, as it now does, to the pleasure and health of all the people all the time, it would degenerate into a public nuisance. Instead of enhancing the value of adjacent property, it would be an eyesore and a permanent detraction to that part of the city.

Many years ago Council decided that Piedmont park should no longer be used as an exposition ground, but should be reserved exclusively for park purposes. A few seasons ago Council ruled, in keeping with this wise policy, that no portion of the park should be diverted for school buildings, although the city was sorely in need of a new school house site. Surely, then, after having refused, and with good reason, these urgent domestic claims, our public officials will not turn the park over to alien interests for destruction. Such a proposal is so preposterously foolish and unjust that it will be indignantly rejected by all right-thinking citizens.

In a true spirit of reciprocity we are willing to allow Thaw to remain in Canada.

Huerta realizes how embarrassing it can be not to have the price of war in your pocket.

A Record for Safety.

The official report of railway accidents and casualties in the United Kingdom for the past year is a remarkable tribute to the caution and security with which transportation affairs are ordered in Great Britain. The number of passengers killed during 1912 was only one in sixty-eight million and the number injured was only one in nearly two million. Among employes, the record shows that one locomotive driver in thirteen thousand, six hundred and sixty-five was killed and one fireman in twelve thousand, seven hundred and nine. These figures indicate the wonderfully gratifying results that can be accomplished under an industrial regime that places safety first among its considerations.

While the record in the United States and in some other countries is not so creditable as that of the United Kingdom, there can be no doubt that the movement for the prevention of railway accidents is world-wide. Corporations everywhere, at least those corporations which have modern ideas of efficiency and good management, are exerting themselves in this important field, realizing that it is due their own interest as well as the public's that the number of accidents be reduced to the utmost attainable minimum. They realize that money spent for this purpose is well invested and that caution directed to this end is one of the essential elements of successful administration. In this connection, the Iron Trade Review interestingly observes:

"In the United States the campaign for safety is carried on even to a greater extent than in the United Kingdom. Railroad workers are organized down to the commonest laborer through committees to seek some means of preventing accidents. The end sought is to eliminate altogether the avoidable accident. All of the great steel plants in the United States have the dangerous places marked with red discs and on the vessels plying in the ore trade on the Great Lakes all the places of possible danger are conspicuously indicated. It is clear that the management is doing all it can to minimize accidents. Their elimination depends upon the alertness and intelligence of the men.

The fruits of these campaigns will be no less valuable to the corporations than to society. Neglect or indifference in this regard is stupid as well as criminal. Whatever is right is also wise and the performance of duty, whether on the part of an individual or a corporation, is a step toward true success.

Secretary McAdoo is proving himself the enemy of the Shylock.

Putting an End to Panics.

ECONOMIC conditions in the United States are quietly undergoing a profound and, at the same time, a very wholesome and constructive change. The legislation with which Congress is now concerned reflects a persistent demand on the part of the American public that the country's business affairs be placed upon a freer and safer basis. The tariff bill, which is soon to become a law, will strike the fetters from individual enterprise and normal competition, will lift a crushing weight of monopoly and thereby release new commercial and industrial energies. The banking and currency bill, which is equally hopeful of enactment, will carry forward and consummate the wise work thus begun; it will provide the definite means and the material through which this new freedom can be fully utilized.

These two measures are among the most important and far-reaching in the nation's legislative history, the one assuring a fresh era of business expansion, the other a fresh era of business confidence and security. The, are the omens and chief pledges of that great economic change which is steadily coming to pass; and they are filled with encouragement not only for the country's common interests but for the individual citizen as well, for the merchant, the banker, the manufacturer, the farmer, the working man. No law was ever yet a panacea or a final solution for all the problems, whether political, social or economic, that every people must work out. But these laws at least will afford a remedy for many of the larger and more violent ills our people have suffered.

The new banking and currency system, for instance, will unquestionably remove those artificial conditions from which distressing panics have arisen. Indeed, we may hope with good reason that when the elastic and responsive system now proposed is well established, financial panics will cease to threaten this country and the innumerable losses and discouragements which follow in a panic's wake will be things of the past.

One of the provisions of the pending bill which looks to this end is that whereby private control of the nation's monetary resources will be supplanted by government or public control in order that currency and banking machinery may operate for the good of the people as a whole without undue advantage for particular groups or centers. If there is one sphere of public interest which ought to be under impartial and trustworthy direction, it is that of finance. Yet, as conditions now are, this is far from true. The farmer now leans on the country banker and he on the city banker, the city banker leans on New York, while New York is accountable to no power higher than its own ungoverned will. Hence the far-reaching and sometimes perilous influences of Wall street. If a particular group of men decide from motives political or otherwise that money shall be tight and credit rigid, money straightway becomes tight and credit becomes rigid, regardless of natural circumstances and needs the country over. Thus it is possible for a few autocrats of finance to create the conditions of a panic. It need scarcely be said that power so vast cannot safely be left in the hands of any one circle of men. The Wilson administration purposes to take this power from private control and vest it directly in the Government which is responsible to all citizens alike, and which by virtue of its strength and constant guardianship will inspire that universal confidence on which business security depends.

There is another provision in the pending bill which will go far toward preventing panics. It is that which checks the concentration of monetary resources at one or two financial centers. Heretofore the country has depended almost entirely on New York for means to meet special demands of credit and enterprise. The South, for instance, has looked to New York for aid in moving crops; its bankers and farmers have had to accept such terms as New York chose to dictate. Each year as the crop-moving season approached, money would become scarce, rates of interest would rise, sometimes to a prohibitive figure, and funds for carrying forward ordinary commercial or industrial projects could scarcely be obtained on any terms. It is just such conditions as these that impede business and engender a feeling of pessimism. By forestalling such conditions, through a system that will make ample funds available in all parts of the country at all times, the new banking and currency plan will remove one the prime causes of financial panics.

How true this is is evidenced by the sustaining effects that immediately followed Secretary McAdoo's announcement that the Government would place fifty millions or more of its money at the disposal of Southern and Western banks on convenient terms for crop moving purposes. Since that timely offer was made, the business atmosphere, as everyone knows, has grown steadily clearer. Rumblings of distrust and alarm have died away and the South is entering its harvest season, strengthened with new sinews and brightened with new hope. It is the assurance that they are not dependent upon a remote and unresponsive financial center that has so cheered ad invigorated the business interests of our section. One of the main purposes of the banking and currency measure now before Congress is to make this assurance lasting and pervasive, to make such aid as the treasury department has extended to the South and the West permanently available. And so soon as that is done one of the underlying causes of what we term panics will be removed.

The administration bill provides among other things for the establishment of twelve regional reserve banks in different parts of the country and also for a supervisory federal board through which the Government will have competent control over the workings of the new system. The regional reserve banks will serve to prevent the undue concentration of money at one or two financial centers; they will accomplish for all seasons what Secretary McAdoo's special offer accomplished in a period of particular stress. The federal board, assisted by an advisory council of bankers, will constitute the essential public control which is now lacking in banking and currency affairs. Thus two great safeguards against panics will be provided. Thus, too, will be afforded the means for utilizing that larger measure of business freedom which is opening to the United States. President Wilson clearly enunciated the two great principles of banking and currency reform when he declared in his message to Congress:

"We must have a currency not rigid, as now, but readily, elastically responsive to sound credit, the expanding and contracting credits of everyday transactions, the normal ebb and flow of personal and corporate dealings. Our banking laws must mobilize reserves, must not permit the concentration anywhere in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country, or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses. And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set must be public, not private, must be vested in the Government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative."

The important features of the pending measure are those which embody these principles. Changes in the details of the bill, there will doubtless be; but it is safe to predict that these two essential provisions, that of public instead of private control and that which prevents the concentration of money at a few centers by particular interests, will stand unchanged. These are the great bulwarks which will protect the country's common business against panics and which, indeed, will make panics virtually impossible. They will assure the stability that comes from competent, disinterested control of monetary resources and will thereby largely remove the causes of business disturbance and alarm.

A panic has been aptly defined as "a state of mind." It is in most cases an unreasoning fear. Psychologists have debated whether a man first becomes frightened and then runs or first runs and then becomes frightened; and the weight of opinion, we believe, inclines to the latter theory. Certain it is that if no one started to run in times of financial stringency that overpowering fear which constitutes a panic would not develop. Bank deposits would not be wildly withdrawn; the gates of credit would not slam to; investments would not suddenly be checked, commercial and industrial enterprises would not be halted; men would not be thrown out of work; indeed that endless train of losses and hardships which a panic sets in motion could be entirely averted if the public mind were made proof against spasms of financial fear.

That is what the administration's banking and currency bill aims to accomplish. It purposes to make our monetary system so stable and at the same time so responsive to the country's common needs that it will inspire a steady and universal confidence in the light of which all business will press normally and hopefully forward. With all its wonderful vigor and resources, the economic life of the United States has long been groping amid the shadows and troublous paths of an outworn financial order. The nation's real genius has not been free to prove its splendid mettle. But a new and better day is breaking. The workmanly plans of the Wilson administration are nearing fulfillment and close behind them looms an era of prosperity and security in which all people will share.

It's not so certain that Mobile will get away with that pennant.

Jesse Mercer an Ideal State Game Commissioner.

If faithful and competent service is the true test of official worth, Jesse E. Mercer is pre-eminently entitled to reappointment as State game and fish commissioner. His record in this responsible and difficult office is a credit to himself and to the State. He has enforced a new group of laws so firmly and at the same time so tactfully that within the first brief term of his administration the cause of game protection has made greater progress in Georgia than in any other part of the South. Not only has he enforced the law but he has also inspired a wholesome and widespread sympathy for the principles of conservation so that the stautes have become embedded in public sentiment.

The task that confronted Commissioner Mercer when he entered office was unusually exacting and complex. He was charged with administering the first real game law Georgia had ever known. A man of less earnestness might easily have grown lax in the discharge of his duties. A man of less discernment might easily have brought the law into sharp disfavor. But Commissioner Mercer has erred in neither respect. He has done his duty to the letter but he has done it in a spirit of true leadership and education.

That is why the public has come to understand the underlying value and significance of the game protection law. That explains the State-wide satisfaction and support which Commissioner Mercer has earned. Everyone who is genuinely interested in conserving this important field of our natural resources, recognizes the high value of Jesse Mercer's service and his extraordinary fitness for continuance in office. In behalf of the State's interests, it is earnestly to be hoped that he will be reappointed.

A Commendable Plan for Southside Improvement.

The plans of the South Side Improvement Club to effect certain needed changes in the width and grade of Pryor street between Georgia and Ridge avenues merit the hearty support of city and county officials.

This thoroughfare is one of the most important in the entire community, whether it be considered from a standpoint of traffic or business or property interests. Between the points mentioned there is urgent need of a new trade, a new pavement and also of a wider street. Seventy-five per cent of the property owners have agreed to donate whatever land may be required for the carrying out of these improvements. They now ask the co-operation of the city and the county government in pressing this plan to completion. The enterprise is clearly one from which the public as a whole, as well as the South Side, will derive far-reaching benefits. It is to be hoped that the aid sought will be granted.

The Secret of Tammany's Power

(Kansas City Times.)

YOU all do know Tammany. At least, you may have believed you did. Certainly there has been of those who have looked upon it somewhat tolerantly as a great political organization whose chief business in life appeared to be to get the offices and afford reformers an outlet for their energies.

But when one man, using the power vested in him as the head of this political organization, calmly deposes the governor of the great Empire State you probably got something of a shock at the realization that there was a power greater than that of the people; and you perhaps, whence this power and how it is maintained. The object of this article, then, is to tell the story of Tammany and why it is punishing Governor Sulzer, which is not at all because he is accused of being corrupt, but because he disobeyed Tammany, because he is supporting a direct primary law, which would endanger Tammany's power by taking away the power of making nominations.

It was Tweed, one of the most notorious Tammany chiefs, you remember, who said:

"It doesn't matter to me who is elected, so long as I make the nominations."

THE BEGINNING OF TAMMANY.

The history of the organization that with comparatively rare intermissions has ruled New York for more than a century, begins within a fortnight after the inauguration of Washington, when, on May 12, 1789, the "Society of St. Tammany or Columbian Order," was founded.

The founder was one William Mooney, a man of Irish extraction and a soldier of the Revolutionary war, who appears to have served first upon one side and later upon the other in that struggle, and after the surrender at Yorktown to have gone into business as an upholsterer on Nassau street. He conceived the idea of forming the society for the purpose of opposing the designs and encroachments of the old aristocratic families and clubs and their party led by Alexander Hamilton, who desired a centralized government for the benefit of the propertied classes. At that time the suffrage was limited to the owners of real estate "to the value of 100 pounds, free of all debts."

The word "Tammany" itself was adapted from the name of an Indian chief of the Delaware tribe, Tammanend, who was famous for his sagacity and virtue, but about whom little is definitely known. As the Hamiltonians had canonized the men for whom their societies were named, so in derision the charter members of Mooney's order made Tammany a "saint."

The society was—and is—secret one, there being a set form of ritualistic exercises and of initiatory procedure. Besides its democratic and patriotic purposes professed, Tammany society undertook to give charity to destitute members and their widows and orphans. Sixteen years after its organization the order was incorporated as a charitable institution.

AARON BURR A TAMMANY LEADER.

In its earlier years Tammany had as members many Federalists. During Washington's second term, however, partisanship became extremely bitter and upon a rebuke by the president himself to the organization of such societies as Tammany, all the Federalist members left the order. From that time on the organization became purely a partisan one, the "Wigwam" becoming the social and political rendezvous of those opposed to the Hamiltonians.

With the leadership of Aaron Burr, who gained control of the society through his friends and proteges, Tammany was transformed from a speech making and pamphlet publishing society into a political organization, using "practical" methods, such as "packing" caucuses and conventions and being manipulated for selfish purposes.

Since 1800 Tammany has controlled New York City politics more than two-thirds of the time. With its hold upon the metropolis of the nation it has exerted a powerful influence upon state and national politics. It has maintained its strength and standing, notwithstanding the fact that many, if not the most, of its leaders, from Mooney down, have been guilty of theft, fraud and other crimes.

Mooney himself was modest in the amount of his embezzlement, stealing a mere $4,500 and expending other sums from public funds for "trifling" sums. Mooney." When Tweed came into power as Tammany's boss, the city treasury was looted by him and his associates of more than $100,000,000.

Richard Croker, a successor of Tweed, after several years' control of the big political machine, retired several times a millionaire. The fortune "made" from his position as Tammany's chieftain by the present boss, Charles F. Murphy, is believed to surpass that of Croker. Murphy is more selfish and "divides up" with fewer friends.

Notwithstanding its notorious record, Tammany has maintained itself as the strongest local political organization in America. One naturally asks, How and by what tactics? What methods has it employed to retain the approval—or at least the tolerance—of the people of New York?

In the first place, Tammany is unsurpassed in its adaptative character. In its early days, when the popular demand for manhood suffrage had become strong and insistent and threatened defeat to opponents, Tammany for its own preservation fell into line for the movement—and later claimed the credit for the victory. In a similar manner Tammany gave belated approval to a measure abolishing imprisonment for debt and again claimed the victory as its own.

Another of Tammany's methods often successfully used has been its policy of buying off opposition leaders with public offices or public contracts.

CHARITABLE GIFTS TO THE POOR.

Again, the shrewd and wily sachems have made a strong appeal to East Side New York through their gifts of charity to the poor. Tweed, for instance, in the winter of 1870-71, while stealing millions from the public purse, gave $1,000 to each of his aldermen to buy coal for the poor. To the needy of his native ward he gave $50,000.

Tammany district dealers, too, get jobs for their constituents, placing thousands of their followers on the payrolls of the city, city contractors and public utility corporations. In winter, dances for Tammany's friends are provided, and in summer, picnics and excursions. In many of the assembly districts—the units of the organization—club houses are furnished for "the faithful." These serve as social meeting places for Tammanyites.

Another reason—and the potent one—why Tammany is powerful is because it, as the New York City representative of the Democratic party, receives the votes of tens of thousands of citizens who habitually vote the Democratic ticket "straight."

One of the darkest sides of the picture is the method by which the organization keeps down opposition to it from citizens outside of its ranks and unfriendly to its methods, by threatening them with interference in their business, and, when its demands are not complied with, by carrying out the threats.

One instance will serve as a typical illustration. A Broadway hotelkeeper who refused to make a contribution to Tammany, shortly after his refusal became a prey to Tammany city inspectors who were constantly demanding changes in his building and at the same time suggesting that so-and-so (a Tammany contractor) would be a good man to do the job. From the Tammany inspectors' standpoint nearly everything in the hotel was out of order.

The "organization," which is able to ruin men engaged in legitimate business pursuits, has power almost absolute over the liquor dealers and the immoral and gambling resort keepers. These classes Tammany regularly "bleeds" for immense campaign funds. Other moneys which go to the leaders are levies made upon the salaries of office holders and "contributions" given by the public utilities for "protection" against interference.

HOW TAMMANY IS ORGANIZED.

Tammany styles itself a representative of Democracy and prates much of the "democratic" character of its control. The facts are that the Tammany organization is an autocracy, whose rule is "the boss." The method of organization by which this result is accomplished is illusive but effective.

"Tammany" has two branches. One is called the "Tammany Society," and the other "Tammany Hall." The Tammany Society is the secret, oath-bound organization, composed of the political boss and his subbosses, who, through a governing body—the thirteen "sachems"—have absolute control over the building known as Tammany hall—or the "Wigwam." This is on the north side of Fourteenth street, between Irving place and Third avenue.

"Tammany Hall is the name given the political organization, which ostensibly has no connection with the Tammany Society. The control of this body—which confines itself to Manhattan island and the Bronx, although it controls the boroughs of Brooklyn, Richmond and Queens—Tammany leaders say, is in the hands of the "general committee," a body of about 3,500 men annually elected at the party "primaries," in the thirty-five assembly districts. One member on the general committee is allowed to each district for every fifty Democratic voters.

CONTROL BY THE BOSS.

The delegation from each of the thirty-five districts in turn elects a member on the "executive committee" of Tammany Hall. This body is made up of these thirty-five representatives—the "district leaders"—and the chairman of the general committee and its treasurer and reading secretary, and the chairman of four other committees, together with the chairman and entire membership of the committee on municipal affairs, composed of sixteen members.

Since the time of the accession to the boss-ship of the present incumbent, Charles F. Murphy, ten years ago, the control of the executive committee by him has been made absolute. At his order the by-laws of Tammany Hall were so changed that if objection is offered to the choice of any district leader for executive committee, the other members of that committee may turn it down and select a person more agreeable to them as a substitute.

Thus the executive committee has been given power to perpetuate itself, the political districts into which New York City is divided have been stripped of the right to select their own representatives in the controlling committee of Tammany, and the authority of the boss has been made supreme.

Nor is this all. As chairman of the executive committee, Boss Murphy controls the party funds. Under the rules forced through in 1903, the boss appoints the treasurer, who reports to him alone, and who makes disbursements upon his sole authority. No member of the executive committee and no member of Tammany can question the acts or authority of the boss.

Should opposition candidates to him arise in the general committee primaries, he can spend the organization's money lavishly in defeating them. Or, in the improbable event of the election of a majority of the general committee unfriendly to him, he, the boss of Tammany, by virtue of his control over the Tammany headquarters (thorugh having a majority of friendly sachems of the Tammany Society), can exclude from Tammany Hall the opposition members elected.

And thus it is that a self-perpetuating executive committee controls the Democratic organization of New York City, and that this in turn is ruled over by a boss who is as powerful as he is irresponsible. It is for the perpetuation of this system that Charles F. Murphy and his underlings are desperately fighting against granting the public demand for direct primary nominations.

THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.
(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

When the American Bar association opens its annual convention in Montreal, Quebec, on September 1, the remarkable event of the lawyers of a great nation holding an official conclave upon foreign soil will take place for the first time in the history of the world. Another event equally remarkable will be the presence of the lord high chancellor of England, the Right Honorable Richard Burton Haldane, who will be the guest of honor at this American convention held upon British territory. The visit of an English lord chancellor to a foreign country is a most infrequent occurrence and is regarded as important as is a visit of royalty. The fact that Lord Haldane comes to this country in acceptance of the invitation extended to him by the American Bar association will go upon record as the greatest courtesy ever paid to the lawyers of one nation by the chief jurist of another. His stay in America will be short, extending over only five days.

Just what bearing the visit of the lord chancellor has had upon the location of the convention in Quebec no one can say excepting the president of the bar association, Frank B. Kellogg, of Minnesota, who will make the matter. Mr. Kellogg is diplomatically silent upon the subject excepting to say that he discussed the matter with Lord Haldane during his visit to London last winter. While the matter of selecting the location of the convention is in the hands of the executive committee, it was expected to be in Cincinnati until the circulars of announcement were issued a few weeks ago. An invitation to come to Montreal was extended to the association last year by Hon. John J. C. Achambault, the batonnier of the Montreal bar, who was a guest of honor at the convention held last year in Milwaukee.

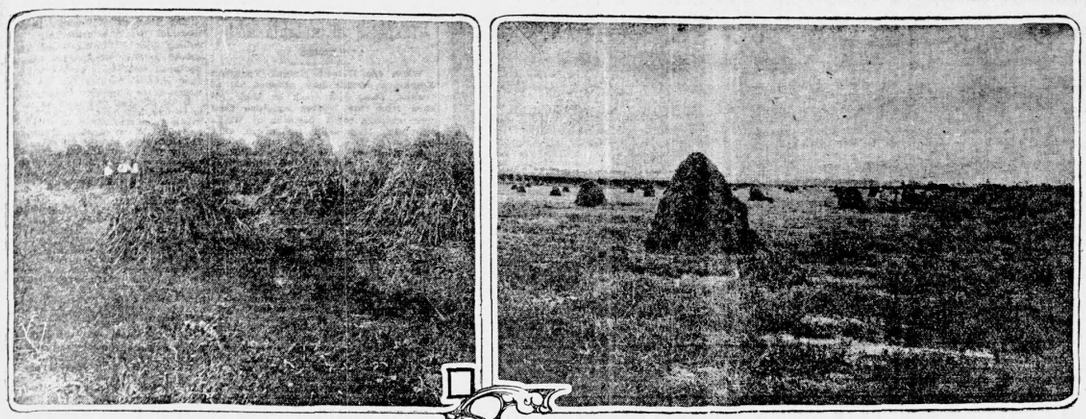
* * *

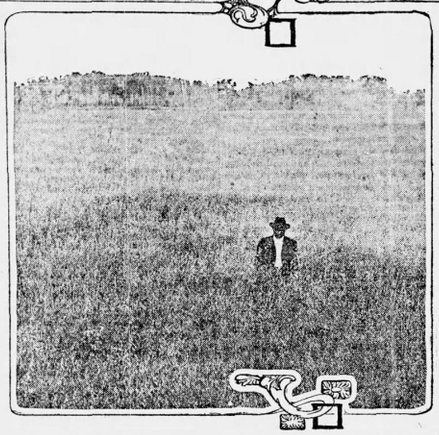
The association desires to have professional ethics made a branch of the examination for admission to the bar in every state. The court of appeals of New York has recently made such a provision, and General Thomas H. Hubbard has endowed a lectureship upon legal ethics in the Albany Law school. The disbarment of a lawyer known to be guilty of violations of these canons of ethics is necessary for the good of the public, as well as the honor of the profession. Formerly this was accomplished with difficulty, because the members of the bar seemed to hang together so closely. Now the bar associations of the different states are actively endeavoring to improve their standards. The New York City Bar association last year spent $16,000 to purge the bar of those whose conduct was discreditable. It employs a staff to investigate cases of which complaint was made, to clear the victim if innocent, or secure his resignation if guilty. Fourteen cases were handled by this staff last year and their efforts resulted in the disbarment of nine, the suspension of two, and the censure of three. False swearing, misappropriation of a client's money, arrangement for a division of fees with a layman, obtaining a verdict in court by the use of testimony known to be false, and attempt to bribe a court clerk to secure an irregular discharge, are among the most numerous of the charges made.

* * *

Qualification for membership requires that the applicant shall have been a member in good standing for five years of the bar of the state from which he comes. Among its members are justices of the supreme court. Joseph A. Choate, former ambassador to Great Britain, was the president of the association at the time of his appointment to diplomatic service.

STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WOULD HELP THESE GEORGIA FARMS





Georgia is one of the greatest agricultural states in the union, but its products need advertising just as everything else needs advertising. The state chamber of commerce would accomplish this end. The pictures are three examples of Georgia crops which the chamber would help in this way.

To the left, top, shows the kind of corn they grow on Hastings farm in Troup county. It is shocked, ready for the shredder.

The picture on the right top, is of a wheat field in Dooly county just after a bumper crop was harvested in September, 1910.

Chest deep in an oat field, 'way down in Ware county, is the bottom picture.

LAGRANGE, Ga., Aug. 30.—Already attracting nation-wide attention because of the aggressive and successful character of its organization, the LaGrange chamber of commerce, as individuals and as a body, was quick to recognize the importance and value of state chamber of commerce work in Georgia. At the first meeting of its board of directors following announcements regarding the proposed state chamber, resolutions of indorsement and hearty co-operation were passed and wired in to the promoters of the movement.

The action of the LaGrange body was a great encouragement to those behind the movement, and their attitude and action was followed quickly by the Albany chamber of commerce, another of the livest and most successful organizations in the south. In a very short time the committee appointed by the Atlanta chamber of commerce to investigate the matter of a state organization, was flooded with letters from all parts of the state, from individuals and commercial bodies, offering moral support and financial aid.

STATE-WIDE ENDORSEMENT.

Never in the history of similar movements has there been such a unanimous and all round approval as has been received by those fostering the plan for the state chamber. From the mountains to the seacoast and from the Alabama line to the South Carolina boundary, have come words of praise and offers of help.

Having received such hearty indorsement from all parts of the state, a meeting was called for the 23d of July to meet in Atlanta, and perfect plans for the organization of the state chamber of commerce. Prominent and representative citizens from all over Georgia were on hand and a temporary organization was effected, the final organization to be completed at a meeting to be held in Macon on September 16.

The enthusiasm manifested at this first meeting was inspiring and led all those present to become convinced that Georgia is on the eve of a wave of prosperity and growth unparalleled in her history.

GREAT WORK PLANNED.

At the meeting held in Atlanta in July mention was made of the fact that there seemed to be very general recognition of the fact that if the resources of Georgia together with its general inducements and attractions were properly exploited to the world, that Georgia would receive not less than $10,000,000 of annual benefit therefrom, which she is now losing to other states more active in presentation of their attractions to the people of the nation.

In addition to the outside work to be done for the advancement of the interests of the state, there is an "interior" work, within the boundary lines of the state, which is much needed, and which will prove every whit as valuable to the state as that to be done outside its borders. The state at large has been quick to recognize that the tieing together of all the commercial organizations in the state in a concrete way, and the linking together of all the aggressive forces for one united purpose, would inevitably result in untold good and unusual development for every part of the state.

The old adage that in union there is strength, it is claimed, could never be better demonstrated than through the uniting of all the aggressive and progressive forces of the state looking to the fostering and development of certain great and well known needs of the commonwealth.

Gunby Jordan, in indorsing the proposition, says:

"The idea of a state chamber of commerce in Georgia meets my approval. The reason is self-evident, as I would like to see Georgia grow and prosper.

"A state chamber of commerce, handled properly by competent people, will certainly do the state as much good as the city organizations of a similar character do the respective cities.

"This does not seem to be a new idea. California, other Pacific states and Canada have for a good many years been leaving us far behind in this idea.

"They have persistently advertised, and as glorious as their lands, that far less desirable land than is in Georgia has by this hypnotism, caused thousands of our own people to leave this, the best state in the union, for these western lands.

"If we really received no new-comers and invited no Northerners to settle among us, we would still do a great and valuable work for the state by teaching Georgians to know and appreciate this state at her true worth, and delight in making citizens of it and to be proud that they live in the land of peaches, peace and plenty."

SAYS FARMERS NEED IT.

Dan G. Hughes, assistant commissioner agriculture for Georgia, in a letter discussing the matter, says:

"I most heartily approve the plan for organizing a state chamber of commerce. In my opinion it would be beneficial to all of the towns in the state, but the greatest good which would result to the state at large would be that through such an organization the different state or national agricultural agencies have a direct avenue through which they can reach each and every farmer of every community in Georgia. In our state we have a great many agencies which are capable of rendering valuable service to the farming class of people, but for the lack of organized local bodies it has been almost a matter of impossibility for these agencies to work intelligently.

"I could sight you to towns in the state where good chambers of commerce are doing excellent work for the farmers of the county. A conspicuous example of such a chamber of commerce is that of Macon, Ga., where they maintain a county agent to carry on demonstration work, girls' canning club and boys' canning club. The people of Macon are as much interested in this organization as the people of the country, and the people of the country are as much interested as are the people of Macon.

"I think that Madison, Morgan county, contemplates perfecting its organization on a county-wide plan.

"All of this goes to prove that the main thing that we need in the state of Georgia is intelligent, concerted action. Georgia is an agricultural state. The development of Georgia is, therefore, dependent upon the agricultural development. Therefore, the agricultural development is not a matter in which the country people are alone interested, but is a matter which every Georgian should take a hand in.

"If I can be of service in promoting this movement I shall be very glad to have you call on me."

ATLANTA INDORSES MOVEMENT.

Though possessing the most aggressive chamber of commerce organization in the south, Atlanta is lending its hearty support to the movement looking to the permanent establishment of a strong state chamber of commerce.

Wilmer L. Moore, the president of the Atlanta chamber of commerce, in discussing the matter, said:

"There is need for an aggressive working force diligently at work at all times for the good of the state at large, both in advertising the state abroad and in assisting in the carrying out of development matters within the state.

"To accomplish the right kind of work there must be a paid force laboring all the time. It will take money and good men to run the state chamber of commerce properly, but the results obtainable will more than repay the money spent. I hope the proposition will go through—it has my hearty indorsement."

P. J. Paxon, former president of the Atlanta chamber of comerce, says:

"I cannot speak too highly or too strongly indorse the movement for a state chamber of commerce.

"You will probably recollect that during my administration as president of the Atlanta chamber of commerce I advocated just such an organization, for a state chamber of commerce must lead to a uniform development of the entire state of Georgia, and along its diversified lines one section can materially help another through a system of direct co-operation. The era has long since passed when petty jealousies exist between cities as far as the commercial spirit is concerned, it is now co-operation and competition. I am indeed glad to see the LaGrange chamber of commerce take the lead."

In addition to these men, leaders of business in Atlanta like Asa G. Candler, J. K. Orr, St. Elmo Massengale, Governor John M. Slaton, Mayor James G. Woodward, and hundreds of others, are giving the matter their heartiest kind of approval and suport, both moral and financial.

TO ADVERTISE GEORGIA.

It has long been recognized that one of the greatest needs of the state is the proper advertising of its possessions to the world. The west has been made to flourish like a bay tree planted by crystal waters, under a systematic plan of advertising. Georgia needs and must have just such a systematic advertising of her resources as has made the west famous and brought to her millions of population and hundreds of millions of dollars.

The plan of the state chamber promoters is to conduct an advertising campaign for Georgia to extend over several years, that will wake up the nation to the wonderful resources and opportunities which are offered within the borders of the state.

The state will be advertised in newspapers, magazines, through booklets and by sending men all over the country to tell the story of the Empire State of the South. And it will be easy to get the eye of the nation upon the state, because there is no state in the union which has so much to offer, and which has made such remarkable strides, as Georgia within the past few years.

MANY INDORSE MOVEMENT.

It would be impossible to give even a brief outline of the hundreds of letters of indorsement which have come to the promoters of the state chamber of commerce. Here are a few, which will serve to show how widespread is the interest in the movement:

"It will encourage the agricultural regeneration of the state."—Joseph D. Davis, Albany, Ga.

"A campaign such as you propose is the best way to get the state of Georgia before the public with its wonderful opportunities."—G. L. Williams, St. Louis, Mo.

"The concerted effort of resourceful men for the purpose of establishing facilities for analysis, research and study of all agencies for the state's good should be met with success."—Marcus A. Bierman, New Jersey state chamber of commerce.

"I congratulate the citizens of Georgia on what I know will be a successful movement."—Herrendon, Geneva chamber of commerce, Geneva, N. Y.

"You can count on the Waycross board of trade to assist you in every movement."—W. E. Sirman, president.

"This plan under consideration should be effective and very successful."—High G. Keegan, Fort Wayne Ind.

"Morgan county chamber has evolved into the one flexible tool by which the true cohesive progress of the state to its God given destiny can be accomplished, the county chamber fitted to be joined to like organizations in a state-wide federation."—G. C. Bradley, general secretary of Morgan county chamber of commerce.

R. J. Nelson, a prominent operator of Chicago, wrote to Mr. Haden: "You people of Georgia have taken hold of the problem of development on the right track; there is a rich future for the state chamber of commerce."

The citizens of south Georgia have especially rallied to the call, replies by hundreds offering co-operation have poured in, and when the meeting of county representatives was held on the 23d of this July, the success of Georgia state chamber of comerce was assured so far as south Georgia was concerned.

THE GENERAL PLAN.

1. To induce each town of sufficient population, not already organized, to form a local trade body. Wherever it is the consensus of opinion of the local organization, then to have the people of the county, or rural sections adjacent, co-operate either through full or associate membership as may be best.

2. The details of each body thus formulated to be fixed by such body to meet its particular needs. A general plan based on experience to be submitted to each town at its first meeting, for its suggestive value.

3. In addition to the development of manufacturing, city improvement and other duties within the scope of trade organization, there are other things to be accomplished and among them the following:

4. To encourage road building of permanent kind. Friendly rivalries between counties as to the greatest mileage of good roads constructed in a certain time in ration to population; challenge from one county to adjacent counties that if the one will construct new roads to its county boundary, the challenger will meet at the county line with a road of equal quality; to agitate road building to be paid for in bonds, or by immediate taxation, or in part by both. Otherwise stimulating road building.

5. To encourage development of schools; friendly rivalries as to which county would have the largest number of school children in actual attendance in proportion to population; the lowest record of illiteracy after a given time; the largest number and finest character of scholarships between schools in the same county and between county and county; otherwise stimulating the schools.

6. To encourage better health conditions; the physical examination of school children; teach rudiments of health and its care in the schools; establish county and local sanitary regulations; otherwise better the public health.

7. To encourage diversity of crops, promote live stock and dairy industry; to induce business men of the towns to provide public hay-presses, warehouses, cold storage for perishable products; to establish creameries, to develop a ready cash market in the towns for hay, corn, butter and eggs, truck crops and like rural industries that bring in ready money throughout the year, and at the same time, fortify against the approach of the boll weevil.

8. To provide for the publication under the supervision of the state agricultural department, of a booklet giving all the material facts of Georgia which an incoming settler would desire to know, giving it county by county, having this printed in large quantities and in very attractive form and furnish at cost to every local member of the organization.

9. To create a fund to keep the name of Georgia in the large northern and northwestern periodicals, inviting the readers to write for literature, all inquiries to be classified according to the wishes of the inquirers and furnished to the local board of each section which is thus concerned and such local boards may take up with the Inquirer direct with a view to securing him as an investor, or settler, or both.

Song of the Hour

In the Dark Age Yet.

ROME, Ga., Aug. 18.—The city council of Rome has amended its civic code and given the right to the superintendent of the street department or superintendent of the city chaingang to whip convicts on the city chaingang.

Heretofore it has been necessary to take the prisoners to the city hall and have the city marshal administer corporal punishment. There was some opposition to the new rule, and there is considerd public sentiment against the corporal punishment of convicts.—News item.

Dear God! in this day of enlightenment,
With love grown strong in the hearts of men,
Is this vestage left of punishment
Which belongs to the darkened age of sin?

Lo! the prison robe, with its sign of shame
And chains that clank in the lonely night—
Are these not enough for a blackened name,
And enough for the victim's awful blight?

To these will you add, O man! the rod
That cuts and burns till the red blood flows:
Has mercy been lost in the prison sod
For the poor unfortunate's lonely woes?

Think, where a grief-torn maiden weps
In his lonely home; where the busy wife
In sorrow, a faith in the father keeps,
While the lash cuts more than the keenest knife!

Can ye be men, who make these laws
And smile, as the victim feels the pain
Of the cruel lash, and all because
He belongs to you and the prison chain?

And ye, who foster in content
Such aged cruelty and shame,
Will some day find your punishment
In blight upon your children's name!

BOY OF SEVEN MEETS DEATH BENEATH TRAIN

George Baker, Jr., Crushed as He Reaches Out His Hand to Grasp Engineer's

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TIFTON, Ga., Aug. 30.—George, Jr., the seven-year-old son of George Baker, a wholesale grocer of Tifton, was killed instantly shortly after 7 o'clock this morning when run over by a car of lumber on the tracks of the Tifton Terminal company on Love avenue near the postoffice.

The little fellow was standing on the track watching the switch engine which was on another track and did not see the car of lumber in time to get off the track.

Engineer McDuffie saw the danger of the little fellow and attempted to save him, but just as he reached out for the boy and the little fellow tried to catch his hand the car struck him.

Just a Kid.

I'm just a little kid.
I do as I am bid;

The balance of my days
Are passed in various ways.
Not crimes.

It must be understood.
When mother says I'm good,
I'm "It."
When I'm a naughty chap
She does not rage or slap.
She has no fit.

It's different with dad.
He knows his little lad;
Says I'm "a limb."
He takes me on his knee;
Explains the case to me.
You can't fool him.

MISS MAMIE L. PITTS WRITES ON LAND OF MIDNIGHT SUN

These two letters have been received by The Journal from Miss Mamie L. Pitts, principal of the State Street school, who is spending her summer vacation abroad. One was written in Molde, Norway, and the other aboard the "King Harold" on a voyage to the North Cape. They are interesting impressions of an Atlantian in the Land of the Midnight Sun:

MOLDE, Norway, July 21.—Norway has been opened to tourists for many years, but there is still room for improvement in the hotels. Travel here has never been great, so they are frequently closed for nine months. All of these places are timber houses and the walls are so thin that the slightest noise can be heard. The bedroom floors are bare except for a small rug, and very plainly furnished with wooden chairs, bedstead, washstand, small table, and a bad wall mirror. A few hooks complete the room equipment. Closets or wardrobes are unknown.

It is both amusing and serious to listen to experiences of sleepless nights. One morning a member of our party complained that he had slept very little, after retiring at 11:30. At 12 o'clock his nextdoor neighbor came in, moved a chair on the bare floor, dropped a bunch of keys, splashed water, and finally fell into bed with creaking springs. A silence of thirty minutes followed when the whistle of the boat announced that the arrival of a tourist party. They soon entered the hotel, and an army seemed going up the stairway. Doors banged, voices were rung, and the tramp overhead grew deafening. Shoes were tossed off in numbers that would excite the envy of a centipede, and one hilarious couple insisted on trying the fire escape, which consists of a rope with many puzzling loops, and is found in every room, with printed directions for using. Silence at last for fifteen minutes, and then came monotonous snores from all parts of the building, deep inspirations and noisy expirations that rapidly increased in volume until the exhausted gentleman fell into a doze and dreamed that every towering peak that scrapes the skies of "Norge" had become an active volcano, and hot lava had turned each quiet fjord into a steaming, puffing, roaring geyser. This experience is typical, and one might add that it is impossible to shut out the light, so I would not recommend a Norse tour for insomnia.

But better times are coming to the hotels and improvements will follow. This is the most prosperous summer in their history, and they are trying to please. The bed linen is clean, and the food wholesome. Fish and eggs are cheap and abundant.

We spent a day driving through the Romsdal, a narrow valley washed by the Rauma river, and bounded on each side by solid walls of granite towering from 3,000 to 6,000 feet. These bare mountains of stone are grooved and furrowed by the snows of unnumbered centuries. I counted ten waterfalls gliding softly and smoothly side by side, while another fell with volume fell roaring, splashing and tossing high its silver spray. Patches of snow shone here and there and a small glacier peeped from a crevasse. During the day clouds hovered over the mountain sides, but suddenly the sun came out and painted a rainbow where the clouds had lain. It would seem an easy task to find the end of a rainbow here, as it spreads itself at close range.

In the valley are new mown fields patches of wheat, rye and potatoes, and heavily laden apple trees. Clambering to the second-story windows of the clean, white cottages are honeysuckle vines covered with blossoms. Wild flowers are sprinkled very where and broad-leafed ferns line the roadside. Daisies, pansies, buttercups, blue bells, golden rod, all bloom side by side without regard to season. Small trees are frequently seen on the turf roofs.

On one of our drives we stopped at Vestnes for lunch. This is a small village at the entrance of a fjord, flanked by wooded hills and snow-capped peaks. It was a beautiful day. The bright sunlight clothed the mountains in the royal hues peculiar to Norway and the clear waters of the fjord reflected all their blue depths. No sound broke the stillness. Near the hotel is the white timber church, duplicates of which we find in every town. Around the church is the village cemetery with graves mounded high, but flattened on top, and each with a cross of wood or iron at the head. As I stood at the gate, fourteen young girls entered, two of them carrying a large basket of flowers. I followed them to a new made grave where they reverently placed the flowers and then quietly went away. Not a word had been spoken. The unbroken silence of these people is remarkable. Later, I met the Lutheran minister, and in fairly good English, he told me that these girls belonged to the confirmation class and he hoped to impress on them not to emigrate to America. They are very anxious to keep their young people at home.

I find that I was much mistaken in regard to the prevalence here of tuberculosis or "catching," as they call this disease is the plague of Norway, and the government maintains sanitariums for the treatment of both those in the incipient stage. I was shown through the sanitarium at Molde. It is a large white timber building, set in extensive grounds, laid out in broad drives and winding walks and lined with gorgeous flowers, a great variety of the most beautiful evergreens, close cut hedges of fir, and tall, slender beech trees.

There are recreation rooms, where games, many musical instruments, and writing materials are provided. In one wing of the building is the chapel. Men and women have separate recreation rooms, but their dining room is the same. The attendant showed me into this room just as the gong sounded for dinner. The patients, numbering about sixty, came trooping in, laughing and talking more like a set of happy students than people in the clutches of a dreadful disease. Most of them are young, one being a mere child. The long tables were as attractive as spotless linen, shining silver and polished glass could make them. At each plate was a glass of milk. Steaming potatoes and a meat mixture were served and the dessert was fresh apricots and tapioca, a favorite dish here.

In front of the main building is a long wooded pavilion open on one side. Here the patients came after dinner, lay down in adjustible chairs and wrapped themselves in blankets to keep off the penetrating chill of this atmosphere.

This disease is attributed to the cold, damp climate, but I think there are other causes. The houses are kept excellently heated that the windows are closed to keep out the piercing cold, and they are rarely opened even in summer. The laboring classes, or peasants, take no care of themselves. They drive all day in taxi rain and stand idle in the street or fields in drenching showers. I see small children sitting on wet ground and mothers with babies in their arms standing before their outdoor fires in the rain.

We spent two days at Molde, a town founded in the fifteenth century. It must be remembered that Norway has no large cities. Most of the towns are mere fishing places. Natural scenery is the attraction here, and these villages are starting points for the valley drives, or boat trips on the fjords. Molde, beautifully situated on the Moldefjord, has a population of about 2,000, and is justly called the "flower garden of Norway." I am amazed to find flowers, which we are accustomed to tend with such care, growing here, three degrees from the arctic circle, to fabulous sizes in the open air.

An American gentleman, who has been around the world and patronized the barber shops in every city of note, had his first experience with a woman barber at Molde. He told me that he had never seen her equalled in speed, and the work done was eminently satisfactory. He was seated in an ordinary chair. There were no after frills, and the price paid was fifty ore, about 13 cents in American money.

The fancy prices demanded of tourists on the continent have not yet reached Norway. I paid 6 cents to have a shirtwaist laundered and 20 cents to get the ribbon on a hat turned, pressed and replaced.

At this mid-summer season it is so cold and damp that we are forced to wear heavier clothes than we need in February. The weather man here has a puzzling problem, as rain and sunshine, bitter cold and spring warmth is frequently the record of a day.

JULY 24.

Aboard the Steamship Kong Harald, July 28.—We sailed on the Kong Harald for a cruise to the North Cape, or "Nordkap," as they write it here. Many of the boat lines have tourist steamers that make this trip when the midnight sun is visible during the months of June and July. The Kong Harald is a Norwegian steamer and was on her sixth and last voyage for the season, except for the annual trip to Spitsbergen. The captain told me that he had carried 400 passengers during the summer. About 100 people is the capacity of the ship. The state rooms have no upper berths and are fitted with every convenience. There is plenty of deck room, the boat officials are courteous, the table excellent and everything is done to make the trip pleasant. The cruise is taken in six days and covers 1,200 miles, a distance of 1,476 miles. I kept a diary on board which gives some account of how the time was spent.

JULY 28.

We sailed from Trondjehm, Norway, on the Kong Harald, at 9 o'clock p. m. There was a large crowd on the pier to see us off, but true to Norwegian habit there was no noise.

JUNE 24.

We had breakfast at 8 o'clock, the warning gong sounding at 7:45. After breakfast the writing room was filled with people getting mail ready for the "bottle post." Letters and cards were put in bottles which were thrown into the sea near the village of Brono and picked up by fishermen. An interesting we passed the island of Torgen on which is a queer-looking bare hill called "Torghatten." It is about 825 feet high and looks like a big boat floating in the sea. The story is told that a Norse giant in days of old shot a gigantic arrow through the hill. There is now quite a natural telescope through which may be seen the sea with numerous rocks and islands.

After the 1 o'clock lunch everybody crowded on deck to see the "Seven Sisters," wonderfully shaped hills rising bare and desolate from the snow-covered sand feet. As they gradually came into view we counted one, two, three; eln zwei, drei; en, to, tre; un, deux, trois, English, German Norwegian and French people in chorus. Stern looking "Sisters" they are these mountain peaks up in line. Legend has been busy with their domestic history and tells a strange story of the cause that made them locate in these bare waters. The Carnegie library in Atlanta has a Norse book which states all these legends most interestingly.

At 7 o'clock p. m. a cannon shot announced that we had crossed the Arctic circle. The captain made a speech on island which the guide books tell us looks like a horseman. It has a fanciful shape, but I should not have thought of comparing it to a horseman except for the legend connected with it.

At 9 o'clock p. m. we cast anchor and went in motor and row boats to the shore to visit the Svartisen glacier, an enormous expanse of snow and ice covering a space about thirty-one miles long and eighteen miles wide. Long before we landed this great icefield loomed up. Distances are so deceptive here that we thought the glacier came almost to the shore, but it took a rapid twenty minutes' walk to reach the base. Waiting in line on the landing place were women selling offering small bunches of wild flowers for sale. It was our first trip to the frigid zone and everybody had put on as many clothes as he could. Lapp, expecting freezing weather, but cloaks, veils and even gloves were soon discarded. The peasant women wore dresses in light-weight coat suits and the children wore no wraps. At 11 o'clock the boat whistled for us to return and we motored back in broad daylight.

JULY 24.

Though we are still inside the frigid zone we pass many small villages and farm houses surrounded by patches of potatoes. Now and then a rocky inlet appears with a light house in the center. Double and triple lines of mountains are always in the distance in view. Bare peaks stretch themselves before shadowy chains silhouetted against grim giants shrouded in snow mantles centuries old. People on deck hustle continually in search of a warm place. Rain and sunshine follow in quick succession and rainbows hang their brilliant arches over the waters.

We had dinner at 6 o'clock in order to be ready for the landing at Tromso at 7:30. As our first opportunity to see the midnight sun come tonight, everybody is solicitious about the unsettled weather, so a burst of applause greeted the dazzling rays that suddenly flooded the room at dinner.

We spent one hour and fifteen minutes at Tromso.

The timber houses are built closely together on the water. The shops have display windows in which are shown shirt waists, summer hats, low shoes and other goods suggestive of a warm climate. There are two shops filled with beautiful furs, but very expensive. The cheapest neck piece being 90 kroner. A kroner is about 2 cents. The fur shops have immense elk heads for a sign.

At midnight the clouds were heavy and there was "ikke solen," no sun.

JULY 25.

We landed at Hammerfest at 8 o'clock this morning. This is the northmost town of the world with a population of 7,000. There is a forest of masts in the harbor, for ships come here from all parts of Europe and are loaded with cod and cod liver oil. We went on shore in small row boats and walked through the streets to the Lapp encampment, and the unpaved streets were flooded. There were few sidwalks, as in most towns here. The shops are built on steep hills. There is little vegetation. Goats walk through the streets and watched anxiously for the clouds to scant grass. Two wheeled carts drawn by the Norwegian ponies are used for hauling purposes. There are two three-story frame houses painted white or yellow, and behind each closely shut window peep pots of blooming roses, fuchias and geraniums.

"We visited a fish packing house and saw them baling dried stock fish for export to America and elsewhere. There is a postoffice, telegraph, court house, three churches, moving picture place, in fact everything you would expect to find in a modern town. The school house is a commodious two-story structure furnished with single desks and lighted by electricity. In one corner of the playground is a shelter place where the children have lunch in bad weather. Education is compulsory in Norway through the grammar course.

Conspicuous in the town is a granite column surmounted by a bronze ball erected in memory of the measurement of degrees from 1816 to 1852 by Russian, Swedish and Norwegian geometers. The temperature is the same that we have on a cold, raw, December day.

As we neared the North Cape during the afternoon the sea got so rough that all the passengers fled to their state rooms. Our boat tossed for hours like a living thing and few dared to leave their rooms. As we passed the "Bird Rock" two cannon shots were fired and thousands of sea fowls flew up into the air. At last we came in sight of the dark gray slate rock, 1,017 feet high, projecting into the sea and commonly called North Cape, though it is really an island. The captain sought a shelter-ed cove to anchor and there we cast anchor. Everybody came in bravely in spite of the fearful experience of the afternoon, but I noticed that few of the courses were touched. After dinner we steered back to the cape and were landed in a row boat towed in by a motor. A narrow, rocky, zigzag path leads to the broad plateau at the top. We carried stout poles and pulled ourselves up by the rope that bordered the path. It is a very steep climb of an hour. A walk of twenty minutes more across a bare, bleak, rocky, wind-swept plateau brought us to the topmost point and we looked out over a boundless waste of Arctic waters. Here at the top of the land we found I planted a Confederate flag and a Georgia flag. There were fifty Americans in the party, but none of them had ever seen a Confederate flag. No one else had thought of bringing a flag, so ours flew its stars and bars without a rival. When midnight came a fog had fallen on the ocean and the rain began to pour, so we did not see the midnight sun.

The descent from the top was even worse than the ascent, as the rain made the path very slippery. Umbrellas were impossible, so we got soaked to the skin and soundly. The captain greeted us with a cheery "Good morning." It was 1:30 a. m. and we could easily tell from the change of light that a new day had dawned. The difference, so inexplicable and yet so discernible, between morning and evening light is especially noticeable here, as they follow each other in quick succession. The boat started on its voyage again at 2:00 a. m. and in the bright light of an Arctic morning we watched the slow disappearance of "The huge and haggard shape

Of that unknown North Cape,
Whose form is like a wedge."

July 16—This morning the maid brought our clothes dried and cleaned and we breakfasted at 8 o'clock. All overshoes were cut to pieceson the rocky descent last night and we are hoping for dry weather at the remainder of our landing places. The sea was still quite rough and all kept close to their staterooms until lunch at 1, when we left the open sea and entered a sound. Here it was smooth sailing. The sun shone brightly and the mountains stood out in bold relief. Snow fields lay in the deep fissures and on the towering crests, and in the ever present clouds, rainbows played hide and seek. We are far above the Arctic circle, but houses surrounded by green patches nestle wherever a foothold can be found. Glaciers are plentiful. They lie in blue and white heaps in the crevasses.

We landed at Lyngsedet at 4:20. This little village has one church and the three-story house and other well-built cottages. Broad leafed vines climb to the second story windows of the houses and lettuce and turnips grow in the gardens. Our flannels and heavy wraps make us comfortable, but we see occasionally a barefooted girls clad in thin dresses. Wild flowers bloom in abundance, and I can hardly realize that I am only 164 miles from the North cape. A splendidly built road leads into the town.

We visited the Lapp encampment, a short distance out. These people are the remnants of the aboriginal inhabitants of Norway and Sweden. Most of the *Norwegian Lapps have ceased to be no-*madic.

These tribes come from the Swedish Lapland. They live in Sweden during the winter, but bring their herds of reindeer to the Norwegian coast during the summer to get pasturage and escape the gnats. The Norwegians do not want these people, and it required special treaties in the separation of Norway and Sweden to grant this privilege to them. We found them living in tents, or skin huts. The family usually has a small one-room tent that is occupied by thirty people. A log fire was in the center of the floor and dried leaves, dirty blankets and a few cooking utensils were the only furnishings.

The men carve horn spoons and paper knives made of reindeer horn. The reindeer are milked twice a week. The milk is very thick and so strong that it has to be diluted with water before it can be used. It is the chief article of food with the Lapps.

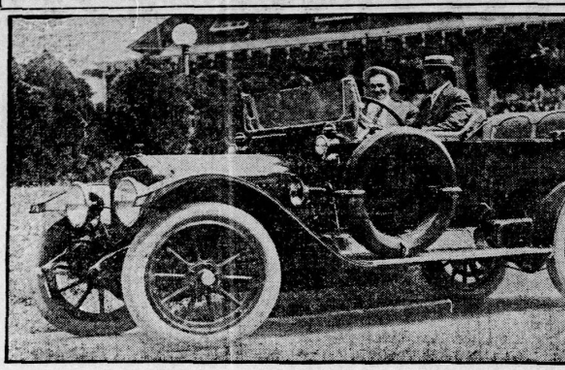
At night we were in the Lyngenfjord, hoping to see the midnight sun, as it was our last opportunity. Fogs and storms are so frequent that it is a rare fortune to see this spectacle. The best time is from June 15 to July 8. We watched anxiously for the clouds to lift. At 11 o'clock a rift came that gave us a glimpse of the red glow and we were reminded of the Swedish poet, Tegner's description:

"The midnight sun on the mountains lay,
And blood-red was its hue;
It was not night, it was not day,
But wavered 'twixt the two."

The captain was sadly disappointed because the sun refused to shine at midnight. We felt personally responsible for this bad behavior.

July 27.—We sailed through the

THE BEAUTIFUL NEW WHITE



This shows the 1914 Five-passenger 60 horse power White, which is attracting much attention. At the wheel is Mr. R. E. Woodruff, District Mgr. for the White Co., and Mr. W. D. Alexander, Mgr of the Truck Department. Both are well known automobile men and are two of the livest wires in the game.

HOW TO REMOVE CARBON AND CLEAN ENGINE

That tax-free ethyl alcohol, manufactured under the United States government *laws—known commercially as de-*natured alcohol, was the most natural material for the removal of carbon and the cleansing of gasoline engines, was well demonstrated in a lecture last evening by Prof. A. Angiada, of New York, in the convention hall at Kansas City, before those in attendance at the National Gas Power show. Prof. Angiadh is chairman of the metropolitan section of the Society of Automobile Engineers and an expert in the manufacture and operation of gas engines.

He treated the subject of denatured alcohol—which is carbon remover and cleanser of all types of gasoline engines, and his talk was of especial interest owing to the fact that his views were ethe result of patient experiments extending over a period of twelve months.

Prof. Anglada told in detail the causes of carbon formation in engine cylinders and the disadvantagges resulting therefrom. The feature which seemed to impress the convention was the ex*treme ease* with which an engine could be treated with denatured alcohol as well as the absolute harmlessness and safety of the product.

In connection with his paper, Prof. Anglada brought out the fact that the ordinary gasoline farm engine can be run without change of denatured alcohol by simply starting it on gasoline, shut*ting off the gasoline and introducing* denatured alcohol into the inlet pipe, and that a series of experiments conducted in the presence of the secretary of the association had proven that denatured alcohol, when thus introduced, served as a scavenger of troublesome deposits and loosened and drove them out with the exhaust gases.

MOVING PICTURE TAKEN OF 7,000 EMPLOYES

To represent the industrial growth of greater Detroit, a mass picture of 7,000 employes of the Packard Motor Car company is included in an educational film being prepared under the direction of the Detroit board of commerce.

In order to permit taking the picture on the company's time, the Packard officials advanced the regular Saturday closing hour by twenty minutes. This time cost the company $2,000 in round figures without taking into account the value of the time lost in the course of making preparations. Approximately 200 foremen and department heads were notified of the plans and given detailed instructions.

The camera was focused from a raised platform thus giving an excellent view of the mass of workers as they poured from the factory.

When thrown upon the screen the picture will show the moving mass in the immediate foreground with a background formed by a building 940 feet long, one of thirty structures which make up the Packard plant.

Raftsund today, one of the Lofoten islands, and the weather was calm enough for us to enter the narrow Troldfjord enclosed by vertical walls of granite. The boat landed at Svolvaer to take on coal. We walked through the town. It is Sunday afternoon, but the small boys and girls are playing ball together on the village green. This place has a large guano *factory and is the busiest fishing sta-*tion on the Lofoten islands. We sailed past the Lofoten chain for hours. From 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 of stock fish are caught on these banks annually.

July 28.—We retraced our outward course today, and will land at Trondhjem in the morning at 9 o'clock.

The captain's dinner tonight was a great success. The room had been darkened and the electric lights turned on. A dark room was in itself a novelty, as we had not been darkness since coming to this sunlit land. The midnight sun came tonight, or "midnight sun." Between the courses the ship band played the national air of each country represented, beginning with "Columbia," in compliment to the great number of Americans present. The "King of the Norwegian Seas" was introduced and he presented to each guest an engraved certificate signed by "his majesty" and countersigned by the captain, setting forth in Norwegian that in consideration of our having crossed the polar circle we were each entitled to the new name written on the certificate. Names of stars, planets, constellations, or mythological personages had been given.

MANY VISIT THE OAKLAND FACTORY

"There are few people today," says George E. Daniels, vice president of the Oakland Motor Car company, "who are not intimately acquainted with the motor car in the making as well as the finished product. It can be safely said that there is no other manufacturing enterprise in which the ordinary man holds such a great interest.

"This is due primarily to the extent to which the motor car has entered the daily life of the people. But the policy of the manufacturers themselves, in opening their doors to the public, has also had its effect.

"American people are curious; they are not to be satisfied with the superficial knowledge of a subject, but seem to have an inborn desire to delve to the root of things.

"Furthermore, they consider first-hand knowledge of double value. This is evidenced by the fact that hundreds of visitors daily pass through the doors of the great automobile factories. And even the most cursory visitor must gain a fund of information relative to motor vehicles.

"At the Oakland plant we entertain in a month enough people to make a small sized community. Some are Oakland owners acquiring information concerning their car, others are prospective purchasers, while a great many others apparently no immediate interest. But none fail to be impressed by the wonders of modern car building.

"And it is surprising the number of women we conduct through the buildings. They are even more curious and questioning than the men. They also seem to have a grasp of mechanical details to a far greater extent than they are commonly credited with. All of the large plants provide guides, whose duty it is to accompany visitors on their tour of inspection."

BOOSTING GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT

"The setting aside each year of one or two days for the purpose of appropriating money or labor to the cause of good roads," says F. A. Seiberling, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio, "is a fitting suggestion, which if carried out, will aid materially in promoting the good roads movement.

"Governor O'Neil, of Alabama, certainly hit the nail on the head when he included this in a recent proclamation," says Mr. Seiberling. "If every state would take this step, and its citizens would contribute enthusiastically and liberally, splendid results would be achieved. A large per cent of this would be added to the public's present attitude towards this question, if they could only realize the beneficial results that would be derived from this concerted action.

"Not only should the farmer be interested in such a move, for the benefit the results would afford him in transporting his products to market, but also the suburbanite who commutes every day by automobile or motorcycle between the city and his home.

"Good roads are a valuable asset in maintaining an automobile, and are a large factor in reducing the expense of upkeep to a minimum. Tires especially are subject to improper road conditions which have a severe and detrimental effect upon them.

"When this suggestion of Governor O'Neil's is recognized and taken advantage of by each state, Good Roads day will ultimately result in being observed as a holiday of note. Each citizen of every state will no doubt willingly contribute to the cause. Providing this epoch arriving, many localities will be enabled to come in closer touch with the surrounding country."

BEATS TRAIN AND SAVES MAN

In a race with a fast freight near Visalia, Cal., Steve J. Alipoz on his motorcycle outdistanced the engine and saved the life of a man who was asleep on the tracks. Alipoz was riding alongside the freight when the headlight of the engine showed the form of a man lying a short distance down the tracks. Turning on full power and forging ahead of the engine, Alipoz jumped from his machine, grabbed the sleeping man and dragged him aside just in time to miss being struck by the train.

HUPMOBILE MAN ENTERTAINS 100 KNIGHT TEMPLARS OF OMAHA

Places 25 Hupmobiles at the Disposal of Knights and Ladies

When the Detroit Knight Templars Damascus commandery, stopped off at Omaha, Neb., last week on their return from the Denver conclave they were given a royal reception by W. L. Huffman, Hupmobile dealers at that city.

Mr. Huffman with twenty-five Hupmobiles and drivers awaited the arrival of the knights at the Union depot in Omaha. When the train pulled into the station he placed the cars at their disposal and proposed that during the time for stop-over, they tour about the town in the Hupmobiles.

The procession headed up Main street with banners of the knights flying from every car, and it looked more like the Knight Templars on parade rather than a mere sight-seeing crowd.

After the knights and ladies had toured Omaha for more than four hours they returned to the station and a special meting was called wherein Mr. Huffman was proposed for honorary membership of the Damascus temple, together with Mr. Mellen, general agent of the Chicago and Northwestern railway, who donated the special train.

All the members of the commandery personally thanked Mr. Huffman for the very pleasant time accorded them, for the welcome was as rousing as any which they had received on their entire trip.

FIRESTONE TIRES ARE BULLETPROOF

General Lucio Blanco, commanding the constitutionalist forces in Mexico, undoubtedly owes his life to the effectiveness of his tires to withstand the bullets from the federal sharpshooters.

The tires, Firestone Non-Skids, Blanco drove his Firestone shod car into the *thickest of the recent battle at Mata-*moros, Mexico. Tires, riddled with bullet holes and jagged scars are mute testimonials that the federals could shoot straight, although none of them penetrated the casing. One lucky bullet cut especially appears to be made by a glancing ball from a machine gun.

The tires certainly proved their worth and quality for Blanco never stopped. Firestone tires saved him from being taken prisoner. His life depended much on his tires and his car showed his rare, good judgment when he made his careful selection.

The many winning race drivers have shown the same kind of judgment in selecting dependable tires, as Firestone tires have been on most of the winners this season.

ONLY POPE "SIXES" IN THE FUTURE

L. S. Crane, the local Pope Hartford dealer, furnishes the information that the Pope Manufacturing company, of Hartford, Conn., makers of the Pope Hartford motor car, Pope motorcycles and nineteen different makes of bicycles, make the interesting announcement that beginning with their new 1914 models they will devote their efforts exclusively to the manufacture of "Sixes," price have not definitely been decided on, but it is understood that they will not market anything under $4,000.

TWO ALCO TRUCKS FOR PENN STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT HAVE UNIQUE TANK DEVICE

The problem of keeping liquid road material hot and preventing it from rolling about while in transit has been solved by the two five-ton Alco trucks equipped with tank bodies, which have just entered service for the Pennsylvania State Highway department.

Built of steel the tank on the trucks is twelve feet long by fifty-four inches in diameter and has a capacity of 1,400 gallons. It is capable of discharging 150 gallons a minute, by means of the rotary pump equipment, and is so constructed that the pump may be used for loading from a tank car. A seat is provided for the operator at the rear of the tank.

A notable feature is the exhaust heater which keeps the temperature of the liquid at 200 degrees Fahrenheit. By means of like heels and baffle plates the material is prevented from rolling about and causing undue wear on the tank and tires of the truck.

One of these trucks is now being used by the Pennsylvania State Highway department to lay pure asphalt. This material is particularly difficult to handle, as it congeals at a temperature of about 160 degrees Fahrenheit, and it is therefore necessary to keep it at all times at a temperature of 200 degrees, in order to make it flow through the piping and spray from the nozzles.

A tank load with a seven-foot spray is at present laying at the rate of one half gallon to the square yard, on a road test a little more than one mile.

The oil spreaders are of the spray type which lay a flat sheet of oil on the road surface, using a nozzle pressure of approximately thirty pounds.

CASTLE LAMP CO. MOVED TO TOLEDO

The demands of the automobile business long complained of the inadequate and sub-standardization have caused a Michigan city to mourn and one in Ohio to rejoice. The occasion of the respective grief and joy of the two cities was the removal, from Battle Creek, Mich., to Toledo, Ohio, of the plant of the Castle Lamp company, manufacturers of automobile lamps, made necessary by the desire of President John N. Willys of the Willys-Overland company, to centralize his various business interests in his home city. The Castle Lamp company, in which President Willys has a controlling interest, is now established on a site furnished by the Willys-Overland company, within a short distance of the latter's plant.

It has always been the desire of President Willys to make every part of his product at home and since a large portion of the output of the Castle Lamp company goes into the equipment of Overland and Garford cars the location of the plant in Toledo is a logical move toward economy and efficiency in production. The plant employs nearly 200 skilled workmen, many of whom come from Battle Creek to Toledo with it.

Closing Out $225,000.00 Stock
Dry Goods and Notions

To rush sales and make a clean sweep, we propose to pay railroad fare to and from Atlanta, to all merchants who buy five hundred dollars' worth of goods. We have gone carefully over this, and believe it will save us time and expense in sending men to every point where goods may be sold, and in response to many inquiries we are now getting.

Our men are all getting nice business, yet they can't cover the territory thoroughly, nor so soon as goods are needed.

Before we decided to go out of business we had already contracted for our Fall stock, and these goods are being received daily, and are being sold on the same discount.

We invite you to call and give our stock a thorough inspection before placing your Fall order.

Yours truly,

WARD-TRUITT COMPANY.

P. S.—Mail orders given the same datings and discounts as if placed in person.

"BEST COLLECTION SEASON IN YEARS," SAY WHOLESALERS

Atlanta Jobbers Declare That the Approaching Bill-Paying Period Promises to Be Most Excellent

INCOMING COTTON CROP ALREADY ADDS STIMULUS

Sales for the Fall Have Even Up to Now Proved Very Gratifying—Big Crops and Prices Mean Prosperity

With the calm surface of the "collections" situation already broken by a ripple of early remittances which reflect the effect of the early cotton marketed in south Georgia and with crop conditions still reported excellent all over the south, Atlanta wholesale credit men are expecting the next several months to show collections not only good, but likely ahead of the same season in many previous years.

It can be stated as the unanimous opinion of Atlanta credit men that the outlook for fall collections just now is very bright and though some of the more conservative ones consider it still rather early to make very positive predictions, there are others who unhesitatingly say they expect it to be the best fall for many years in this respect.

With much cotton already marketed in south Georgia and "first bales" arriving daily at towns throughout the district further north, it will be only a few weeks before the stream of incoming funds will begin to flow freely in mercantile channels.

The developments during the last month, especially during the weeks of the Southern Merchants convention, when there were so many visiting buyers in Atlanta, have already marked the season as a good one in new sales and with the good prospect o factivity in collections, the wholesalers are confident the fall season will show up strong from every standpoint.

One of these optimists is J. C. Sullivan, secretary of the M. C. Kiser company.

"Collections are improving with us already," says he. "There has been quite a livening up lately in that respect and from the reports of conditions that we get from all sources there is little doubt in my mind but that collections will be excellent within the next month."

"It is too early to count too strongly on the size of income from the cotton crop," says W. A. Wyatt, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyat company, one of the cautious ones, "but things look pretty good. We have had no complaint on the collection situation for several months."

"About September 15 the wholesale houses are all going to find collections becoming mighty brisk," says H. S. Collingsworth, secretary of the Gramling-Spalding company. "One of the best reflections in our business now of the general good conditions is the way merchants who have been warily holding back on their buying as long as possible are now purchasing heavily for fall, showing they are now convinced of a bright outlook."

"We already feel the effect on our collections of the early south Georgia cotton," says Alfred T. Pruitt, of the Ward-Truit company. "Cotton is not late now. In fact, in some sections it is marching unusually early and we are all going to feel the result very soon. It is showing in sales, too. One of our customers in the southern part of the state has bought two large bills within the past two weeks which shows how things are livening up in his town."

"I believe collections are going to be better than for any other fall in many years," says J. R. Little of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company. "We are finding them good right now. Recently made bills are being taken care of in good shape and I think everyone can count on their long time accounts being met very satisfactorily this fall."

L. W. Brown, of the Brown, Perryman & Greene company, is another jobber who expects it to be the best season of collections that has been seen in years.

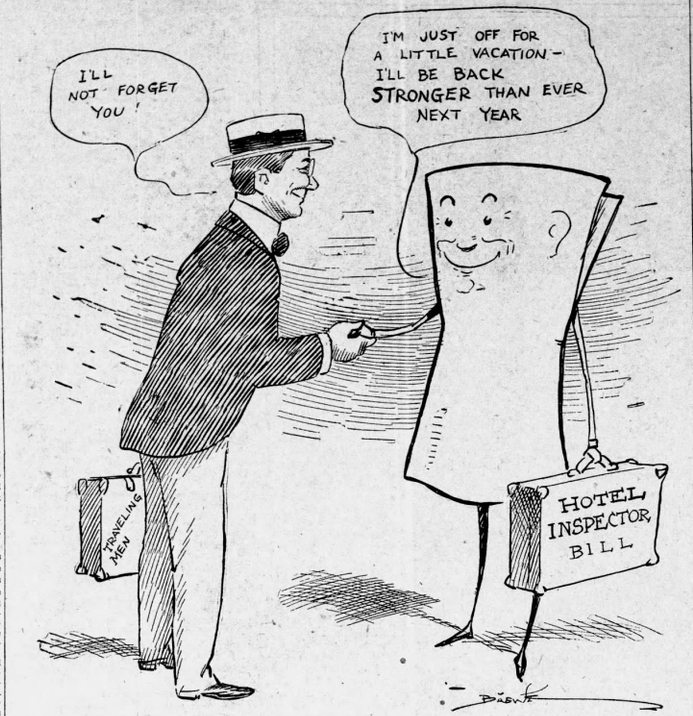
"It is going to be a solid, safe and substantial business that will be handled this fall," says he. "The economy of the farmers this year and the good crops are going to result in excellent collections as well as sales."

An inquiry among all the wholesalers of Atlanta fails to find the slightest note of pessimism. Practically all of them are emphatically optimistic.

SEPTEMBER IS BIGGEST BREAD-SELLING MONTH

The bakers are preparing to keep their output up to capacity during September, and then some. September is the best month of the year for sales of bakers' bread, according to L. E. Rogers, manager of the Tip-Top bread plant, and in this line in Atlanta for many years.

The reason for this is ascribed to the fact that the vacation season is about over and every one back at their city homes, and yet it is still too warm for the average housewife to tackle bread-making with much enthusiasm.



A BILL THAT WILL COME BACK

ATLANTA'S WHOLESALE MARKET DRAWS QUERY FROM INDIA

Head of Jones Brothers, Here After Extensive Visit to Plants Elsewhere

Gideon C. Jones, president of Jones Bros. & Co., is in Atlanta, after being away since last May visiting the plants of his company at Louisville, Ky., Denver, Col., Portland, Ore., Watsonville, Cal., and Rogers, Ark.

"I found all our plants doing good business," said Mr. Jones to a Firing Line representative. "The one at Watsonville, Cal., especially was making a fine showing, but I know of no place where conditions are so favorable and the outlook for fall business so bright as in Georgia.

"There has been a world of corn raised in this state and section—far more than in Kansas, Nebraska or Missouri. The crop has been to a large extent burned up by the drouth in those states. The price of corn will be high next year and with its surplus of corn, this means that Georgia can sell to those states from which in the past it has been buying. We are now facing the best crop and trade outlook for years.

"Our own Atlanta plant will enter the month of September with $25,000 worth of business in sight. We have had a most successful experience with our salting station at Ellenwood, Ga. The crops of cucumbers raised for us there, though cut somewhat short by dry weather, were nevertheless of a No. 1 quality. We are now making up these cucumbers into pickles and by September 1 we will have them on the market, entirely Georgia grown and Georgia packed pickles—equal to the best that can be grown or packed anywhere.

"Our experience at Ellenwood has led us to the decision not only to make the salting station permanent there, but to establish other stations in various parts of the state. We want to put up at our plant as much Georgia grown stuff as possible."

Mr. Jones expects to be in Atlanta for about thirty days. He paid a short visit last week to the Louisville plant.

"Complexion Specialist," of Hyderabod, India, Writes Dobbs & Wey for Prices on "Gallipots," Which, Being Translated, Means Jars for Cold Cream

Where will it end?

Here is evidence—and documentary evidence at that, clearly admissible in any court as well as in the more lenient ruled forum of the press—that Atlanta's fame as a wholesale market has reached across the seas to India.

There is a letter from India to prove it. From Hyderabad, in the province of Deccan, in eastern India, to be exact. A strangely stamped and addressed envelope received at the Dobbs & Wey Co. Thursday proved to be from a "complexion specialist" at that place. It was thus the lady termed herself in the letter, which was in regard to certain porcelain "gallipots" that she needs in her beauty business.

How or where she of the Indian beauty parlor learned of the Atlanta crockery house does not appear and W. L. Percy, the secretary of the company, who is rarely without perfectly plausible explanation for most natural phenomena, has no explanation to offer. So it must be put down to the general fact that Atlanta is a well advertised city, supported by the fact that this is a well advertised firm.

The letter was mailed on July 31 and by October the firm's new customer will have the reply giving full information on "gallipots," which—it might be explained for plain Americans—is understood to mean jars for cold cream.

LONG CO., OF MACON, GETS NEW CIGAR DISTRIBUTION

The A. J. Long Cigar and Grocery company, the big jobbing firm of Macon, Ga., will hereafter have the exclusive distribution in Georgia of a number of popular brands of cigars. These brands include the Robert Burns, Little Bobbie, Portugese, Bank Note, Ultimo, Schriner and Calzada cigars. These well-known cigars were formally distributed by George Storm & Co. The salesmen of the Long company will cover Georgia from on end to the other, taking orders for these brands as well as for the other popular brands on which the Long company has built up a big trade throughout the state. The Long company is one of the most progressive firms of the south and the announcement of their new acquisitions will be read everywhere with interest.

DRY WEATHER HELPS VEHICLE REPAIRERS

On Contrary, Wet Weather Keeps Things Tight and Brings Few Breaks

Rare is the business that is not in some way affected by the weather.

Take the wagon repair business as a unique illustration of how old Sol and J. Pluvius can hasten or retard the activities of industry.

Farming, the whole basis of commerce, which is so directly dependent upon the weather man, is hardly less sensitive to rains and drouths than the wagon shop, according to J. M. Karwisch, who has one of the largest vehicle repairing businesses in Atlanta and should know whereof he speaks.

"In a wet spell, a wagon 'tightens up' and in a long dry spell it loosens up," says Mr. Karwisch in explanation. "After a long stretch of hot, dry weather our shop is over-running with repair jobs, especially tire tightening work.

"Wet weather keeps the wood of the wagons expanded and the metal parts do not warp and bend as easily. The metal parts remain fitted tightly to the wood and the metal tires fit the wheels as snug as when first put on.

"Then a bit of warm weather comes, the wood contracts, the warm iron bends more easily and as a result there are many wagons with loose, rattling parts sent to the repair shop.

"If keeping a wagon wet would keep it in good shape indefinitely the owners might in that way reduce their repair bill, but of course, the good condition of wagons in wet weather is a false condition, as soon as they dry out they are in worse shape than ever."

So the wagon repairer don't worry when it rains for he knows the jobs are coming faster than ever when it does clear off.

IT'S BUSY TIMES NOW AT M'CLURE COMPANY

E. P. Lewis, of the McClure Ten-Cent company, says that everybody is trying to put in a 5 and 10-cent department. Some of the latest who have put these in are Blackwell Bros., Maysville, Ga., and S. M. St. John, Jefferson, Ga. T. D. Anderson, of the McClure company, is opening a new store in Roswell this week. E. P. Lewis, of this company, goes to Maysville, Ga., on Monday to give plans for a ten-cent department.

C. W. Bohler, of the McClure Ten-Cent company, was found at his desk with a 2x4 smile on his face. When asked to explain the cause, he said he was tickled over the report from the new McClure store that has just been opened in Union, S. C. Mr. Bohler is one of the best posted men on 5 and 10-cent goods in the south.

HOW OTHER CITIES VIEW ATLANTA AS WHOLESALE MARKET

Richmond, Nashville and Jacksonville All Make Reference to Atlanta's Progressive Qualities

RICHMOND DECLARES ATLANTA'S GAINING TRADE

Nashville Wants Atlanta's Lungs, and Jacksonville Her Millinery Market and Boosting Salesmen

Atlanta is synonymous with progress. There may have been a time wher Atlanta was a town of "blow and hot air" but even should such an allegation be proven as a past characteristic it stands today as a monument of the intelligent work of the booster or co-operative spirit, second to no city of the south in those standards of substantial growth and rapid development. Atlanta has profited by intelligent and patriotic co-operation. It does not give the cold shoulder to a new proposition by reason of the fact that it is new but rather encourages an innovation as a step in progress. There are no "suckers" among this live bunch of business men. They will literally work their heads off to further and foster a legitimate enterprise. They will likewise discountenance an industry that is attempting to be fostered in their midst not backed by character and honorable dealing. Peculiarly fortunate is that city which possesses a commercial secretary who knows and knows that he knows; who does his work with ease and efficiency, who sinks his ability and personality entirely in the promotion of his city—a modest, thorough, intelligent, agressive, square and efficient fellow—such is Harry T. Moore, secretary Atlanta Merchants and Manufacturers' association. Judging by performances, not the least of which was the Southern Merchants' convention, Atlanta is widening her expanse of trade and is delivering the goods according to promise and "according to the sample."—Norman Johnson in Richmond Merchants' Journal and Commerce.

Praises Atlanta's Millinery Market

As a jobbing and distributing center Jacksonville ranks second to none in many lines. As a wholesale grocery distributing center there are no southern cities that can boast of as many in numbers or as large as those to be found in Jacksonville, but there is one branch in Jacksonville business that is sadly needed in this city at this time and that is a wholesale millinery house. There is not a busines nor any one single thing that will take as many business people nor as much money to a city as a millinery jobbing house. In a recent issue of one of the Atlanta papers there appeared an article which stated that the yearly trade in millinery in that city amounted to $2,000,000 per year. That does not mean that that is all the money that there is a city in consequence of that branch of the jobbing business, for there are the hotel bills, the restaurant bills, the barber bills and a thousand and one ways in which money is spent and turned loose as a result of the establishment of a wholesale millinery business in a city.—Firing Line of Jacksonville Times-Union.

"If Nashville Had Atlanta's Lungs"

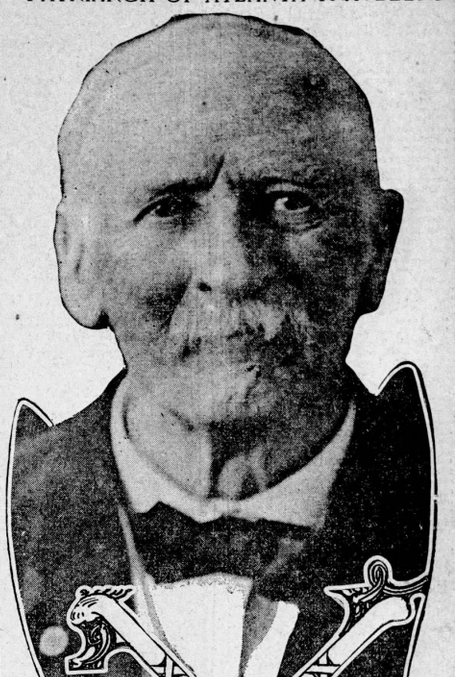
Any time a real Nashville booster hears another citizen of this city running down his own town and boosting up the deeds of another he snould go over, tap the grouchy one on the wrist and tell him of a few things Nashville is doing. Any time a citizen in his ramblings runs across a good thing in some other city it is his duty to show up at the board of trade and tell all about it, so that it can be adopted if the end is worth the means.

If Nashville, endowed as she is with natural and artificial advantages, had the lungs of Atlanta the old town's name would be on' every tongue in the nation and there would be a skyscraper on every block.—Firing Line of Nashville Tennesseean.

Traveling Men Advertise Atlanta

On a train some distance from Atlanta one day sat a group of several Atlanta traveling salesmen, whom by their conversation and appearance had attracted the attention of an elderly man sitting near, who evidently was a stranger to the neighborhood and in fact who was on his way to another state, perhaps with a view to investing his fortune. After listening to this group of real Atlanta boosters the old man turned to the writer and stated that he believed he would change his mind and at least spend several days in the city that was so flatteringly advertised by those well appearing, well posted and accomplished gentlemen, for he knew it must indeed be a great city to have such advertisements as those who sat before him. No doubt similar cases have happened relative to Jacksonville, for no city can boast of a better class of men than those representing this city.—Firing Line of Jacksonville Times-Union.

H. L. ATWATER, IN EIGHTIETH YEAR, IS PATRIARCH OF ATLANTA TRAVELERS



H. L. ATWATER.

Was First Member of U. C. T. in South and First President of the Old Southern Travelers' Association — Has Had Interesting Career

The patriarch of Atlanta traveling salesmen would indeed be a proper designation of H. L. Atwater, now 80 years old, with a record behind him of 40 years on the road.

Mr. Atwater was in active service notwithstanding his advanced age until about a year and a half ago, when he received a fall which compelled his retirement. He and his wife now live at 107 Glenwood avenue.

In addition to his ripe old age and his long road service, he has the further distinction of being the first member of the order of United Commercial Travelers in the south. He joined the order in Denver, Col., soon after it was established. He was, however, traveling from the south at the time. The number of his membership certificate was 790, showing how early after the beginning of the order his name was enrolled.

Mr. Atwater was also the first president of the Southern Travelers' association, an organization which the older Atlanta salesmen remember well. He is the proud possessor of a gold-headed walking cane which was presented by the Atlanta branch of this organization.

He was also the second president of the Post B, the Atlanta organization of the Travelers' Protective association.

"When I received my fall and was compelled to quit work," said Mr. Atwater, "I was traveling for the Parker Buggy company, of Franklin, N. C. At various times I have traveled for the Standard Wagon company, F. A. Ames & Co., and the Milburn Wagon company. I was head of the latter's company Atlanta branch for a number of years. For fifteen years, I might say, I sold in Atlanta more than 2,500 vehicles a year."

During the war Mr. Atwater was a manufacturer of ambulances, knap-sacks, seabbards and other like war equipment for the Confederate army at Columbus, Mississippi.

"Though I was never in actual service," said Mr. Atwater, "I was given the ttile of 'captain' by General Forrest himself. I was shoeing horses for a regiment of his cavalry once, when the men waiting for their steeds began to play pranks on my force of helpers, interfering with their work. I threatened to report them to the general but this did not cause them to desist. Finally I went to see General Forrest and he detailed to me twenty men and said, 'Captain Atwater, take these men and go back and put an end to the interference with your work; and at the head of the men I did as I was bid and the roistering ended immediately and the work of shoeing the horses proceeded thenceforth without interruption."

"CATTLE CAR" SERVICE ON SOUTHERN IN N. C.

Traveler Says Conditions on Locals Between Charlotte and Greensboro Fierce

Editor Firing Line: I have been "toting the grip" too long, and have rubbed up against the hardships and impositions one comes across who travels, too much to become a "chronic kicker." My hotel friends and those among the hotel employes will testify I am no "kicker," but there are times when "patience ceases to be a virtue" and this is manifestly true when one must use the local train service that the Southern Railway company is imposing on the traveling public between Charlotte and Greensboro, N. C.

I can liken same to nothing nearer than cattle car service, in the crowded condition in which the public are riding on their trains. You are lucky if you can get a half seat to ride in and frequently I have seen the patrons crowding up in the aisles. Now, when two people must sit in one seat with two and often four piecs of hand baggage piled at their feet, you can but perceive you are paying for firstclass passage but not getting it, and this is existing on part of the main road in the south. If this condition was only an occasional one there would be excuses, but I have witnessed it two and three times daily for a week and two weeks at a time, and at all seasons of the year.

This humble complaint may not better this condition, but at least there is some satisfaction when being imposed upon that you can get a "kick off your chest."

Yours truly,
S. M. ROSENFELD.
Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 26, 1913.

LITTLE JOURNEY THROUGH BIG MILLINERY PLANT

What's to Be Seen at a Great Wholesale House in Busy Season

Atlanta stands first as the millinery center of the south. Its sweep of territory is immense and is widening every year. Its reputation for handling the best of all grades of millinery goods—goods that are best adapted to the needs of this section, and the newest and most attractive styles—serves to bring here yearly hundreds of new buyers and to convert them into steady patrons of this market.

Among the houses which have advanced Atlanta to its commanding place in the millinery world none is more conspicuous for its vigor and activity than the Ernest L. Rhodes company. Besides being in the front rank of wholesale millinery firms in the entire country, it operates the only millinery factory in the south, where yearly is turned out thousands of dollars worth of frames and trimming accessories.

A visit to this firm during its busy season is both a surprise and treat for one who has never seen what this company is doing. The present fall season is now at its height. The display and stock rooms are crowded with buyers, the trimming rooms are buzzing with activities of scores of experienced milliners who are spending from four to six weeks with the company to familiarize themselves with the new patterns and trimmings, the customers' rooms present scenes of interesting activity, and the manufacturing department is running full capacity.

EXPERIENCED MILLINERS.

No milliner is taken into the Rhodes' trimming rooms unless she has had two years' experience. Thus when she has spent the usual number of weeks of preparation, studying and copying the styles of the season, she is prepared to go anywhere and assume charge of any millinery stock and handle it with a skill that is 100 point efficient.

Richard A. Beard, hat buyer, conducted the Firing Line representative on a little journey last week through the big Rhodes plant. On the first floor a vast array of goods used in the millinery business meets the eye—silks, velvets, ribbons, ornaments, novelties and findings. Everywhere were customers examining these offerings.

A place of feminine delight is the second floor where are shown the flowers and feathers that always enter so largely into the trimming of hats, no matter what the styles may be. From all parts of the world come the things that the Rhodes company uses for the adornment of its hats—from Paris, from Berlin, in fact all the fashion centers of the world are laid under tribute to furnish their most attractive wares. Mr. Ernest L. Rhodes, head of the company, last week was opening up a shipment of ribbons of advanced style just arrived from France and Germany. The Rhodes company pays one-eighth of the duty trade of Atlanta.

On the second floor is also located one of the company's handsome pattern and display rooms. On the third floor are to be found the stocks of untrimmed shapes, ready-to-wear and made hats.

BUSIEST FLOOR.

The fourth floor is one of the busiest of the entire house. Here are the trimming rooms, or in other words, the season's institute for milliners. It looks like a meeting of the Ladies' Sewing Circle, but with a difference. There is nothing casual or gossipy about it. It is rather a meeting of artists intent upon acquiring all the fine points of their art. They are at work under the direction of master artists, designers who have been to New York, Paris and other centers, and who know the styles intimately, know what they are and what they are to be.

On this floor is also the frame manufacturing department where the rolls of frame material are cut, shaped and moulded on the blocking machines into hat forms. Here too are made bandeaus, and various other trimming accessories. The customers' room is also on this floor. It is a repetition of the trimming room with the exception that the milliners here who are learning to make the season's styles own and operate their own businesses. A big display room of the new patterns completes the interesting things that are to be seen on this floor.

The shipping department is located on the fifth floor. At the time of the visit of the Firing Line representative last week, there were 250 milliners and visiting buyers at the Rhodes company. Practically every shipping bin was full of goods ready for the express and freight receiving depots.

This company, from its trimming rooms every season, places from 175 to 200 milliners with firms all over the south.

The motive power behind this big Atlanta enterprise is Ernest L. Rhodes, whose untiring zeal and far-seeing ability has made it possible and who has laid it upon such a foundation that every year will add to its growth and prestige.

SALES CONTINUE HEAVY AT THE WARD-TRUITT CO.

The Ward-Truitt company are learning that there is one very good advantage in the proposition of retiring from business—the way it boosts sales.

The number of merchants who are taking advantage of their reductions, made with a view to disposing of their stock rapidly, is keeping alive the activity at this house that was common with all the dry goods jobbing concerns during the convention weeks.

From all over the state merchants are coming to get a slice of the Ward-Truitt stock and the men on the road are keeping the stock clerks and shipping clerks busy when house sales ing.

With all this the company do not expect to really make their exit from the jobbing field for many months yet and are continuing to supply their customers' wants by ordering more goods from the mills when they run out of certain lines.

T. W. SIGMAN JOINS FORCE OF H. MENDEL

Thomas W. Sigman, the widely known city salesman, has joined the sales force of H. Mendel, wholesale dealer in ready-to-wear goods and notions. Mr. Sigman will begin his duties with his new firm on September 1 and will cover both the city and suburban trade and during part of the time will also look after house sales. Mr. Sigman has a big circle of friends all over the city who will be interested in the news of his new connection. The H. Mendel firm is located at 60-62 Gilmer street, and is among the most thriving and active wholesale businesses in the city. It is predicted that Mr. Sigman when he starts out for his new firm will "mop up" with sales from the start as never before.

BUSINESS OPTIMISM PREVAILS EVERYWHERE

Jenkins Writes Entertaining and Inspirational News and Notes of Road

Editor Firing Line:

The widespread feeling of optimism which has been steadily increasing throughout the commercial world since President Wilson's election is nowhere more noticeable and encouraging than through Georgia and Alabama and portions of Florida, the territory I travel.

Since later and better crop estimates have been secured, the grounds for this optimistic sentiment seem amply warranted. The traveling men are full of encouragement and hope, and those, at least many of them, whom I have interviewed are unanimous in their belief that there is plenty of business in sight, and that soon the spending of money with the farmer resulting from harvesting operations will benefit dealer and manufacturer in a most beneficial and satisfactory way.

Our friend, A. O. Hopkins, with the Southern Coffin and Casket company, states, after a week spent at Indian Spring, he returned to the busy world to find it radiant with beams of hope. It is refreshing to converse with young men on their job like Mr. Hopkins.

He had rather be a could be
If he could not be an "Are,"
For a could be is a "Maybe"
With a chance of reaching par.
To rather be a "Has been,"
Than a "might have been" by far,
For a "might have been" has never been,
But a "has" was once an "Are."

While at Alexander City, Ala., last Thursday seated at the breakfast table at the Norton hotel, I listened to the conversation of three young traveling salesmen. One was Mr. Robert Oglesby, of Montgomery, Ala.

Said he, "I have tried to live a decent, honest life, and expect to continue."

I remembered this later when five of us who boarded the train at Alex City, were requested by this same young man to come back in the smoking car. After we had all gathered there, said he, "Which of you gentlemen lost some money?"

Every fellow felt for his coin, my little bunch was safe, so was another and another.

Mr. Mehaffie, of Ensley, Ala., said, "I have lost a $20 bill."

"Here is your money," said young Oglesby, and he was happy to find the man to whom the loss of $20 would have been a worry.

When we arrived at Opelika, these two young gentlemen were sticking together the best of friends.

We all love honesty as we do vi., and doff our hats to it everywhere we go.

I know a traveling man that reads a chapter in the Bible, sings a song and holds prayer every morning of his life. Trials he has had them, and leaving them now. Cares and burdens are upon him.

But as he said to me only yesterday, "I know there is a God, and that His spirit is with me. Were it not for this which holds the boat steady while the wild waves dash and the winds of adversity blow, I could not last long."

What a pleasure to meet with such men, to know that such faith abides. The rainbows and the clouds, the stars which holds their midnight festivals in the sky, the bright forms of human beauty, the lofty and glorious aspirations that leap like angels from the temples of our hearts, all teach us that man was born for a higher destiny, where the rainbow never fades, where the stars always shine, a land where flowers blooms unending in a summer land of song, peace, love and rest.

Very truly yours,
W. M. JENKINS.

JETER HAS ALREADY SOLD $100,000 WORTH OF GOODS

Widely Known Salesman Has Been "Mopping Up" With Sales for Silvey Co.

One of the additions during the last year to the colony of Atlanta traveling men whose success in his new connection has been watched with interest by dry goods men especially, is P. B. Jeter, with John Silvey & Co.

This traveler was regarded as one of the heavyweight dry goods salesmen in the southeast in his former connection and his friends of the road have been interested to see whether he would surpass his former records since going with the Atlanta house. Here is some light on the matter:

"Some of our competitors outside of Atlanta have told our trade that P. H. Jeter was dissatised in Atlanta, that he wasn't selling the goods out of Atlanta that he had out of another market," said R. K. Rambo, of the Silvey company. "Jeter has already shipped over $100,000 in his territory and has several months more to get fall trade. I guess this looks like he is getting the business."

SALES TALKS IN LIMERICK FORM BOOSTS LARGE SALES OF COMPANY'S HOG FEED

J. LEE DUNCAN,
Author of the famous shorts feed limericks.

Secretary-Treasurer of W. S. Duncan Company Strikes Original Note in Advertising and Reaps Bountiful Harvest as the Result

Initiative and originality—they are the electric force of modern business. Without them a big business will go dead; with them, a big business will grow bigger and a little business will soon become a power in the land.

Perhaps nowhere are the rewards of initiative and originality so immediate and so generous as in the field of advertising. They are what vitalizes copy, what lifts it from the realm of mere printed words and ruled spaces and makes it a living thing, a sales force of wide and increasing range.

A note of originality in advertising which has had a bountiful reward was struck by J. Lee Duncan, of the W. S. Duncan company in the advertising limericks which have been appearing in the Firing Line, revealing the merits of Duncan's Fancy Shorts, the feed manufactured by this company for the fattening and general well beings of hogs.

The verses are not mere nonsense jingles. Had they been they would doubtless have been read for their unique quality, but they would not have brought sales, and bringing sales is the test of all advertising copy. Mr. Duncan's limericks contain real sales talk. That they did is proved by the fact that his advertisements in the Firing Line have increased the sales of the Duncan Fancy Shorts almost up to the limit of the company's blending and sacking plant.

Here follows one of Mr. Duncan's versified sales talks which combine both an explanation of the use of the feed and of its superior merit over the food generally given swine:

"A hog who was hungry and ill
From repasts of scraps, slop and swill,
With tears, grunts and snorts,
Said, 'Feed me Duncan's Shorts,
They'll fatten me up to kill.'"

The following is another verse, purporting to be the words of Dr. Shorts, the famous hog physician and mender of swinish ailments:

"Fellow Pigs and Porkers:
Out of the acorn, big oaks grow;
Out of the egg comes the rooster's crow;
Out of the hog comes the ham, you know;
If you wish good ham, from all reports,
You must fatten the hog on Duncan's Shorts."

So successful has been Mr. Duncan's limericks on his shorts feed, that sales are going on that line now about as good as his company can accommodate. He has now turned his attention to the presentation of Victory. "The Flour That's Packed in the Towel Sack."

The first advertisement and limerick on Victory flour appears in the Duncan advertisement today. It runs as follows:

"Alas," said the cook, "and alack.
This flour is dirty and black.
I want Victory brand,
The best in the land,
Packed in that Clean Towel Sack."

N. K. SMITH LEAVES TO GET SPRING SAMPLES

N. K. Smith, representing the Battle Axe shoe line in Georgia leaves for Richmond today to get up his spring line. Mr. Smith says that despite the depression in many lines of business, that good old Georgia has yielded him this season $74,000 worth of business and is one of the best seasons he has ever had; and that without a doubt Georgians have more grit and can stand a hard pull better than the average. He also predicts much better times for the fall and better financial conditions next year on account of the great corn and oat crop, as well as a great yield of cotton.

Stapler at Charlotte, W. H. Heuring at Valdosta, A. E. Wilson at Gainesville, Fla., and R. S. Gass at Macon.

SALESMAN ROBERTSON JOINS ATLANTA HOUSE

Now With Ragan-Malone Co. in Territory Along Southern to Birmingham

J. G. ROBERTSON.

After several years of it with the lines from jobbing houses in other cities in his sample cases, J. G. Robertson is now properly lined up with the Atlanta wholesale market. He has just joined the selling organization of the Ragan-Malone company.

"Atlanta is too strong in this territory for other cities to get business without a hard fight," he says. "A salesman can make a right fair record but he strikes terribly strong competition and I will be mighty glad to go out saying I represent an Atlanta house."

Mr. Robertson is well known along the Southern road between Atlanta and Birmingham and he will continue in that territory in his new connection. For the past year he has been on the firing line for a Knoxville shoe company. His home is at Carrollton, Ga. He succeeds Dan Tuggle, who has left Ragan-Malone to enter the retail mercantile business at Tallapoosa, Ala.

ON THE ROAD AND IN THE OFFICE WITH ATLANTA'S BUSY ARMY OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

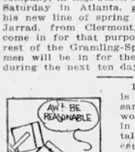
J. W. O'Donnell, of the Dobbs & Wey company sales force, has just opened his regular annual holiday goods display at Albany and will continue it for several weeks. E. L. Kerrison will open a similar display at Greenville, S. C., this week and will later have a similar sample room at Athens, Ga.

J. R. Thornton, with the S. P. Richards company, is at present putting in his time on special trips in nearby territory.

J. W. Hughes, of the John Silvey & company sales force, was about the busiest man at Silvey's last week. He was right up to his neck waiting on house trade all the week, leading the house in that line.

J. L. Williams, fresh from a month's sojourn in the Tennessee mountains, is in Atlanta for a few days, getting up his new samples for the fall campaign. He says he had a fine vacation up at Allegheny Springs, and feels ready for some rapid firing when he gets back in the field of battle next week. Mr. Williams covers Florida for the Rice & Hutchins company.

M. R. Tharin, from Lake City, Fla., who travels for the Gramling-Spalding company, in that state, spent Friday and Saturday in Atlanta, getting together his new line of spring samples. T. M. Jarrad, from Clermont, Ga., has also come in for that purpose. All of the rest of the Gramling-Spalding company men will be in for their new samples during the next ten days.



L. L. McDaniel is perhaps the sample caser who would cop the rag in a contest for tales of the hardest bits of territory to cover. The Rice & Hutchins Alabama man comes along now with a thrilling account of a ride into one of the mountainous sections of his field where he not only had to carry his sample trunks on the flat cars of a logging railroad—not so uncommon a thing itself—but where the grade is so steep that he had to stand on the flat car during most of the trip swinging onto his sample cases to keep them from sliding off. This comes to the Firing Line second handed and the exact location of this joyful little road is not learned.

The sale of holiday goods is going along at a brisk rate, according to Montag Brothers, who specialize in this line at this time of the year.

S. M. Rosenfeld, of the road staff of the Rosenfeld company, has been spending several days in Atlanta after an extended trip through the Carolinas.

J. F. Frankel, of the Rosenfeld company, after several starts on the road lately from each of which he was forced to return because of illness, is resolved to stay at home this time until he is entirely well. His condition, which was for a while quite serious, is now much improved.

J. M. Birch, the new traveler of the E. L. Adams company, made a good start last week in his northeast Georgia territory. W. P. Streater, of this firm, sold a fine opening bill down the Georgia railroad last week.

The wholesale grocers are busy these days receiving big shipments of the 1913 pack of canned fruits and vegetables. The month of September will show a big activity in this line with all of Atlanta's grocery jobbers.

W. M. Whiteley, southern representative for the Havana-American company, who has been in Atlanta for several days, is scheduled next for a lengthy trip among his Texas customers.

E. G. Thomas, manager of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, according to those now in charge at the office, is practically hiding out somewhere up in the Nacoochee valley. This wholesale man knows how to take a vacation. He leaves his address, but for use only in case of the store being burned down or some other little matter of that sort.

After wandering around over the wilds of Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas for an extended trip, R. M. Tallichet, whose line is cigars, is back again in our midst and glad of it. "Atlanta looks mighty good to yours truly just now," he says. "I make them all from Ohio to Texas but Atlanta is the town I like best to visit." The cigar man has been spending several days here with the Capitol City Tobacco Company before going on to Ohio, the territory he will work next.

S. Evan McConnell may be properly described as the happy lad of U. C. T. council 585. He has had some fine business lately and his genial smile is more genial than ever.

P. S. Brownlee, of the E. L. Adams company, had a splendid business last week and declares that everything looks rosy for the biggest fall trade ever. "Cotton is opening," said Mr. Brownlee, "all crops are looking good, business is picking up and everything is getting right."

W. M. Dunlap, bookkeeper of Fain & Stamps, was at his desk Saturday after a pleasant two weeks' vacation.

George F. Gilmore, of the E. L. Adams company, will be off the road for a few days this week on account of an injury to his foot. Johnny Wood will cover a portion of his territory during his absence. It will be Mr. Wood's first trip on the road and he expects to show 'em how he can "mop up" with business.

Big Hickory Handle Roan, who travels for the Silvey & Dougherty Hat company, has been spending several days on a visit to his old home at Fairburn, Ga.

T. K. Johnson, salesmanager of the John Deere Plow company Atlanta branch, spent most of the week on a special trip in Georgia.

The only "in" of Fain & Stamps yesterday was Cliff Edwards and the reason why he was present was that he came to continue making the repairs on his automobile, which he and Allan Edwards started during two days of last week.

Mr. Hoskins, representative of the Scudder Syrup company, of Chicago, was working the trade last week with the various salesmen of the H. L. Singer company. Mr. Hodges, representative of the Hopkinsville Milling company, was working the flour trade with Joe Wallace, of the Singer company, last week at Cedartown, Rome, Rockmart, Dalton and other north Georgia cities.

J. T. Cook, of the H. L. Singer Co., who received an injury some time ago to his hand while cranking his automobile, has about recovered.

There is quite a string of travelers in for the week-end at the Dougherty-Little-Hutcheson company, including T. L. Barron, A. S. Wilkins, G. G. Jefferson (Uncle Jeff) and W. F. Seay.

K. S. Harrison, the S. P. Richards company traveler, is just recovering from the several weeks' illness that has kept him confined to his home in Atlanta. He expects now to return to the road very soon, possibly this week.

A merchant from far south Alabama was at the M. C. Kiser company on Thursday buying a complete stock for his new stores. Atlanta jobbers are not only holding the business of nearby territory but continually getting new business on the outskirts of the field.

L. E. Rogers, secretary of the New South Bakery company, spent several days last week at Jacksonville, visiting the plant there. Their Jacksonville branch was started about six months ago. Tip Top bread is selling as strong in that territory as Atlanta, says Mr. Rogers.

I. N. Binder, of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, is expected back in Atlanta the first part of this week after about ten days out chasing the elusive order. It is his first turn at road work in many moons, but he is an old enough hand at the firing line game to always feel perfectly at home with the sample case.

R. E. Dawson, of Jones Brothers' company, sold a carload of mixed goods for his firm last week at Decatur, Ala. W. R. Simpson, of this company, landed a carload order also at Anniston, Ala. L. C. Miller cinched up a carload shipment at Spartanburg, S. C., while C. M. McKain put over some good business with the Atlanta retailers.

L. V. Hallman, the new red-headed traveler of the McCord-Stewart company, has been mopping up with business ever since he started on the road for his new connection.

Herman Teitelbaum will be a happy man when the bells ring for the first day of the new school term. Rounding up orders from the hundreds of Atlanta retailers who handle the school supplies has kept the Hirshberg company city salesman on the dig as at no other time of the year. The selling season of the wholesalers for school supplies starts along in the late summer and grows more and more strenuous up to the September opening.

Bartow Mofgan, Jr., Tip Top bread salesman, spent most of last week scouting in south Georgia.

Judging from appearances Joe Brown, city salesman of the H. L. Singer company, must be doing a mighty big business. He has sold his little Flanders car and purchased a new five-passenger Studebaker.

Ben Jones, northeast Georgia traveler for the McCord-Stewart company, was a visitor at headquarters last week. According to Salesmanger Hudson, Mr. Jones is accusomed to eating so many of the fine chickens that are raised in the mountains that he has to come to Atlanta every once in a while to be doctored on, after which he returns to his territory and makes a big showing in the way of sales on Farm Bell products.

G. W. Brownlee and Hal Riviere, city salesmen of the McCord-Stewart company, have struck a rapid fall gait, and are putting over good sales on Uno coffee as well as all the rest of their company's line.

S. I. Bagwell, bookkeeper of the H. L. Singer company, has returned from a pleasant vacation at St. Louis and other points in Missouri.

H. P. Loveless, formerly of the shipping department of the Consolidated Paper company, but now a traveler for that company, returned Saturday from his second week's trip on the road, bringing with him a splendid amount of business. E. E. Shyer of this company returned Saturday from Rome, Ga., with another successful week to his record. C. C. Mason has also recovered from the injury in his foot. He will make his regular rounds this week.

Sport Ramsaur, of Fain & Stamps, reports that W. O. Stamps did fairly well last week substituting for Allen Edwards, shipping clerk, who was away on vacation. Mr. Edwards returned from his vacation Saturday and says that although he did not pick any cotton while he was gone, he spent a good many weary hours helping his brother, Cliff Edwards, repair automobile tires. "If this is what a vacation is to be like," declares Allen, "I will spend my rest period next year in a garage."

A. L. Deihl, the popular shoe salesman of the M. C. Kiser Co., and member of U. C. T. Council 585, returned to Atlanta Friday in a happy frame of mind, having written a big bunch of business while out on this trip.

F. St. Dennis, representing Leonard A. Treat the Mackerel people, of East Boston, Mass., will be here the first days of this week visiting the jobbers with the J. H. Andrews company.

W. N. Hill, the Horsford's salesman and member of U. C. T., 585, has returned from an extensive trip through South Georgia.

OLDEST ACTIVE MILLINER IN WORLD PAYS ATLANTA A VISIT

MRS. M. T. ELAM,
And the silver loving cup presented her on the occasion of her 100th millinery opening.

Mrs. M. T. Elam, of Americus, Ga., Now 85 Years Old, Is the Dean of the Millinery Fraternity in the United States—On Occasion of Her 100th Opening, She Was Presented With Loving Cup by Five Big Wholesale Firms

Among the thousands of buyers who have visited Atlanta's wholesale market this season none constitute so interesting a personality as Mrs. M. T. Elam, of Americus, Ga.

In the millinery world Mrs. Elam's name is a household word. She is known north as well as south, for she is the oldest active milliner in the world and the dean of the millinery craft in the United States.

She was in Atlanta last week on her regular buying trip and bought generously of the season's offerings at the Ernest L. Rhodes company, where she is always a welcome and honored visitor.

Mrs. Elam is now in her eighty-fifth year, but she is still the vigorous, successful business woman. On the occasion of her 100th millinery opening last year she was presented with the handsome silver loving cup, shown in the picture, by five of the largest millinery houses in the United States. James G. Johnson & Co., of New York; John Miles company, of New York; Armstrong, Cator company, of Baltimore; Dowell Helm company, of Baltimore, and the Ernest L. Rhodes company, of Atlanta.

It is a common saying among millinery people that Mrs. Elam is a mascot. She brings good luck to every firm which she patronizes. There never has been a millinery house which enjoyed her trade and did not finally turn out successful and prosperous.

She has made hundreds of trips to New York, Baltimore and Atlanta. Her visit to Atlanta is always an event. She receives the homage due her sterling qualities and her long and useful career. When she comes she is given a royal welcome, and when she goes, she departs with a godspeed of good wishes from all her friends and with another welcome already planned for her return the next season.

HUDSON SEES PROSPERITY IN BIG CORN YIELD

Corn Crop of West Cut Short but Georgia Farmers Raise an Abundance

"The crop outlook is the best that Georgia has enjoyed for a number of years," said E. M. Hudson, of the McCord-Stewart company, in commenting on trade conditions last week. "From all parts of Georgia and the surrounding states, cotton is reported to be in fine shape and the corn crop practically all now made shows a bumper yield. made shows a bumper yield.

"This bumper corn crop is what puts Georgia in such fine shape. It means that the farmers here will not have to buy corn next year. This in itself is a factor of great importance, but it is rendered all the more important when it is remembered that in many of the great corn producing states of the middle west, the yield of corn had been cut very short. This, of course, means a high price for corn next year which Georgia farmers would have to pay had they not been so thrifty and so fortunate as to raise plenty themselves for home consumption.

"I have had reports from the west by men who are on the ground out there and know whereof they speak that the corn shortage in that section will be large. In fact, in many places the farmers will be compelled to use wheat for corn for feeding purposes.

"As I have said the cotton crop is good and ought to bring a good price. This together with the presence of the big corn crop indicates one of the greatest fall seasons that we have ever had."

TRAVELERS INTERESTED IN PURE MILK CAMPAIGN

The traveling men in Atlanta and Georgia will be interested in the campaign for pure milk that has been launched by the Atlanta chamber of commerce and the state chemist.

The chamber of commerce though its milk committee of which Dr. S. A. Visanska is chairan, began the agitation more than a year ago for a survey of dairy conditions in Atlanta and for better safeguards for pure milk throughout the state. Dr. E. E. Stallings, state chemist, and his assistant, Dr. K. D. Adkins, will make the dairy survey here in Atlanta. Working under the state agricultural department they have already inctituted a campaign for pure milk in the state. On October 3, there will be a mass meeting at the auditorium for the purpose of discussing pure milk.

More care exercised in securing pure milk means much to the traveling men of the state. It will mean a lessening of the danger of contacting typhoid fever and other diseases impaired by unclean milk. All the travelers are urged to give the movement their hearty support.

W. F. Seay will be in Atlanta for several days this week to keep some engagements with visiting merchants. He came in yesterday with an excellent business to show for the past week.

Gentlemen:—We used the Thomas Grain Drill we purchased of you last fall for putting in our entire grain crop and I am glad to state that it gave entire satisfaction. We used only the "THOMAS OPEN FURROW ATTACHMENTS" for our oats. I take pleasure in commending this feature of the machine to any one who wishes to plant by the Open Furrow method. The Grass Seeding Attachment was also used by us to good advantage in seeding veteh, rape, etc.
Yours very truly,

Messrs. B. F. Avery & Sons, Atlanta, Ga.
Gentlemen:—The Thomas 8x8 Disc Fertilizer Drill with its Disc Open Furrow Attachments was tried in different parts of Alabama in the fall 1912 to demonstrate the advantages of the Open Furrow method of seeding oats over the usual broadcast method.
This Drill is easy to handle, light in draft and does excellent work. It puts the oats deep enough in the furrow to protect them from winter killing. It can be operated on land having considerable trash without clogging, as is not the case with some other drills.
Yours truly,
E. F. CAUTHEN,
Associate Agriculturist.

NEW YORK'S BEST PLAYS ARE COMING HERE

By Angus Perkerson

AND MAY IRWIN also will play here. When the managers set about preparing the season's theatrical firmament, and end by adding the bright ray of May Irwin's smile, you know that the season is complete.

Atlanta, as Homer George says, will not only see Miss Irwin, but also 40 new plays; and the best of these will be the best that come out of New York.

When "Mary's Lamb" opens at the Atlanta theater on Wednesday for a two days' stay, and Emma Bunting starts an engagement on Monday at the Lyric, a season will begin which promises better plays than the seasons of any past years.

It looks as though each of the playhouses of Atlanta is to offer its very best, and as though the fall and the winter are to be a succession of excellent plays.

This week is a time to which everyone, or, at least, every theater-goer, has been looking forward with something of a sentimental feeling. When the theaters close, and all the "artists" have gone to Europe or to Coney Island, or are posing in multiple reels for the moving pictures, you feel as though some very dear and vivacious friend had left you.

THE RENEWED SAVOR.

And, later on, when the summer is done and the fall begins and the theaters open, and that old friend returns and invites you to bask in his smile at $2 a smile, it seems as though life has regained a savor that it had lost for the time being.

Right after "Mary's Lamb" the Atlanta theater will offer "Little Miss Fix-It." Then, this same theater, will have "The Merry Countess," "Quincey Adams Sawyer," and Al G. Fields, that new-comer in the theatrical world of whom you surely have never heard. Afterward, the high priced shows will include "Ready Money," "Little Boy Blue,' with those two youthful stars, Otis Harlan and Al Wilson; "North of 53,' "Mutt and Jeff in Pamana," and May Irwin in a new success. Whatever the play is doesn't matter. It gives her a chance to smile and to laugh and to sing a ragtime melody, and that is enough.

Now, if you have caught your breath we can go on to the next good ones. Rose Stahl in "Maggie Pepper" will follow May Irwin at the Atlanta theater. Do you remember Miss Stahl in the "Chorus Lady"? Her slang in that particular masterpiece will endure when some of Robert Louis Stevenson's gold and ivory phrases will have been long forgotten.

Then, in rapid succession, will follow "Firefly," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Little Women," and—but wait a moment—was ever a fairy story sweeter, was ever any story provocative of fonder thoughts than "Little Women"? Even men have read it, and to women it must be like a horse-haired doll saved over from their babyhood.

ONE OF THE EVENTS.

After "Little Women" will come "Romance," "The Conspiracy," "Leopard Spots," Primrose and Dockstader Minstrels, and Annie Russell and her company. Annie Russell is so much of a genius that a genius of appreciation is needed to estimate the worth of her acting. But anyone may say that her coming here will be one of the most important events of the theatrical season.

Afterward, there will be "Ben Hur," Robert Hilliard in "The Angyle Case," "Fine Feathers," Robert Edeson, who seems to have been copied out of one Mr. Richard Harding Davis' books, he is that fine and heroic; William Faversham, in "Julius Caesar," though we had rather see him in something else; "The Girl of My Dreams," "Within the Law," "The Blue Bird," "Polly of the Circus," perennial as well as annual, "Officer 666" and one of Mr. George M. Cohan's new plays, "Broadway Jones."

A new paragraph sets out with Mme. Nazimova in "Bella Donna," and what paragraph ever set out better. Mme. Nazimova is something like Annie Russell in the fineness of her art, which makes appreciation difficult. But, perhaps, she will be less perplexing though no less herself this year; since she has put aside Ibsen for the time being; and has taken up Robert Hitchens.

After her will come Mrs. Fiske in "The High Road," and, of course, no play of the season will give more pleasure or have greater worth. For, even though the playwright fails, Mrs. Fiske can make up for his shortcomings.

"THE GOVERNOR'S LADY."

Next there will be "The Governor's Lady," the play in which Gladys Hanson met with such success. But this season she will be in another play, and there is little likelihood of her coming to Atlanta.

George Evans' minstrels will follow the "Governor's Lady" and will be succeeded by the Memorial Theater Players from England in Shakespearean repertoire, who in turn will be followed by John Drew.

You have seen him in dress suit plays, where he was inimitably graceful and had a perfect accent. But this season he will open in New York in "Much Ado About Nothing," and it is probable that John Drew, John Drew himself will play Shakespeare when he comes to Atlanta this season.

Next in the order of this pleasing succession will be the "Court of Luxembourg," which is tuneful music from beginning to end; Pavlowa, the Russian dancer who is remembered by everyone; Henry Miller in the "Rainbow," "Damaged Goods," and Otis Skinner in "Kismet."

ANOTHER PARAGRAPH.

When Otis Skinner last played in Atlanta, his vehicle was an adaptation of one of Balsac's least known books. But from a character which combined a great deal of rascality with a very little goodness, he made a part that was inimitable. It had a vivacity, a difference, and a charm that have been remembered during all the years of his absence. He is another excellent paragraph in the story of the theatrical season.

"Stop Thief," "Everywoman," "Peg o' My Heart,' the opera "Salome," Neil O'Briens' minstrels, and, possibly, "Zeigfeld Follies" will close the season.

At the Forsyth, the very best vaudeville that Atlanta or any other southern city ever had, will continue throughout the fall and winter.

At the Lyric, Emma Bunting will open the season, and other players just as popular will follow her.

Homer George, manager of the Atlanta theater, says that when he went to New York in the late spring, the theatrical situation was dark blue. Not even on the farm during a long spell of dry weather could hard times have "sounded" harder. But, before he left, he had fifty-five plays booked for Atlanta; and, of these, forty have never before been seen here.

"Within the Law," one of the new plays for Atlanta's delight, met with unequaled success last year in New York. It was played to capacity houses for nine months, and will remain until Christmas at least at the Eltinge theater. Another of the shows that New Yorkers took to heartily was "Peg o' My Heart," which is also another of the shows in prospect for Atlanta.

A third play which is coming here, and which has caused no end of comment is "Damaged Goods." It is a lecture as well as a play, and is being produced under the auspices of the American Medical Society for the purpose of teaching a great lesson.

It is a great play. The season in prospect is a great season. This is a habit that theatrical seasons have about September 1, but the habit seems to be justified this year.

World's Problem Is More Play

Property Should Be Assessed, He Says, and the Proceeds Should Be Devoted to Securing the Working Man the Means of Recreation

THOMAS A. EDISON

BY MARY BOYLE O'REILLY.

(Copyright, 1913, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

ORANGE, N. Y., Aug. 29.—I have just come from a visit with Thomas A. Edison—a visit to the greatest worker in all America that I might ask him what he thinks of Labor day.

The most famous man alive did not answer my question. He looked at me a moment and then laid his hand on my shoulder.

"Tell me," he said "how did you, as 'Mamie Riley' spend the three cents an hour you earned last fall while investigating the New York canneries!"

"When 'Mamie Riley' made thirty-six cents a day," I answered, "food cost fifteen cents, bed fifteen cents, a penny went for the daily paper and the last nickel was spent at the movies."

"Good!" commented this wondrous inventor, one nervous hand curved into a sounding board behind the better ear."

"That nickel was not wasted. Pleasure is as necessary as food. Never more so than now. Today the average man does not depend on health—he works on his nerves.

"Our Labor day problem now is not a problem of increasing the efficiency of, or even exclusively considering with satisfaction, the work of the world. Instead it is a problem of increasing the efficiency and the quality of play in the world."

An alert secretary, laden with papers, stood at attention. But Mr. Edison, absorbed in the matter in hand, neither saw nor heard.

"Now recreation is re-creation!

"I have come to think a good deal about that. From the day a man or woman gets his or her first job, life is often one long worry. Take the question of lodging—high rents and overcrowding in ramshackle tenements—the living conditions that undermine health and lower earning capacity. Those are all parts of one problem—a problem that must be solved. Some day it will be.

"How?

"By cheaper construction. But I cannot discuss that now.

"Today we must protect the underdog—think first for the poor—only afterwards for the rich. Assess property at its real value—shove on the taxes—raise money—spend it honestly for the general good on recreation!

"When I was a boy it was sacrelegious to play ball on Sunday or to walk abroad to see the birds. Before age overtakes me I hope to have some share in providing new pleasures Sunday and otherwise for the people. Observe how I say "new" pleasures. Since we moved into cities we have no space, no energy for the old sports. Men and women who are overworked and badly-fed need rest in their leisure. That is one good in the movies—that and the fact that they make the whole world as familiar as the village next door. Just think how they banish prejudices, wipe out differences. Our emigrants learn to know this country, their children acquire our customs all from the moving pictures. And all the while they are not only resting for tomorrow's grind but having fun.

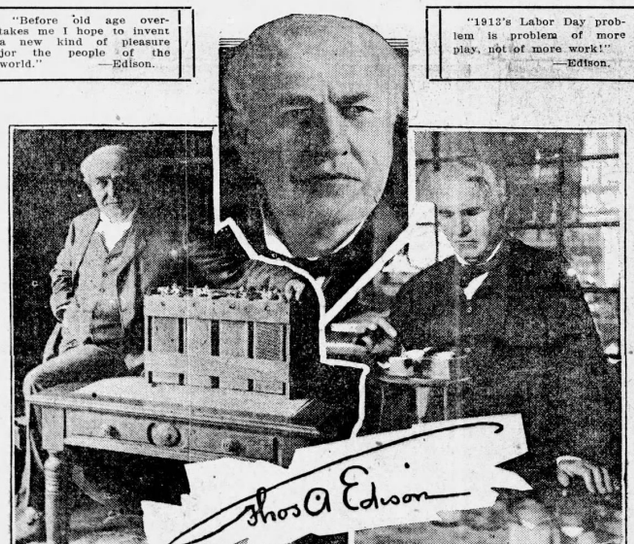
"This is an electric age. The pressure was never heavier nor the grind harder. Now a workman's pleasure to be pleasureful must be cheap. He cannot afford more than five or ten cents. Each year we are getting more five-cent articles—the trolley, cheaper light, the nickle show. Before another year I hope to add good music cheap, so cheap that almost everyone may have it in their homes.

"We have got the 'Flicker' out of the biograph and the scrape-scrape out of the phonograph. You see those shelves of records? How many? Several thousand. Probably I have canned every well-known voice in America and Europe and studied the record by way of preparation. Patience? Well, perhaps. But then you know science is only concentration and long patience.

"Every day we are getting the new music better—more beautiful. We are trying to get it cheaper. But there we are handicapped. The people who sing, like lawyers, over-value their services. Still we will keep it up till we succeed. The people who work must play. Labor day must now be devoted to thoughts of enlarging the efficiency of play—not of work. Else the people perish."

"Before old age overtakes me I hope to invent a new kind of pleasure for the people of the world." —Edison.

"1913's Labor Day problem is problem of more play, not of more work!" —Edison.



Two new views of Edison at work in his laboratory and the latest portrait of him. Below is his signature given to Miss O'Reilly especially for the readers of The Daily Journal.

SURPRISING ADVENTURES OF DE SAPRESI

NEW YORK.—To few mortals falls a more surprising adventure, even in Marvelous Manhattan, than that which befell Mr. and Mrs. Elsner de Sapresi.

De Sapresi is an art editor on a magazine. He and his wife, Edith, live in an apartment at 149 W. 12th street. They were peacefully slumbering in the front room of the said apartment at 2 o'clock of a recent morning when two total strangers crawled through a window into the room, having clambered up a fire escape.

Mrs. de Sapresi, awakened, kicked her husband. She was too frightened to speak, but her terror did not extend to her legs. De Sapresi awoke just in time to find an electric flash light being flashed into his wife's face by one man, while the other grabbed him.

Over the bed hung an old army bayonet. De Sapresi grabbed it and gave battle to the two intruders, whom he supposed to be burglars. He certainly did cut them up some. His wife pulled down an antiquated rifle which hung near the bayonet and joined in the fight. The two prowlers were getting much the worst of it when three more men burst in a door and come to the rescue of the first two.

One of these turned on the light, and at once all of them became anxious to get away. But just then two policemen arrived, attracted by the uproar, and took everybody into custody. De Sapresi's night clothes were torn to shreds, both he and his wife were bruised and battered, and all the invaders were cut and slashed by the bayonet which the young editor had wielded so valiantly.

In court it transpired that the first two intruders were a husband who was seeking divorce evidence against his wife, and a private detective. They had been reinforced by another detective and two law clerks. The party had very carelessly picked out the wrong apartment, that was all, in their search for the recreant wife.

Magistrate Corrigan sent the whole five to Blackwell's Island for 30 days. "De Sapresi would have been justified in killing both of the first two men who entered his rooms," said the magistrate. The de Sapresis are scarcely consoled by the punishment of the maurauders, as in the melee more than $500 worth of art treasures in their rooms was smashed to bits.

MENU FOR A BEECH PARTY

If you are going to have a beach party, remember that the main pleasure is in cooking some of the food on the premises, but to insure its being a success take enough daintily prepared food along to fill in where the beach cooking may fall short. Frankfurt sausages, bacon and tender pieces of steak, ready trimmed for the toasting fork, can be cooked over the open fire, each person having a long handled fork or green twig on which to spear their especial morsel. Potatoes, apples and green corn can be roasted in a "fire hole" when every boy knows how to construct. Squares of corn or white bread can be toasted deliciously, and as an accompaniment take plenty of salt, pepper and a big bowl of butter, as every one will want to butter everything he or she has cooked. Pickles, olives and some substantial sweets must be provided to give the meal the proper zest. A box of sandwiches may not come amiss, and do not forget to carry some marshmallows, as toasting marshmallows is one of the rites to be observed at a beach party.

Here, as at any other outing, take paper dishes, napkins and folding cups.

(In using these recipes remember all measurements are level, use a graded half-pint measuring cup and sift flour before measuring.)

We all know the truth of the old saying, "A watched kettle never boils," so it is often quite difficult to roast your potatoes to a turn or broil the sausages sufficiently. To pave the way to reach good results it is well to do a little preparatory cooking at home, and that will in no wise mar the pleasures of the outdoor cooks. If you will scrub and trim off the ends of large, evenly-sized potatoes, you may give them ten minutes of rapid boiling at home. As soon as drained, place in a heavy double paper bag, clamp down the top and pack securely. The same can be done with the Frankfurts, as poorly cooked sausage is not wholesome. If packed immediately in the heavy bags, they will also retain much of the heat and hasten the final cooking. It there are any children in the party who like everything well cooked, the bacon and steak can be well seared on the outside at home, then placed between waxed paper in cartons. A folding rack, so often recommended for camping, would be a great convenience, especially if you wish to cook coffee.

MARGARITUES.

Ingredients—One egg, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of ground walnuts, Long Branch crackers as needed.

Method—Beat egg and sugar until thick and creamy, add the nuts and beat well, spread on Long Branch crackers and bake a delicate golden color in a moderate heated oven.

WALNUT CRACKERS.

Method—Mix ground walnuts with enough soft butter to hold together, dip bottom of crackers in a saucer of milk, cover top with nut paste and bake until dry and light yellow.

EGG AND PIMENTO SANDWICHES.

Ingredients — Two hard boiled eggs, one red pimento, canned or fresh; one tablespoon of boiled dressing two teaspoons of chopped chives (optional), salt to taste.

Method—Mince the pimento, run the egg through fruit press, then mix all ingredients until it is a smooth paste, spread on two slices of white bread, thinly buttered; lay a crisp lettuce leaf between, then press together and cut in halves.

TOASTED JAM SANDWICHES.

Method—Cut medium thick slices of day old bread, butter and spread with some tart, firm jam and press together, but do not cut. When ready for your dessert toast on both sides and eat hot.

GERMAN CHEESE SANDWICHES.

Method—Butter thin slices of rye bread, but do not cut off the crust, spread on a very little prepared mustard, then thin slices of imported Swiss cheese. If preferred, the cheese can be grated and packed on in a heavy layer.

SAYING GOOD-BYE AT THE STATION

Great as are modern accomplishments, the ancients still had some points of advantage on us.

Love-lorn Romoe, in te moon-lit balcony scene, could sigh and linger and sigh:

"Parting is such sweet sorrow
That I shall say good night till it be morrow."

But if the heir to the Montagues should wish to try that stunt at the observation end of a vestibuled train in one of the great railways terminals in an American city, he would discover that the hard-hearted gentlemen who conduct our transportation systems have conspired to put a time and distance limit on the farewells of travelers.

The edict has gone forth in Chicago, and presumably in other big cities, that friends seeing a traveler off must be kept out of the train shed. To be sure, that had long been the rule. But it was a rule in some cities more frequently broken than observed. And the result of its breach was that because of the clinging good-byes at the car steps or in the coach aisles, trains were delayed; the entrance of unattended passengers was impeded; and accidents happened which added to the railways' burden of damages.

Here, then, as in many relations of life, private griefs must give way to public necessities. So next time you speed a parting guest, prepare to do the hugging, kissing and tearful swapping of farewells on private or neutral ground.

REAL PRINCESS COMES TO AMUSE BLASE SET WITH ORIENTAL DANCES

Back from Europe, to amuse society at Newport and New York with her dancing, has come the Princess Ishtar. She had a great vogue last season among the wealthy and ultra-fashionable set which likes its pastimes highly seasoned. She has a wonderful collection of pearls.

DOGS—

THAT gentleman who is smiling in the upper left hand corner is "Prince," the prize shepherd of Charles H. Sawyer. The two little woolley dogs who are being posed next to him by their mistress, are owned by Sig Samuel; the bull terrier is "Cuddles," the property of Miss Caroline King; the little fellow who is laughing at you, just beneath the picture of "Prince," is "Tiny," the very tiny pet of Martin May; and at the bottom of the pictures is "Prince" again, full length.

BY MARY CARTER WINTER.

MANY people detest cats, and there are some who have but little enthusiasm for a beautiful horse; but rarely indeed does one find the man or woman who dislikes dogs. Since ages in the past the dog has always maintained a high standing with his masters, and even where there is a little fear, there is admiration also for the loyalty and sagacity of the "friend of man."

When the world goes wrong for the bachelor, he chooses his pipe and his dog; the small boy makes a playmate of the four-footed comrade and confides all his joys and woes to the sympathetic dog that trails with him everywhere; and even the small girl will forsake her dolls to pet a cunning little puppy.

The dog's attachment to man, his swiftness, strength and intelligence, have given themes to poets and inspired many readable and highly diverting books and stories, one of the most recent of the last being by an Atlanta man, Don Marquis.

Don Marquis reversed the usual order of dog stories and instead of making master or mistress tell about the dog, he made the dogs give their opinion of the boys they adopted for masters. It is quite a clever story, and illustrates, as do all dog stories, the human-like appeal of the dog.

In Atlanta there are many dogs that are well beloved by their owners. Some are fine blooded with a pedigree from here to Europe; some are just plain "dawg," but nearly every one has a special claim to attention.

There was Fi Fi, Mrs. Robert J. Lowry's dog, that had a bed, hemstitched sheets, monogramed blankets, and all the other aids to pampered life.

DOGS THAT GO MOTORING.

There was the dog of Dr. Erich Von Qellenstein who always preempted the front seat of the automobile, and presented to the wind a pair of goggle-guarded eyes. He created quite a sensation when his German master first began to ride around with him, and Harras (the dog) seemed to understand and like the curious excitement that followed in his wake.

He has a good-looking successor in Mrs. John Hill's fine bulldog, which rides always on the extended cover of her machine. Buddy has acquired the art of balancing until he is as expert as a Japanese rope walker; and his skill has resulted in a haughty disdain of less fortunate canines.

Miss Carolyn King has a Boston bull terrier that is a prize. He is registered and has a pedigree that even his mistress can't remember. His name is "Cuddles," a "dear" little name, but very frivolous in comparison with Cuddles' dignity. For Cuddles knows that he is good-looking, and demands a daily meed of praise. To be told that he is beautiful generates a feeling of delight in his "dogly" breast. He pricks up his ears, cocks his eye up at a satisfied angle, and seems to say "Behold me!" Cuddles is a northern-bred dog, and turns up his nose at chicken, even fried chicken. No matter how hungry he may be, he won't touch chicken, though buttermilk disappears like water on a hot stove when Cuddles sees it before him.

CUDDLES' CONSTITUTIONALS.

He won't go to walk, either, with anybody but his mistress, and if, perchance, she comes downstairs in the morning not ready for a walk, Cuddles insists that she return immediately and attire herself for the street. Then he demands that his own "clothes," his collar, be put on; and the two start out. Cuddles has a walk twice a day, and on each return his "clothes" are taken off.

And Cuddles won't come downstairs in the morning, either, until his face and hands are washed; and he demands a bath in the tub every day.

He has a regular bed, with a mattress, for his use. Also, he snores like a human being, and two or three times during the night has to be punched in the side and told to turn over "and not to make so much noise."

Martin May has a tiny little dog whose name is Tiny. Tiny is altogether spoiled. A special diet must be observed all the time in feeding him, and the little bit of "dogmanity" has gotten so accustomed to toast and eggs and other delicacies that nothing else will do for Tiny.

There also are two poodle dogs in town that are addicted to intoxicants. They are perfectly well-behaved dogs and all that, you understand, but they like a glass of beer now and then. And they get it, too. They belong to Sig Samuels, and despite their fondness for beer, are much petted by his little girls.

Prince is a big shepherd dog who is a seasoned traveler. Once every two years he comes from Washington to Atlanta to pay a visit to his master, C. H. Sawyer. Prince has been devoted to his owner ever since the man found him, eight years ago, with a broken leg, and set it for the suffering little puppy. Until he was able to walk, Prince received every attention, and when he grew up he did not forget who saved him from the street and probable death.

Although he does not see his master but once every two years, he always remembers him. He knows when the train is pulling into Atlanta, and those who have the care of him on the journey declare that he begins to get restless. When he spies his master he almost goes frantic with delight, and when released almost bowls him over with greeting and attempted kisses.

Yet, these are but a few of the many fine dogs in the city.

There is a reason why dogs and men are friends. According to one writer, the dog has been the most powerful ally of man against other animals, and he says that perhaps the strength and swiftness and highly-developed instinct of the dog were necessary to the establishment of society.

HISTORY OF THE DOG.

The history of the dog is quite interesting. Most canine experts believe that the dog is descended from the wolf, and there are instances where men have trained wolves until they are as devoted as dogs, but these are rare. Formerly, according to the dog's historians, all dogs were the same, and the different breeds are due to climate, food, and cross-breeding. One interesting thing is that the pupils of all dogs' eyes everywhere are circular, while those of the wolf are oblique.

Except in the Old and New Testament and among the Hindus, dogs have always been spoken of with high esteem. The Egyptians even venerated dogs, and figures of the dog appear in friezes in the temples. The animals were regarded as emblems of a divine being.

In Ethiopia, the people used to elect a dog as king, and worshiped him. He was kept in state, had a train of attendants, officials and guards and the people thought that when the dog fawned on them, it was pleased with what they did; and that when it growled it disliked their actions.

Later when Pythagoras taught his creed in Greece and southern Italy, he said, as did the old Egyptians, that at death the soul passed into the bodies of animals. When any of his favorite disciples died, he would hold a dog to the mouth of the dead, so that the soul might pass into the dog's body, declaring that no animal was more worthy to receive the departing spirit than the dog.

The Hindus, however, believe the dog to be unclean, and if they accidentally touch one, they go through all sorts of purifying ceremonies.

In later centuries man struck the happy mean between great veneration and excessive contempt for the dog, and properly gave to him the place he now holds, that of friend and comrade.

Brooks County Raises $100,000 Worth of Watermelons

By Edna Cain.

QUITMAN, Ga., July 19.—Brooks county does not care who raises the cotton required for clothes with the present skimpy fashions, if she can just raise watermelons for the country north of us. The watermelon season just closed has brought into the county the goodly sum of $100,000, all "foreign" money. There is quite a difference in a farmer raising something and selling it to his next door neighbor and in selling to a stranger in Chicago; the first is taking money out of one local pocket and putting it in another, the latter is getting new money into local pockets.

In the past the watermelon has been regarded as a sort of dietary joke, an agricultural frivolity compared with the good old reliable staples of corn and cotton. From henceforth it is certain that any well arranged horn of plenty in Brooks county will have a 30-pound watermelon posed conspicuously in the foreground.

One hundred thousand dollars! That is four dollars per capita for every man, woman and child in Brooks county. Only it was not evenly distributed according to any Socialist dream; this vast sum is in the hands of the farmers. And there are still any number of $50-a-month clerks dragging out monotinous lives in our cities whose minds are so far behind the times they still laugh at the hayseed joke and think of the farmer as a "rube!" Which is very pathetic.

The man who is selling clothes is not in it with the man who is selling something to eat, for it is a self-evident fact that people are wearing less and eating more than they used to. The time is coming when no virtuous farmer will rail at scant attire and extravagant restaurant habits. He has got a system now where he can actually see the dollar winging its way back from the restaurant to the farm. Time was when the dollar stopped on the way and the farmer did not get much of it, but that is past. And tears have been wrung from the eyes of strong farmers in this county because they knew there were places where watermelons would have sold for fifty cents apiece this spring and there were not enough melons. They have resolved that there will be a melon grown next season for every flightly little fifty-cent piece in Chicago, Pittsburg and other centers of the nigh cost of living.

Supplying watermelons to the hordes of our citizens who come from foreign parts and never saw a melon on the vine, has been reduced to a system. Formerly the people were there and the melons were here but the problem of getting the melons to where they would be a luxury at a Fourth of July picnic had not been properly solved. Now a flock of nice young men in white clothes and white shoes put up at our hotel every melon season. They are melon buyers and they know just where melons are most needed. The farmers have quit raising the famous Kolb Gem, or "Cob Jim," as the darkies called it. It was a fearful fruit, with a very thick rind, warranted to stand any amount of hard usage in shipping. The selling of it depended on those markets where a real melon had never been seen.

The Watson melon, which ships well and has a good shape and flavor, has replaced the Kolb and the increased demand for watermelons is due to the pleasure the northern palate is deriving from this better fruit we are sending.

To return to that one hundred thousand dollars, as who indeed, would forget it, doesn't it look as if this same agricultural frivol, the melon, had old man Boll Weevil on his back begging for a bite to eat? Why should any farmer raise a lot of cotton for a devastating, no account bug to destroy when he can raise food for folks? The Brooks county farmers had 2,000 acres in melons this spring from which they make $100,000. They have an average acreage of 25,000 acres of cotton and they count on getting half a million of dollars for the 12,000 of 13,000 bales they make. But it takes about thirteen months of the year to make and market a crop of cotton and—well, you can raise a $40-acre crop of hay this summer on a watermelon patch. And that $100,000 is already in the bank.

Raising cotton is just a habit, anyway, and one that is likely to become a vice.

ARTIST IS COPING WITH NATURE

When last heard from, that Boston artist who had engaged to live for two months in the primitive Maine woods as unaided by civilization as were the first savages had completed successfully the first quarter of his experiment.

Beginning absolutely naked, he had learned to encase his legs with a matting of woven rushes, to protect them from nettles, thistles and throns; he had impounded a number of luscious trout in a small, shallow pool, whence he could take them as his need impelled; he had managed by friction to kindle afire, had built a lean-to dry enough to shelter his couch of moss and closely woven enough to keep out the chill night wind, and was on the way to trap animals for food and furs, while according to his testimony, written with charcoal on birch bark tablets, he had suffered no injury to his health or strength and after the first day or two felt no serious inconvenience.

Thus far, fine; and as the test is to last only during the gracious summer time, beyond the season of the most troublesome mosquitoes and black flies, he may emerge with his promise kept and with a feat to his credit as daring as it is unprecedented.

But still the question will remain—is civilized man, soft with modern refinements, the equal for animal efficiency of the cave man when thrust bare in the heart of a wilderness, away from all the helps which civilization has brought with it as his heritage? If the test were not the self-imposed fancy of a summer vacation but the stern one of a permanent necessity, would the modern meet it as adequately as did the ancient or would he weaken and fail?

Artist Knowles may think that he is supplying a convincing answer to this query, an answer in the affirmative; but do you agree with him?

The Height of Scorn

(New York Evening Sun.)

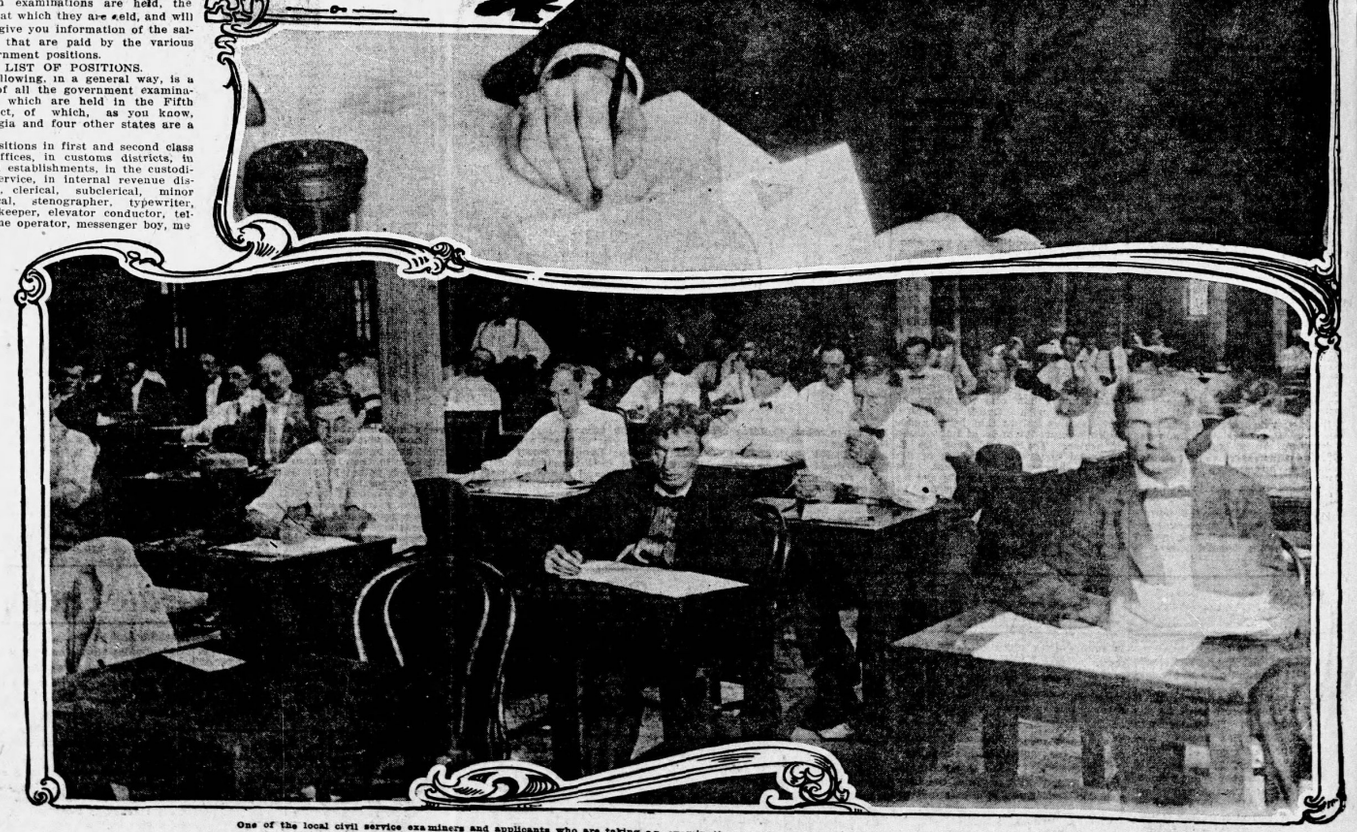
It was the middle of a sticky, hot afternoon, and she was waiting with what patience she could for her change. The girl behind the notion counter wore a tired and worried expression as she turned to wait on a recent arrival. Suddenly a sharp voice demanded:

"Hasn't my change come back yet? I can't stand here all day! I wish you would hurry!"

More in sorrow than in anger the weary looking salesgirl made the inquiry:

"Liz, has my change come up?" But after handing it over her expression changed as soon as the irate customer's back was turned. "To think they kill men like Lincoln and then let that live!" she exclaimed disgustedly.

Jobs the Government offers You!



One of the local civil service examiners and applicants who are taking an examination at the postoffice building for the position of railway mail clerk.

THE government usually has a job for you, no matter who you are or what your qualifications. Government salaries aren't the highest in the world, and government examinations aren't the simplest. But if you need a job, the government is always a possible employer.

Say, for instance, that no one is exactly seeking for your services just now, and that you are feeling the need of regular employment, or that you wish to change from a business which has its undesirable aspects.

Under such circumstances it would be wise to write to the United States civil service commission at Washington, D. C., for a "Manual of Examinations." In addition, you should address a letter to the "Secretary Fifth Civil Service District, Atlanta, Ga.," in which you should ask for a pamphlet called, "Instructions to Applicants."

You will find that the manual of examinations is simply a list of all examinations which the government holds in all parts of the United States, and is a description of all the positions for which these examinations are held. You will find also that this manual explains in a general way what qualifications you must have to stand these examinations.

Next, choose the position that you find the most desirable and for which you seem best fitted; and show the government by way of an examination that you are just the employe for which Uncle Sam has been looking during all these months.

All government pamphlets are written with such clearness that they are rather confusing, but a somewhat definite idea concerning examinations can be gained from the "Instructions to Applicants."

THE FIRST STEP.

This pamphlet says that if you wish to take an examination you should write, first of all, to the district secretary for an application form and in writing you should, of course, give your name and make clear what examination it is that you wish to take.

The Fifth United States Civil Service district includes the states of Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee, and has headquarters in Atlanta. If you live in any of these states, make your request for an application form to the "secretary of the Fifth Civil Service district, Atlanta," and he will send you that government document without delay.

It is his busines to keep the government supplied with employes, and he is as desirous of securing eligibles as applicants are to get themselves on the eligible list.

He will send the application form at once, and if it is filled out and returned in time, you are admitted to the examination. If you make an average of 70 or more in this examination, you will be placed on the list of "eligibles," and this means that you will receive a job as soon as there is a job to be had.

The manual and the pamphlet of instructions will name the various cities and towns and postoffices at which examinations are held, the time at which they are held, and will also give you information of the salaries that are paid by the various government positions.

LIST OF POSITIONS.

Following, in a general way, is a list of all the government examinations which are held in the Fifth district, of which, as you know, Georgia and four other states are a part:

Positions in first and second class postoffices, in customs districts, in naval establishments, in the custodian service, in internal revenue districts, clerical, subclerical, minor clerical, stenographer, typewriter, bookkeeper, elevator conductor, telephone operator, messenger boy, mechanical trades, unskilled labor, office deputy for United States marshal, field clerk, forest clerk, mechanical apprentice for draftsman, employes in the quartermaster's corps.

This general enumeration of the jobs offered by the government in this district is not altogether enlightening, and the government pamphlets are more or less puzzling. But specific information can be had from the district secretary which will explain fully the requirements and the rewards of any job for which you might wish to stand an examination.

In this general list no mention was made of the railway mail clerk examination, which is taken by more applicants than any other examination that the government holds. It was omitted because it is of a special nature; and here, by the way, it might be well to say that 100 or more special examinations are added each year to those which are announced regularly.

But to return to the railway mail clerk examination. It will serve as a good example of the sort of information in regard to examinations that you get from the "Manual of Examinations," and will illustrate how to use this manual to secure more definite information.

WHAT THE MANUAL SAYS.

For instance, in speaking of the requirements made of the railway mail clerk, the manual says: "Age, 18 to 35 years; application form, 304; medical certificate on application form must be executed; county officer's certificate is not required; entrance salary, $900 per annum. Applicants must be at least 5 feet 5 inches in height, exclusive of boots or shoes, must weigh not less than 130 pounds in ordinary clothing, without hat or overcoat, and must have no physical defects. The use of eyeglasses will not necessarily render a person ineligible for examination. Any attempt to deceive in regard to height, weight or age will be deemed sufficient cause for barring an applicant from future examinations. Eligibles selected for appointment may be required to take an additional physical examination at their own expense before entering upon duty."

Application form 304, to which the manual refers, is simply a detailed statement of what the qualifications must be—in other words, a description of the examination he must take.

So, as you see, the manual and the instructions to applicants will serve you just as a beginning, and afterwards you can secure from the district secretary the specific information you wish by giving him the name of the particular examination in which you are interested.

What government jobs pay best, and what jobs are waiting for employes, depends upon conditions. Just a short while ago the government was particularly in need of men as stenographers and was overrun wit happlications for positions

HOW TO USE THE FLOWERED REMNANT

THE flowered frock, whether in large patterns that suggest effective wallpaper designs, or in dainty dresden colorings of blossoms, is to be a noteworthy feature of the autumn evening gown or dance frock. How to use the remnant of flowered silk, taffeta, mousseline, net or chiffon is an interesting practical rule which Paris tells in a pleasing style.

These models show not only the use of the flowered remnant, but the combination of three and four short lengths, which can be picked up at odd and opportune sales, always with an eye to the result that is within every one's reach.

There is a stylish use of flowered taffeta in the skirt that shows three tiers of a dotted net. The flowered remnant forms a deep hem, and is fashioned in a wide girdle and butterfly bow at the front. Crossed draperies of the bodice form the simple and becoming upper part of the gown. The shoulder lines are ornamented with jewels that hold the fronts and the backs together.

Four short remnants are used in the second model, which is more ornate, and yet appropriate for a young girl's dance frock. Pale blue mousseline de soie forms the gown, which is draped over a slip of pale pink satin. Black tulle is the note of contrast. This forms a tucked band across the chemisette and on the tunic. Flowered taffeta fills in the front of the bodice and edges the tunic. A girdle of tulle drops down in gipsy fashion over one hip.

In the center of the picture is a dress of white net. A remnant of striped white taffeta with a rose design in mattier blue is the trimming, applied in three bands on the skirt and a girdle which is pointed up at one side and fastened under jeweled buttons in a straight line. There is a fichu line of drapery on the bodice, and very short puffed sleeves complete the evening gown. A band of black velvet finishes the quaint style.

An excellent idea for remnants is the fourth model, that is made of net, satin and dark flowered mousseline de soie. The bodice is in crossed fashion and is made of net. A girdle of flowered mousseline is tied in a soft bow at the back. Fullness at the upper skirt is confined by a band of mousseline de soie, under which are three sections of dark blue satin.

White net with pale pink and mauve flowers is used for the bodice and slanting tunic in the last evening gown. At the top is a soft pleated ruffle of plain pink tulle matching the satin underskirt in shade. A satin girdle is tied in a flat bow at one side. Two pleated tulle ruffles are applied in diagonal lines to the skirt.

Flowers have refused to disappear with the summer. They will be a bright enlivening note on the new evening toilettes, and the short length is an easy way to reply to fashion's demand.

Neckwear Flashes

NECKWEAR this season will be of greater importance than ever.

Fichus will be much in evidence.

The Medici collar is growing in favor.

Tulle, maline and chiffon pleatings are to be used extensively.

Practically all neckwear will be cut low.

High collars will be the exception and of only very sheer material.

Sans Artificial Tresses

IF ONE may believe in signs, it is quite evident that there will be very little change in the style of hairdressing for the fall and winter. Rather, the fashion of dressing the hair which has prevailed throughout the spring and summer will be emphasized. The contour of the head is to be shown to the best advantage, and practically no false hair will be used, with the exception of an occasional false front and sometimes an entire wig where the hair is very sparse.

Let your care be to preserve the natural outline of the head and you are reasonably safe.

Jeweled pins are being used in Paris and will doubtless be much in favor for evening affairs, both here and abroad, this winter. A simple and effective style of arranging the hair is to wave the front and draw it softly back over the ears, knotting it at the back to form a casque or French roll.

Another arrangement is the Mimi coiffure, the hair drawn back high on the head after being parted and a cluster of curls at each side of the head finishing.

The side parting will be in vogue. Hair can be waved or straight in this style and can be coiled in one or two loops at the back.

A coronet arrangement of a braid, with coils at the back, is especially becoming to small faces and is an easy style for possessors of long hair.

Some Coming Suits

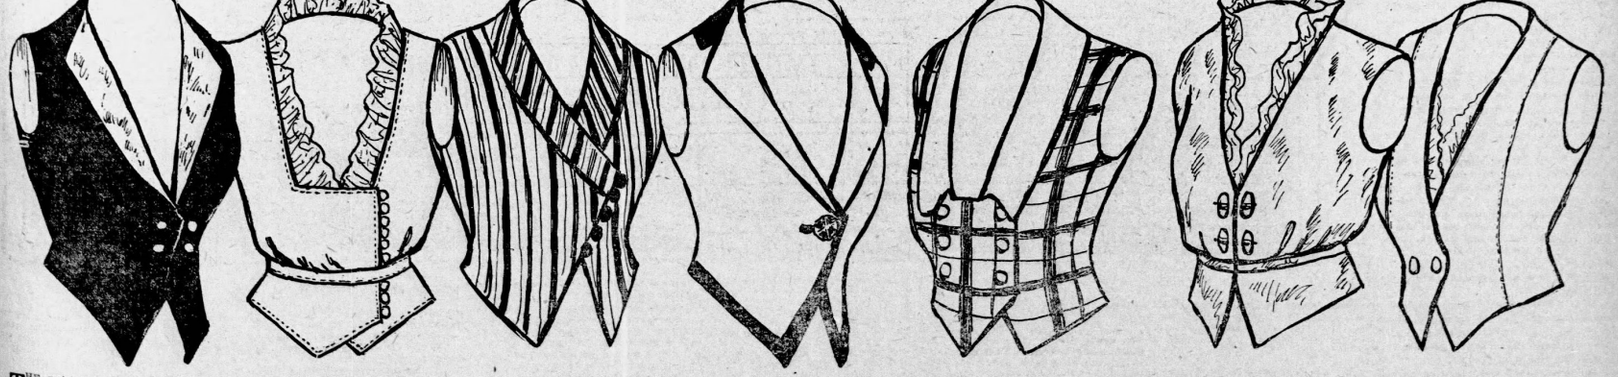
THE cutaway half-length coat is going to hold its own this season, and it is going to have the additional charm of a chic little vest. In cut the coat will be more or less limited; but the vests! The guises that small garment may assume!

An afternoon tailored suit, consisting of a slightly draped skirt of wistaria broadcloth, with a cutaway coat (reaching below the hips) of wistaria brocaded charmeuse, was recently seen at a private showing of imported gowns. The finishing touch to the stunning creation was a vest of white broadcloth which buttoned to within two and a half inches of the collar line. The vest was single breasted and was fastened by buttons of French ivory about the size of our American "nickel." The collarless line of the brocaded coat was concealed under a rolling collar of the white broadcloth, which was attached to the vest. The revers of the collar extended to within two inches of each shoulder.

Quite as smart, but scarcely feminine, is the little vest resembling a man's evening vest in cut. It is very low and is made of striped, heavy material harmonizing with the color of the coat worn. Above it is displayed a stiff, pleated shirt-front that looks as though sister might have been in the vicinity of brother's bureau drawer. A stiff collar is worn and a very masculine tie donned. The skirt for this outfit is cut on rigid lines, and the only redeeming feminine feature is the hat, which, while not fussy, may be far from masculine.

A Titian blonde who knows the value of green to offset her tresses has a tailored suit in striped sage green that Paquin would not blush to acknowledge. The long cutaway coat is made on quite severe lines and fastens with a single button of jade. The really attractive and distinctive feature of the suit, however, is the vest of buff broadcloth, which reaches from the exact collar line to four inches below the belt, ending in two points. The vest is single breasted and is fastened with ball buttons covered with the buff cloth. A girdle of sage-green velvet goes over the vest at the waist line and its one long end hangs down the left side front hanging below the line of the cutaway coat front.

WAISTCOATS FOR THE FALL SUIT



THE waistcoat—adorably feminine—is here to add further beauty to a fall suit. Whether you are clever enough the make one from a pattern, and a remnant, or whether you order one to be fashioned for you, it should be included in your wardrobe. Here are seven Paris models. They have forged to the front ranks in the showrooms of the French capital, and they will surely not be in the back part of any wardrobe over in America.

Of dark purple satin, with revers of ivory-white moire, is the waistcoat that is first of the interesting procession. Two ivory buttons on each side fasten this model. The lower edge shows double points, that are separate in front.

Linen or pique is used for the second design, that shows a square neck, outlined with a frill of lace that stands up at the back. A line of bullet crocheted buttons decorates the side fastening. Stitching further decorates the model. A narrow belt defines the waist line.

Tissue sponge in a striped pattern forms the third model, with the slanting fine and side fastening. Blue and lemon yellow are the colors of the fabric, and dark blue pearl buttons fasten the vest.

White satin, trimmed with black satin forms the model at the right. A row of flat fastens and decorates the front. A large jet disk is chosen. The collar at the back is of black. The revers in front are deep and of white satin. A binding of black satin finishes the lower edge.

A gold taffeta in a becoming style is used in the next model. The background is of smoke gray, with dark line and garnet in the crossed lines. A gray silk forms the long revers with gray enameled buttons for the double decoration, one row showing when worn with a smoke-gray chamois cloth suit.

Yellow moire is made without revers in the model that shows oval buttons and a low cut. The collar is veiled with invisible wire and a narrow gold belt holds it snug to fit.

White corded silk is used in the vest that has seams that extend down from the shoulder line. Two buttons of smoked pearl fasten this at the waist line. Frills of cream-colored mechlin lace fill in the space between the sides.

The waistcoat will contribute much to the charm of a fall suit. Surely from this generous supply you can select a becoming one.

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, Aug. 21.

WITH the summer on the wane Parisiennes are returning to their town homes or preparing to entertain at their chateaux in the country. First, however, madame prepares for her social conquests by restocking her wardrobe with the latest creations of Poiret, Worth, Callot, Paquin or Drecoll. Hours are spent each day in the showrooms of these famous couturieres, and she views models so perfect in line and coloring that she longs to possess them all.

The noteworthy features of the fall gowns are the hooped tunic, broad girdles, vests, broken lines, draped skirts, longer coats and low-cut decolletages.

The use of the tartan plaids is extensive and appears in combination with other materials or unstrimmed.

Taffeta has come into its own again, and plain colors, plaids, changeable or figured patterns are much in vogue.

A chic creation by Cheruit is developed of plain navy-blue taffeta, tartan plaid in tones of red, blue and white and tomato-red chiffon. Over and under the bodice of the chiffon is worn a close-fitting bodice of the plaid taffeta which closely resembles the laced bodices worn by the peasants in the Tyrol. Narrow straps of the plaid pass over the shoulders to hold the bodice in position. The skirt of plain blue taffeta is slightly gathered about the waist line and has a deep band of plaid bordering the hem. Above the knees the skirt is draped, forming a pouch effect directly in front.

Another frock of plaid taffeta, a mixture of green, red and black, has an underbodice of dark green chiffon with a chemisette of white. The jumper of plaid forms a long shawl collar with pointed ends extending below the waist line. About the hips is tied a broad, fringed scarf, in true Highlander fashion, clasped in front with a circular buckle of smoked pearl. The skirt, fashioned entirely of the plaid, is kilted in front below the scarf.

The surplice bodice is strongly in favor, and fichu effects of sheer materials are also popular.

The autumnal coloring of nature is being imitated in many of the latest costumes. Tones of brown, ranging through tan, russet, orange, bronze or dull green, enlivened by a touch of flame red or sky blue, appear in many charming toilettes.

Skirts with the material draped in soft folds and with a simulated panel back are rapidly gaining approval.

For house wear the frock of white mousseline de soie will be worn during the coming season. With this a sash of black velvet, knotted loosely at the back, will supply the note of contrast. On some models butterfly bows of black velvet appear on the corsages and the draperies of the skirts.

The extremely low-cut slippers of 1830, with their straps of ribbon or velvet, add a touch of quaintness to the white mousseline frock.

The basket hat of velvet, moire or taffeta is displayed in the smart shops about the Place Vendome and along the Rue de la Paix. A model of blue taffeta is banked with hyacinths and clematis.

Bows of sheerest white linen are used to adorn millinery designed by Marie Louise, Caroline Reboux and Georgette.

Wide ribbons in impressionistic designs are embroidered with heavily twisted strands of wool, and the effect is particularly pleasing.

The hem and train of a semiformal costume is edged with a narrow pleating of tulle.

A single rose of a brilliant crimson is used to clasp the scarf-sash of a china-blue-and-black brocaded silk gown.

Very few straw hats are worn here, and with gowns of sheerest materials models of velvet, tulle and crepe are considered smart.

At Armenonville yesterday was noticed a medium-sized hat of black velvet with a fluted ruffle of black muslin on the brim. A bunch of white grapes was placed at the left side.

Another model which savored of wintry weather was of sable-colored crepe trimmed with delft-blue velvet and a band of sable fur.

Corbeau blue and pink is a fashionable combination, and a hat of black velvet is trimmed with flesh-colored tulle, while another model of black velvet has a facing and scarf of pink moire. The latter is tied in a bow at the side, and the ends are finished with pink silk tassels.

Canary-colored vests of linen or silk are worn with blue cloth gowns. Apple green is a favored color for vests on costumes of white serge, crepe or chiffon.

Silver buttons the size and shape of a silver dollar are used to trim many of the cloth suits. A putty-colored serge costume has a short, bolero jacket of lizard-green serge adorned with silver buttons.

Wraps for afternoon and evening wear closely follow Japanese lines. Frequently the skirts are draped, wrapping closely about the figure and clasping with a jeweled ornament at the side. Heavy white tussore, elaborately embroidered, is a popular material for fashioning these coats, and the rich brocades, velvets and silks, with their rich colorings, are also used.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

GETTING AHEAD OF THE NARROW SKIRT

Raise the Foot Hip High

FASHION does much to imperil or protect the health. The collarless gowns and the call for the large waist are to be loudly applauded. The tight skirt is to be decried, inasmuch as it interferes with blood circulation and causes the muscles of the legs to atrophy because they are not allowed full swing. As we all bow to the decrees of fashion, it is necessary to counteract the bad effects it may have on the body. It is for this reason that I urge you to practice and master the feat shown in the photograph, where the model is throwing her leg over the back of a chair without losing the balance of her body. The movement should be repeated with one leg and then the other. This may seem difficult to you at first, but the difficult tasks are the ones worth accomplishing. The easier ones can be left for the weaker individuals.

Since the narrow skirt checks the full play and freedom of the muscles of the thighs and legs, you must regain muscular agility and poise in every possible way. I am now going to suggest another very interesting exercise which requires only a wall, a piece of chalk and your wish to give the body the best possible training.

Place on the floor a chalk mark three feet from the wall. Bring the toes up to the line, and with outstretched arms fall toward the wall. Recover yourself and repeat five or six times. Now mark a line several inches further from the wall and repeat. A third line would put your muscles to a great and exhilarating test. The circulation would be improved, every muscle of the body being brought into play in a co-ordination which the body must have in a general recovery of itself. If you doubt my word about the improved circulation look at yourself in the glass and notice the healthy glow in your cheeks and the brightness in your eyes.

A Way to Gain Abdominal Strength

An excellent way to stretch the muscles of the sides, which are cramped while one is walking in a narrow skirt, is to sit down in a normal position on a chair and spread the feet far apart. Place the hands on the hips and be sure that the fingers point forward. Never place them in the opposite direction, for when they point backward the shoulders are pushed forward, the chest is depressed and all chances for any good to come of the exercise are lost. When the fingers are placed as you see them in the photograph the shoulders are naturally pushed back and the chest is allowed to expand. Maintain an erect position and then bend the body at the waist line, first to the right and then to the left, stretching over as far as possible while remaining firmly seated on the chair.

With the mincing small steps that the narrow skirt necessitates there has come a very followess of fashion another faulty position which is very apparent and which you yourself probably are taking. This is the round-shouldered, hollow-chested position of the trunk. The strained muscles of the thighs and back are unable to do their work and co-operate with the chest; therefore, this awkward, ungraceful position results. It can be overcome. Round shoulders need not be one of the effects of the narrow skirt. Here is a way to straighten the back:

Lie with your face toward the floor. Lift the feet and grasp the ankles firmly. In such an attitude the shoulders are pulled back and the chest is given an opportunity to expand. Without losing hold on the ankles roll over on the side and then on the back and gradually work the head toward the feet until your entire weight is supported on the head and feet only. When you have accomplished this feat you can feel flattered, for it is a professional trick which requires a great deal of practice and perseverance, but it can be done by all.

An eminent physician has predicted serious trouble if the effects of the narrow skirt be not overcome by exercise such as I am giving you today. He says that the abdominal muscles and organs are being starved from lack of good circulation of the blood, due to the constriction and general scanty lines of fashionable clothes. The exercise described in the preceding paragraph will make it possible for one to gain abdominal strength.

Fortified with muscular agility and poiseful strength you will be able to walk out in the narrow skirts of the season with the important thought that you are overcoming the injurious effects. If you wear the narrow skirt of the season, exercise according to these suggestions.

Pushing Back the Cuticle

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I have great trouble pushing the cuticle back from my nails. How can this be done easily? EMILY.

Before attempting to push back the cuticle the fingers should be held in warm soapy water for a while, and after they have dried, cold cream should be applied. You will find the cuticle can very easily be pushed back. Do this work gently if you wish to avoid the white spots which frequently appear on nails which have been injured during the manicuring.

A Dry Scalp

Dear Mrs. Symes.

My scalp is very dry and my hair is thin. Please tell me what to do for both. HELEN.

I advise you to rub a few drops of castor oil into the scalp and then brush the hair thoroughly. You should avoid soaps which have a drying effect on the hair, and do not use powder or soda in the water when washing the head.

Red Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I do my own housework and am often embarrassed because of my red hands.

K. L.

There is no excuse for you to have red hands. You should protect them by wearing rubber gloves when you slide, and when it is not convenient to wear them the hands should be cared for immediately after the task has been performed. Rubbing oatmeal into them after they have been washed will whiten and soften the skin.

To Remove Blackheads

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Do you think I can remove blackheads from my face before the end of this week?

BLANCHE.

It is seldom possible to get rid of the blackheads in so short a time. The treatment frequently takes a long time to bring a permanent result. One great cause of the blemishes is neglect to keep the skin clean. Other causes may be indigestion, constipation or liver trouble. It is always advisable to cleanse the face daily with an agreeable soap, hot water and a complexion brush. Also to live on simple foods for a while. This may mean self-denial, but the result will repay you doubly. Avoid pastries, sweets and highly seasoned foods.

Exercises, too, will be found beneficial. This will cause perspiration. If the sweat glands work freely, the dirt is sure to be washed from the pores. Exercise daily in the open air for a certain length of time.

Soft, Smooth Skin

Dear Mrs. Symes.

What can I do to make my skin soft and smooth?

Bathe the face daily with milk and, if your skin has a tendency to be very dry, apply olive oil to it frequently. Exercise, sleep and fresh air are important if one is to have healthy skin, because these factors are necessary to maintain the general health.

Constipation

Dear Mrs. Symes:

I am troubled with constipation and think that probably this is because I have a sedentary position. Why is it that this would cause so much trouble along this line? ETHEL.

The lack of exercise caused by sedentary habits lowers the tone of the tissues of the intestines and the muscles of the intestines are not stimulated. You should make a habit of taking exercises before and after your working hours. Walk a great deal and practice stooping exercises. Massage, too, is helpful. Attention to the diet will do much to cure your trouble. Plenty of vegetables and fruits should be eaten. Do not get in the habit of taking drugs for your trouble.

Sage Tea

Dear Mrs. Symes:

I should like very much to have you publish the recipe for making sage tea. GRACE.

Here is the recipe you desire:

Sage Tea

Alcohol	2 ounces
Green tea	2 ounces
Garden sage	3 ounces

To make the liquid, take 1 ounce of tea to 4 ounces of water, 1 ounce of sage to 4 ounces of water.

Let each stand several hours, then strain and take 2 ounces of the liquid of each, and add 2 ounces of alcohol.

Keep the mixture tightly corked, to prevent evaporation.

Recipe for a Sachet

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please give me the recipe for a rose sachet?

My hair is very dry. Do you think I should use powder on it? HELEN.

Following is the recipe for a rose sachet:

Powdered Florentine orris	4 ounces
Rose leaves (air dried)	10 ounces
Musk in powder	10 grains
Lavender flowers	4 ounces

Mix well, and keep closely corked until you wish to use the sachet.

I do not advise you to use powder on your skin or hair as it is so dry. You should be very careful to select an agreeable soap to cleanse your skin. Before retiring apply olive oil to the face.

Oily Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes.

1. My hair is so oily that when massaging my scalp at night I can feel the oil on the tips of my fingers and have to keep constantly wiping them. Though I massage my scalp and hair 10 to 15 minutes every night, it is still as damp and as oily as ever. Will you do me a favor as the best remedy that will make my hair drier and fluffy? I would prefer something that would also darken the hair, as I have a lot of light hair on both sides of my head that are almost auburn, which, however, should be black like the rest of the hair. What shall I do to rid my head of dandruff? Will massaging the scalp thicken the hair and brushing it make it lodge?

2. What is a sure remedy that will remove blackheads from the nose and chin?

3. What will close enlarged pores on the cheeks?

4. Can you tell me of a good skin cleanser that can be used nightly, besides cream? My skin is susceptible to hair; therefore, I object to using creams of any sort.

5. Do you know what is the cause of a dry and scaly skin? I have been suffering with this for a long time and do not seem to find the source of it. I am sure it is not the soap, as I use only a good rice powder. At times the skin of my face is so dry that it cannot possibly be outdoors during the day.

6. Is the electric needle the only permanent remedy for superfluous hair? Do you believe it a safe and harmless method?

I thank you sincerely for any help you may give me.

1. Discontinue massaging the scalp for a while and use the lotion for which I am giving the recipe. When the oily condition is better you can then use the sulphur lotion to get rid of the dandruff. Massage of the scalp and the brushing of the hair will make it thick and long.

Lotion for Oily, Damp Hair

Powdered bicarbonate of soda	¼ ounce
Borate of soda, powdered	¼ ounce
Eau de cologne	1 fluid ounce
Alcohol	1 fluid ounce
Distilled water	16 fluid ounces

Mix and agitate until solution is complete. Use daily. It tends to produce a crispy condition.

Remedy for Dandruff

To an ounce of sulphur add a quart of soft water and during intervals of several days agitate the mixture repeatedly. After the sediment has settled to the bottom of the receptacle use the clear liquid. Saturate the head with it every morning, and in a few weeks every trace of the dandruff will have disappeared. The hair will become soft and glossy, and there will be no return of the old trouble.

This remedy, however, will darken light hair.

2. It is necessary to keep the skin very clean to prevent blackheads from clogging the pores. I am printing directions for local treatment, but, in addition to this I want you to diet, to exercise daily for an hour in the open air and to secure sufficient sleep. If the system is not kept in first-class condition, you cannot expect to have a clear skin.

Green Soap Treatment for Blackheads

Tincture of green soap	2 ounces
Distilled witch hazel	2 ounces

Let this mixture stay on only a few moments, then wash off with hot water.

If the green soap irritates the skin, as it sometimes will, use it every other day. Apply a cold cream.

Green soap may be purchased at any drug store. It is not a regular "cake soap," but is of about the consistency of custard.

Open each seed acne with the point of a fine cambric needle. The hardened mass must be pressed or picked out. The empty sac of the gland should then be bathed with a little toilet vinegar and water, or with a very weak solution of carbolic acid and water. Sterilize the needle before using it by dipping into boiling water, as the use of any instrument, unless the skin as well as the needle is thoroughly cleansed, is always dangerous.

3. Be sure to rinse the skin with cold water after hot water has been used on it. It may be well to massage the face with ice frequently to contract the pores.

4. I do not advise you to use anything but a good brand of soap and plenty of water.

5. I advise you to consult a physician and see if your blood is overheated. This may be the reason for the dry condition of your skin. In the meantime, apply olive oil to the face to supply the oil which it evidently needs.

6. Yes.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams will cheerfully answer by private letter all questions of etiquette sent to her in care of this paper. Problems of Politeness and Perplexities by fellow-readers will be published at any time.

THE DINNER TABLE

IF YOU are going to give a dinner party, the first important thing after assembling a congenial company and deciding on the menu is the correct placing of dishes, glass and silver on the dinner table. There is no decided way in doing this. In fact, there are several ways, all of which are correct; but I am going to tell of one easy and right method to which you can adhere and be sure that no censure is deserved.

Need I say anything of spotless linen, shining glassware and bright silver? Surely you appreciate their value in contributing to a setting for a well-served dinner.

The beautifully arranged centerpiece is always too good to ignore. Do not make it so large as to obstruct the view and interferes with conversation across the table. Make a flat plateau of flowers in a large flat pan or low bowl. Ribbon "spokes" from the centerpiece, with tiny bouquets or place cards at the ends at the places. These cards can be just plain white cards, with the names of the individual guests inscribed on them. More elaborate place cards carry out the floral idea. If roses are in the center of the table, have rose place cards, either painted or with roses passed through slashes in the card.

Now for the preparation of the table.

The arrangement of the silver depends on the number of courses that you are going to serve. Each course is recognized by its appropriate utensil. The usual combination of oysters, soup, an entree, the main meat with vegetables, salad, dessert and coffee will be taken for an example here.

In the center of each place a large plate should be placed, and if decorated with a monogram or crest this should be at the top.

The napkin can be placed on the plate or directly above it, the monogram showing. At a dinner butter is not often served. If it is, a butter plate or a smaller dish called a butter "chip" is placed at the left side. With a bread and butter plate a spread or small knife is also placed. Individual salt and pepper castors or dips are now used.

The forks are placed at the left side, prodigs up, in an order so that the first one used is at the outside. This will be the oyster fork, a small trident shape. The dinner fork is the largest, the salad fork being a smaller size. A new salad fork is short, with wide prongs. A fish fork is shorter than others, with three flat prongs, the one at the left broader than the other two.

At the right, place the knives, blades turned toward the place. The dinner knife is the largest.

A fish knife is smaller, and if you have not used butter spreads the butter knife is smaller and placed at the right. The soup or bouillon spoon is placed on the outside, as it is used before the dessert and coffee spoon.

Place a glass at the right for water.

If you do not serve salad as a separate course, the prepared dish is placed at the left and no salad fork need be provided. As it is eaten with the meal the dinner fork is used.

A good menu is the following:

1. Small clams or oysters on the half shell for each person.
2. A clear or cream soup.
3. Relishes, such as celery or olives.
4. Fish, with potatoes, either Julienne (thin slices), or Parisienne (small spheres creamed).
5. A roast of meat with a green and a white vegetable.
6. A fruit salad.
7. Dessert and black coffee.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

The Bride's Jewelry

DEAR Mrs. Adams.

Do you think it looks well for a bride to wear much jewelry during the ceremony? BETTY.

A surplus of jewelry is never in good taste. The bride should wear only those jewels given her on this occasion by the bridegroom or by some relative near and dear to her. Or she may wear the favorite piece of jewelry in her collection.

After a Dance

Dear Mrs. Adams.

After a dance given by a young girl, should a "party call" be made? WILL.

Yes, a call should be made within two weeks after the date of the entertainment.

When Riding in a Car

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When riding in a street car with a friend and one meets another acquaintance, is it necessary to introduce her to my friend? INQUISITIVE.

If you held a lengthy conversation with the acquaintance you should have introduced her to your friend; otherwise, an introduction was not necessary.

The Date and Address

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Where is the proper place to write the date and address in correspondence?

WAYSIDE-ROW.

In a letter the date and address should be placed at the upper right-hand corner of the first page, but in a brief note they are written at the left of the last page, a little lower than the signature.

Toothpicks

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Is it good form to place toothpicks on the table? K. L. P. M.

Not at all. A well-bred person would not think of using a toothpick in the presence of others.

A Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When one has been invited to a wedding, should she carry her gift to the bride? (Mrs.) P. B.

No; the gift should be sent several days prior to the wedding day.

The Minister's Services

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Is a minister paid for his services at a funeral? E. O. P.

The minister does not charge for officiating at a funeral, but several days after the funeral one of the members of the family sends him a note of thanks and a sum of money, the circumstances of the family to decide the amount to be given.

A Letter of Introduction

Dear Mrs. Adams.

What is the proper thing to do when one receives a letter of introduction? MINNIE.

You should call as soon as possible on the person being introduced and follow the visit after it has been returned by an invitation to some form of hospitality.

Acknowledging an Announcement

Dear Mrs. Adams.

If I have received the announcement of a friend with whom I am not intimately acquainted. What is expected of me now? REFLECTOR.

If the bride is to reside in your city you should call upon her soon after she has returned to her new home. Should she live in a distant city, you should mail a visiting card to the bride and bridegroom and to the bride's parents in recognition of the receipt of a wedding announcement.

At a Restaurant

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When dining with a restaurant, is it bad form to slip off the hand portion of the glove and roll it up into the purse? WINIFRED.

This is not a pretty custom, but it can hardly be considered bad form.

A Party Call

Dear Mrs. Adams.

If I am invited to a luncheon and am unable to attend, should a call on the hostess afterward? W. D. F.

You must certainly should, as a recognition of the hospitality offered.

Neighbors

Dear Mrs. Adams.

My next-door neighbor and I have girls about the same age. She is always making unkind remarks about mine. Do you think I should say something to her that would make her stop? I do not care to quarrel. ANNOYED.

The best way to check the woman is to ignore her remarks and keep out of her way as much as possible. If she finds that you pay no attention to her criticisms she will soon grow tired. A one-sided argument is never interesting.

Wearing a Hat

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When visiting a box at the theater should one remove her hat? SALLY.

It is customary to wear the hat under such circumstances.

A Linen Shower

Dear Mrs. Adams.

A friend of mine is to be married next year. Would it be proper for me to give a linen shower in her honor or must a member of her family do this? BEATRICE.

No; it is always better for an intimate friend to give the shower. It would be embarrassing for a member of the family to invite friends to help fill the bride-elect's hope chest.

An Etiquette Book

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I am a young man of 19 and should like to know certain rules of etiquette. Will you kindly tell me of a good book?

TOM.

I am not at liberty to mention the name of any good literature on etiquette, but go to a bookstore and ask for the best book on the subject. If you will watch these columns every Sunday, you are sure to get some help.

The Bride's Gown

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Should the bride have a train to her gown if she wears the wedding veil? Who provides her bouquet?

BRIDE ELECT.

Yes.

The groom provides the bride's bouquet.

Have a Quiet Wedding

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I was to have been married the first of next month, but my mother died last week. Would it be improper for me to carry out the plan made some time ago? INQUIRER.

There is no reason why the wedding should not take place on the date chosen, but let it be solemnized in a quiet manner.

At the Table

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Kindly let me know if it is proper to pick up the bones of chicken, etc., at the table in order to remove all of the meat from them. ANNA.

It is most improper to take up with the fingers chicken, game or chop bones. One should be able to cut the meat from the bones.

The Joint Card

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Is it now permissible to inclose a joint card in a wedding announcement?

BRIDE ELECT.

A large joint card of the newly married couple is very often inclosed with every announcement. This card bears the address of the bride and groom and sometimes the name of the bride's day at home as well.

Dinner Dress for Men

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you kindly tell me what is the correct dress for a man to wear to a formal dinner? THEODORE.

Full evening dress should be worn at a formal dinner. This consists of a black swallowtail coat, trousers and vest to match or a vest of white pique cut open in a long graceful V in front, white linen, pearl studs, white lawn or black silk or satin bow and black patent leather shoes.

Doubt About Accepting

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Do you think a girl should accept an invitation from a young man on condition that she will not be out of town the night of the entertainment? IRENE.

Before accepting the invitation she should state the possibility of her being away and give him an opportunity to decide whether he will withdraw the invitation or not, if open on condition.

The Bride's Bouquet

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I am going to have a home wedding and two hours after the ceremony we start on our honeymoon. Will you please tell me whether I should wear my bouquet or not? ETHEL.

If you wish you can carry the bouquet, but it is customary for the bride to throw it among the guests just before she and the groom start on their trip. It is supposed that the girl who catches it will be the next bride.

Entering the Church

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Is it the proper form for the bride and groom to walk up the church aisle together? TOM.

It is the custom for the groom and his best man to wait at the chancel steps for the bride's approach from the church door to the steps.

A Letter of Introduction

Dear Mrs. Adams.

A friend of mine has sent me a letter of introduction to a girl who is to visit my town. Please tell me what I should do.

RALPH S.

You should call on the girl and follow the visit by an invitation to some form of hospitality. For the sake of your friend you should help to make the girl's visit as pleasant as possible.

The Initial to Use

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I wish to send some napkins to a girl who is engaged to be married. Will you please inform me whether her initial or that of her fiance should be embroidered on them? A FRIEND.

Embroider the initial of the girl's surname on the napkin.

Entering the Theater

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When a man takes a woman to the theater who enters first? Which one of them should take the programs offered?

UNSIGNED.

In entering a theater the woman precedes the man. He takes the programs from the table or gets them from the usher.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

UTILIZE YOUR SPARE MOMENTS.

"HOW do you manage to get so much reading done?" I asked the busy mother of three children. "You do nearly all your own work and make most of your children's clothes, yet you keep up with the newspapers and the magazines and read a lot besides. I don't see how you accomplish it."

"I use the odds and ends," she said. "I have a book ready to catch up in a spare moment and keep a mark at my place so that I won't have to waste time finding it. I read the paper while I am waiting for the family to come to meals, and I always take a book with me when I have to go downtown on the trolley. You have no idea how much you can read in that way, and when you are kept in department stores while your change or your parcel is coming."

"You are a marvel to me with the needlework you turn off," I said to another friend. "You put initials on all your napkins and tea towels and hemstitch pillow slips and bureau covers, and embroider doilies and tray cloths, and yet you are constantly at church, society meetings, and charitable committees, to say nothing of your housekeeping and social duties. How do you find time for everything?"

"I do my needlework in spare moments," was the reply. "I always have a piece of pick-up work at hand and set a few stitches whenever I have the chance. It is astonishing how the work grows, too. When I am ready for dinner and my husband is a little late, or when I am dressed to go out and have to wait for some one to come for me, or if I have an appointment at home and the caller is tardy about getting here I keep myself patient with my sewing."

Are these women exceptions or not? Are most housekeepers economical or wasteful of the odds and ends of time?

* *

Many Hours Wasted.

Until you study the subject you have no idea how many hours are squandered in the course of the week, the month, the year. You may declare that every moment is filled from the time you get out of your bed in the morning until you slip into it again at night, and perhaps you may be right. But if you are, you are an exception to the general line of women and housekeepers.

Run over the routine of your day for a minute. You probably have not an instant to spare until after your husband and children are started for business and school. There may be lunches to put up, pla- to discuss, the telephone to answer, orders to give before the house is at last vacated by those who go forth to work. Yet isn't it possible that you are kept sitting at the table by the tardy one and that you grow fidgety over the delay? Have you ever tried if a bit "pickup work" will not tranquilize your mind by keeping your fingers busy? It may be a scrap of embroidery, it may be a knitted or crocheted wash cloth—the nature of the occupation is of less importance than the fact that it takes your mind off immediate worries, to say nothing of your having something worth while for the time you have spent.

Look over the rest of your day. What do you put into the minutes in which you are "tarrying the leisure" of the oven or the kettle? How about the quarter hour before the bread is ready to be baked or the half hour you must wait to put the vegetables over the fire? What do you do with those? How do you spend the time when you are expecting the children home and feel you cannot settle down to anything steady until they get in? Have you never known mothers who pass the interval going from the window to the door and back again? I have—plenty of them.

So if you examine your ordinary day you are likely to find anywhere from ten minutes to an hour that you have nothing to show for. Don't for a moment imagine that I am taking account of the time you appropriate to rest or recreation. That is well spent. The nap you force yourself to take in the afternoon, the run in the fresh air that brightens you as nothing else does—these are not to be cut out or abridged for the sake of anything in the line of work. The wasted time is what we are discussing now.

* *

"Suppose I find it, what am I to do with it?" you may ask me. "I don't care for needlework. I have so much I can't escape in the way of plain sewing that anything more of that sort would tire me. Random reading doesn't appeal to me. What suggestion is there for me for the minutes I might save by your plan?"

The answer to that question depends a good deal upon the sort of things that interest you, that you like to do, or that you want to do. What is there which appeals to you particularly, which you wish to accomplish but complain that you never have time for? If you could tell me that possibly I could make a few helpful suggestions.

A woman whom I once knew who was especially fond of rather fine and fancy cookery and had much to do outside her kitchen used to garner her spare moments and spend them in compounding delicacies for her family and friends. She would make a jar of marmalade or a glass of jelly from the odds and ends of fruit, or lemon honey for cake filling, or white and brown thickening (roux) to have in readiness for soups and gravies, or maitre d'hotel butter for parsley sauce, or mayonnaise dressing that she might not need for two or three days to come, or a pastry for tarts or cheese fingers. When she had a little time she flew to her pantry, where there was always something waiting to be done. Does this attract you?

If you are one of those who don't care for magazines and casual reading why do you not plan for something really worth while to study to put into the minutes you find vacant? I know a hard working man who for years has kept up his French by giving ten minutes a day to it and of a woman who has preserved the facility at the piano by bestowing five minutes on practicing three or four times a day. What is your special interest in literature or art?

"Poetry rests me as nothing else does," said a friend to me not long ago. "I keep a volume of it within reach and a page of prancing posey takes the out of my cares. I try to learn at least one verse a day and you would never guess how many beautiful lines I have in my head to repeat when I can't get at a book."

This idea may help you, too.

Idleness May Refresh.

"I do my bits of unavoidable sewing in my spare moments," a busy office worker told me. "If I have a little time after breakfast before I must go to business I plan to tack the ruching in the neck of a waist or to darn my best silk stockings or to mend a rip in my glove. I never have the time to sit down for a morning with my work basket unless it's on Sunday, so I manage to get a little out of the way before I start in the morning after I come home for dinner, or even just at bedtime. I don't find that those few stitches tire me any more than sitting with my hands folded thinking how worn out I am. I can't really rest when I'm doing nothing unless I make a regular business of it."

If you feel personally that absolute idleness refreshes you, then make a business of it. Don't do it at hazard and put in the few spare moments in sitting or lying, thinking of work. Empty your mind of cares and of thought, so far as you can, and rest with every bit of you.

Long ago, in my girlhood, a friend quoted a distinguished doctor as having said that the value of ten or fifteen minutes of such entire repose. Of course it is even better if you can go to sleep, but if you cannot do this, lie down in a darkened room, relax every muscle, close your eyes, and imitate the old deacon who said church always helped him because it was the only place where he could put his feet up "an' think of nuthin'." You will be astonished to find how much better and fresher you will feel when you rise. Use your odd minutes in this way instead of moving restlessly about the room or sitting rocking nervously and wishing you were not so dead tired.

"He used to form a pool of silence about himself when conditions were disturbing or annoying," the widow of a well known author told me. "Once we were in a storm in the Bay of Biscay when the noise of the waves and the creaking of the vessel were most distressing to him, and this was the only way in which he could gain relief."

"A pool of silence." Doesn't the sound of the words bring a sense of peace and rest? See if you cannot cultivate the same ability or something like it when you have a little time that you can utilize for repose.

Odd Moments Time to Think.

Wisdom comes to one in these quiet moments. If your fatigue is physical instead of mental you can concentrate your thoughts on the problem which has been awaiting time for solution. Often the puzzle you have not had a chance to consider while your hands and feet were busy. Think the matter out when you are undisturbed and see if the result you reach is not better than that you would have won in the effort to settle conditions in the midst of distractions and interruptions.

The point I would especially emphasize is avoidance of leaving your time and your thoughts at loose ends. What have you new to display to the credit of the odd moments? They are practically of no good. You don't work in them; you don't rest in them. Sometimes they are spent in morbid brooding, sometimes they go in idle wishes that you had time to accomplish something really valuable.

Three quotations always occur to me in connection with such precious moments spent at random. All are different, but each one applies to some phase of the situation.

The first is a passage from the Bible:

"Who hath despised the day of small things?"

The second is a rhymed couplet whose author I do not know:

"Absence of occupation is not rest
The mind that's vacant is a mind oppressed."

The third is also in verse:

"Little things
On little wings
Bear little souls to heaven."

We know what system and economy mean when applied to material things in the household. We are told in many a proverb that if we take care of the pennies the pounds will take care of themselves; that willful waste makes woeful want, and we have learned by experience how much we can accomplish by making use of left overs of food, and clothing, and money.

The principle is no less practical when minutes and hours are involved. Utilize them as you would concrete possessions and the gain will be as well worth having.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"WILL you please ask for a sick chair for a poor negro woman? She has been confined to her home for ten years and the only means she had for reaching any article in her room is by working herself across the floor in a rocking chair. If she had a wheeled chair she could often get out in the open. She is the last of her line and a remarkable negro. Her home is as clean as a pin and she takes all care of it herself with the assistance of the rocking chair.

MRS. R. C."

So many helpless men and women have been let out of their rooms into the open air by the kindness and generosity of those who have given wheeled chairs that I hope the same good fortune may be ahead of this old negro woman. Only the other day I heard of a young man who lends a wheeled chair in memory of his father. The father used it for some time before his death and since then the son keeps the chair in service constantly. A little engraved plate on it states that it is a memorial and the chair is loaned for any length of time that an invalid needs it. To me this seems a beautiful way of keeping fresh and sweet the remembrance of a dear one who has passed on and I wish that others would imitate it.

Exchange Work for Typewriter.

"I have been much interested in the Corner and have found valuable information in it which I appreciate greatly. This is my first request and I hope it may be successful. If any one has a typewriter that could be passed on to me I would be most grateful. It would be a great help in assisting me to pay for the furniture we have in our little home and for which we are still indebted. I do plain embroidery work and would gladly do some of this in exchange for the typewriter.

MRS. A. D."

It is not often that typewriters are to be given away, but stranger and more difficult things than that have been accomplished through the help of our column and I trust this may be another example of what our cornerites do when they set their minds to it. The offer of exchanging work simplifies the business and I look forward confidently to an early request for the address of Mrs. A. D. from some one desirous of having embroidery done in exchange for a typewriter.

Would Decorate His Room.

"I am a schoolboy, 14 years old, and I would like a few pennants to decorate my room with and also a castoff camera that no one else finds delight in. My father is dead and my mother works and cannot afford to buy me the things mentioned.

"H. L. S."

These requests may, I hope, meet the eye of some one who can supply the pennants and the camera to the boy who yearns for them. Such desires bulk large in the mind of a 14 year old lad.

Fudge with Raisins in It.

"Some time ago a Cornerite asked for a recipe for fudge with raisins in it. I am reckoning one I hope she may like. I have not tried it myself, but it comes from a trustworthy source and I am sure the directions will come out right if she follows them carefully.

"SULTANA FUDGE.—Two cups sugar, one-half cup milk, one-quarter cup of molasses, one-quarter cup butter, two squares chocolate, one teaspoon vanilla, one-quarter cup walnut meats cut up, one-quarter cup Sultana raisins. Put butter into a sauce pan; when melted add sugar, milk, and molasses. Heat to boiling point and boil seven minutes. Add chocolate and stir until chocolate is melted; then boil seven minutes longer. Remove from fire, beat until creamy, add nuts, raisins, and vanilla, and pour at once into a buttered tin.

"C. P."

Thank you for the recipe. It sounds as though it would make a good product.

Use for Sour Cream.

"During warm weather, when cream turns sour quickly, I send you a good way to put it to use. The following mayonnaise dressing will keep in the icebox until used. It is simple and quickly prepared in a double boiler:

"One cup vinegar, one cup sour cream, three eggs, one teaspoon ground mustard, two teaspoons sugar, salt, pepper, and paprika to taste. Mix all ingredients together and boil, stirring constantly until smooth. Just before removing from the fire add a lump of butter the size of a walnut.

"I send also another recipe for walnut torte: Six eggs, quarter pound shelled walnuts, six lady fingers, two tablespoons flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one coffee cup sugar, juice and rind of half lemon. Beat yolks of eggs; add sugar gradually. Mix baking powder and flour; grind lady fingers and nuts and put in stiffly beaten whites of eggs last. Bake in moderate oven forty-five to fifty minutes; spread with plain white icing or serve with whipped cream.

A WELL WISHER."

Many thanks for both these recipes. In these days when cream sours suddenly and often unaccountably—either because of sultry weather or thunderstorms a good recipe for using it is welcome.

Tree Cake and Icing.

"Would you please be kind enough to print in your columns a recipe for tree cake and icing, should you be able to secure same?

M. S."

For this I shall have to appeal to the constituency. I am sorry to say that I do not know "tree cake," and my interest is fired. I have no doubt the recipe for it is in the possession of one or more of our clever housekeepers, and that it will not be long before I receive it.

Figs in Sirup.

"Many thanks for printing my inquiry concerning figs. My husband has the government bulletins on nearly all questions regarding fruits and farming. After consulting neighbors on preserves and jams—the usual way in this country—I made a sweet pickle of sugar, cloves, and vinegar, as for peaches, and simply soaked my figs in the sirup. We think them fine, and neighbors to whom I have given some of the figs hold the same opinion and say they had never thought of making use of the figs in that way. I send it to you because it may be new to others also.

MRS. H. W. F."

A large enough number of our constituency live in a part of the country where figs ripen in the open air to make it pretty sure that this recipe will prove of service to many who have hitherto been at a loss how to make the best use of their fig crop.

Wants Vinegar Recipe.

"Will you please give me the recipe for home made vinegar that a Yankee housewife mentioned in the Corner some weeks ago?"

MRS. E. M."

There have been more than one of such recipes given and I cannot say which it is you want. Perhaps some of the constituency can give the recipe, which appeared, I believe, on June 29."

Recipe for German Winbidel.

"I send a recipe for the 'German winbidel' which some one asked for recently. I wish the maker success. Those that I have made have been good:

"One half pint milk, one tablespoon butter, one-half pint flour, four eggs. Boil milk, butter, and flour together and let cool, then add eggs, one by one, and add lemon flavor. Boil in hot lard and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

MRS. E. B."

Here is an illustration of how our Cornerites respond to a request for recipes for almost any dish under heaven. I shall try the "winbidel" myself.

Getting Into Musical Work.

"My husband is a fine Hungarian violinist, although not well known in this city, and I am a singer and in need of lessons, but in my present position (I am a stenographer) I cannot afford to take any more. At present my husband has no violin, but if he could get something to do in the way of playing he could borrow one for the occasion. He had a fine instrument two years ago, but we were in such straitened circumstances that he was forced to sell it. He is working at photo engraving now. We are young—he is 27 and I am 20. We lost our 2 months old little boy last November and since then we have both been working in business, but we are anxious to get back at musical work again. Can you make any suggestions which would help us?

MRS. J. W."

As I have often said before I always think of Chicago as a big generous city where art in any form—painting, sculpture, music—is recognized and welcomed. It is hard for me to believe that if this young violinist possesses genuine ability he should not get in touch with some one who can advise him how to reenter musical work. I print his wife's appeal here in the expectation that it will call forth from some one a request for his name and advice as to the best course to follow for returning to his art. I am not able to find work for applicants, but there is no embargo upon my printing a request for counsel—and this is what I do today. As for the violin I hope that that, too, may be forthcoming.

Taste Like Real Olives.

"I see that Mrs. E. S. wants directions for preparing green plums to take the place of olives. Here is an excellent recipe—one that took a prize. The plums prepared by it taste just like real olives:

"Two quarts of green plums, one and one-half tablespoons mustard, two and one-half tablespoons of salt, two quarts of vinegar. Place plums in stone jar with mustard seed. Turn vinegar in kettle and bring to a boil, then pour over plums boiling hot. Cover closely. Next day drain off the vinegar, bring again to a boil, pour over plums. When cold put them in olive bottles.

"Now I come with a request. Can you tell me how to get rid of moths? Our house seems to be full of them; not only the clothes closets, but the pantry and other rooms. They just flutter all over the place and get into everything in spite of all I can do. I hope you can suggest some good remedy.

MRS. C. J. B."

The directions for converting green plums into "olives" may come a little late to be of service this year, but it is of sufficient value to be saved for next season.

As to the moths, my suggestion is somewhat drastic in nature. If the moths are in full possession, the best plan is to get at them vigorously and try to stamp them out, so that they will not be a plague again next year. Your rugs should be taken up and be vigorously beaten and then hung in the sun. The floors should be scrubbed and insect powder put into all the cracks. The shelves of the closets—indeed, the entire inside—should be scrubbed with hot water and household ammonia, and when the dry insect powder should be blown into the cracks. Bureau drawers should receive the same treatment, and all clothes should be carried out and beaten well. I have known a house to become infested by moths from an old fur muff lately been overlooked and left in a box tucked away in the corner of a closet. The moths used it for a breeding ground, and from this spot populated the house. If they seem to be under the carpets, lay a damp cloth over these at the edge and press with a hot iron. The addition of turpentine to the water employed in scouring the floors and shelves is said to be potent in driving away the moth as well as in destroying life in the eggs.

You have a tiresome and taxing work ahead of you to get rid of these pests, but it can be done.

Vermin on Children's Heads.

"Can some of your readers give me a recipe or remedy of some kind for vermin in children's heads? What will destroy them? I am willing to help some one else in need.

W. A. V."

I myself know of but one remedy, but this is efficacious if persisted in. Get tincture of larkspur from the druggist and wash the child's head and hair with this. Go over it then with a fine toothed comb, taking a little of the hair at a time and cleansing the comb frequently. Have a basin of hot water beside you and rinse off in this all the combings which come from the head. This process must be repeated day after day until the child's head is perfectly clean. Keep a close watch on the head for any return of the trouble and resort to the larkspur again at the first suspicion of it. Your druggist will tell you the proportion in which to add the tincture to the water in which you wash the child's head. As I say, it is an unfailing remedy, but it must be applied conscientiously and long sometimes before the cure is reached.

Unsweetened Grape Wine.

"Will you kindly send me through your colume or by mail the recipe for making blue grape wine, sweetened or unsweetened. I would prefer to make the unsweetened, as I do not think it would spoil as easily as the sweetened. I would also like to know the amount of grapes required to make one gallon of wine. J. D."

I have already stated the impossibility of sending recipes by mail. You will see this in full time to take advantage of the grape harvest.

To deal with your last question first, it is difficult to state how many grapes would be required to make a gallon of wine, because so much depends upon the grapes. Some of those possessing the best flavor are rather small with thick skins; others are juicy and thin skinned. In a rainy season the grapes are more juicy than after a dry summer.

UNSWEETENED GRAPE WINE.—Into a clean open cask put your grapes, steams and all, and mash them, then cover them with cheesecloth to protect them carefully. Any foreign substance may affect them and turn them into vinegar. Let them stand through the fermentation stage and when this is past put them through a fruit press, extracting all the juice. Have ready a clean, dry cask and strain the juice into this, and let the cask lie in the shade in a cool place, a cellar by preference, for a month. If the cask is disturbed or shaken the wine will not be clear. At the end of the month draw off the wine carefully, put it into bottles, and after corking and sealing these, lay them in a dark cool place on their sides. During the time the grapes are fermenting they should be stirred up every day from the bottom.

Rose Leaves for a Jar.

"Please tell me how to prepare rose leaves for a rose jar. I have the leaves already dried and need the formula for additional ingredients.

R. P."

The petals should have been packed down in salt when first gathered and I cannot insure success with your dried rose leaves. The formula for additional ingredients is as follows: One ounce orris root, half ounce each violet, rose, and heliotrope powder; half teaspoon each mace and cloves, quarter teaspoon cinnamon, twenty drops each oil melissne and oil eucalyptus, ten drops each bergamot and oil chiris, four drops oil roses, two drams alcohol. When thoroughly mixed with the rose leaves set away to ripen for a fortnight before putting into rose jars. Keep covered closely.

Early Fall Hats

By Josephine Jordan

Drawings from Exclusive Photographs by "Penny" Ross

THE new fall hat may be summed up as smart, chic, transparent, and sometimes startlingly novel. The all black and the black and white "epidemic" has reached its height in the early fall millinery. For the most part hats are solid black, made either of Chantilly lace, maline, or chiffon velvet. Many stunning combinations of black and white, however, are shown. Milliners are using black tulle and Chantilly in a thousand different ways, and the latest idea is a frill of black Chantilly, which looks as if a gust of wind had blown it aslant over the right ear. The upper edge of the frill is cleverly wired under a satin cord.

Butterflies exquisitely fashioned from fine black tulle or lace are used instead of flowers to trim the newer models. Ostrich feathers clipped into fantastic shapes, sometimes resembling a date palm tree, are among the novel trimmings to be seen.

The marked revival of ribbons is noted. Not only are they used for trimming, but many hats are made entirely of ribbon stitched together and laid in soft plaits to form crown and rim. Soft taffetas, soft satins, moires, and velvet ribbons all come in for a large share of attention.

Among the ribbon novelties are spiral plaited and cornucopia taffeta stickups. There is a tendency for the stickups to bend toward the front of the hat instead of the back as formerly. Most of these stickups are fully twelve inches high and stand up directly in the center front of the hats.

Because of the high cost of paradise and of the embargo laid upon the sale of heron goura, numidi and coq are being popularized. Especially effective coq trimmings are to be seen.

* *

So far as the size of the hat is concerned there is no indication of an immediate change in millinery fashions. Hats will remain small and medium for fall.

With true feminine perversity fashionable women are already wearing velvet hats with summer toilettes. And millinery shops and department stores are offering autumn felts in the simple early styles that signal the opening of the new season.

In the midst of this, however, one sees an ever increasing use of maline in millinery, and there is every reason to believe that this vogue will continue strongly into the fall. Especially will the maline hat be used for dressy wear, such as restaurant dining, afternoon receptions and teas, and large public gatherings where hats are worn with ceremonious toilettes.

So great is the craze for maline hats that, to vary the idea, these hats will take on a different character from heretofore. They are now being made wholly transparent. We have had the transparent brim in tulle hats, but rarely the transparent crown. Now all of the latest hats are being made in this way. So thinly is the crown veiled with maline or lace that the hairdressing is perfectly revealed.

* *

Among the new maline models are entirely crownless hats—clear indication of the tendency for fall. Just to what extent this can endure for winter remains to be determined. But from the standpoint of fashion the transparent tulle or lace or crownless hat will be an important item for consideration in dressy millinery. It will be a fitting accompaniment for evening costumes that are fully decollete and sleeveless.

In accordance with this idea of transparency in crowns the maline is used in conjunction with velvet. In fact, some of the newest models have velvet brims with close crowns made of tulle, the shape of the head when the hat is posed giving the contour of the crown.

The brim may be of the most eccentric shape and as heavy looking as it would be if the crown were velvet. These eccentric novelties, when posed, look as if the wearer had on a brim of a hat only, since the crown is so sheer as to be scarcely noticeable.

Again, many of the new models are made with crowns of velvet and extreme shaped brims of wired lace or tulle. Many all lace hats in most eccentric shapes with perhaps a butterfly of lace or tulle or some unusual ornament are to be seen.

* *

The fashion in tulle began in the all black hat, but now a great many black and white combinations are seen. The attempt to launch high colors in millinery has not met with any great success. A reaction from the riotous colorings of the early summer has resulted in the black and white popularity. Dark rich shades of green, red, purple, and brown in millinery may be launched for winter. Blue is always more or less of a staple with high class milliners. Less dark blue, however, has been used this season than formerly owing to the use of the black hat as a foil to the high colors that have prevailed in costume trimmings. Hats made of assorted plaids with navy, black, or Russian green facings are among the season's novelties.

An extremely smart fall model was of black velours, brim bound with grosgrain ribbon and crown bound with a broad band of the same material bowed loosely at the right. The brim was cut in a uniquely becoming line which narrows over the right temple to rise at the left almost on a level with the crown.

Another model of black velours was true in every line to sailor trimness. About the slightly rounded crown were two bands of braided silk paralleling each other, finished at the right under flattened bows. A slight widening of the brim at the back recalled the boat shaped models of yesteryear.

The lines of a third black velours were sketched from an old portrait. It had a narrow stiff brim as the support for a big soft crown joined under a circling cord of green silk. A fluffy ostrich quill rested a third of its height against the crown and then tipped forward in a piquant question mark.

A stunning model in black and white had a full soft crown of white velvet. The rim was of black velvet, short in front, narrow on the sides, with a high flare in the back. The crown was encircled with a doubled velvet ribbon lapped in front under a flat velvet button. The ends of the velvet ribbon were drawn through slashes on the back of the brim and tied in a large bow in the back.

* *

A most unusual turban was seen at a fashionable gathering last week. In shape it resembled a Turkish fez, and was trimmed with a tall paradise, which rose from the center of the crown. A bride of pearls was drawn close under the chin. The supreme novelty of this creation was in the second rope of pearls, which was attached to the turban back of the ears and looped low on the breast.

One charming model had a crown covered with black velvet. The brim and upstanding trimming were of plaited white tulle. Another showed a crown made entirely of fine jet beads with flared and wired brim of fine black tulle. A most effective trimming on a crownless hat of white tulle was a butterfly exquisitely fashioned from fine black tulle. A model with considerable dash to it had a crown of black velvet with two wired rims covered with black chantilly. A large pink rose was placed directly in the center front of the upper brim.

A smart walking shape was made of white moire ribbon stitched together and laid in soft plaits to form crown and upper rim. A velvet facing gave the necessary softness. Standing upright in center front were high loop bows of black moire ribbon.

Among the novelties in early fall hats are the outing felts for country wear. These are shown in small round shapes, polo caps, and semi-sombreros in brilliant hued felts.

Chiffon rubber automobile bonnets will fill a long felt want. This tissue comes in many colors—black, seal brown, sage green, navy blue, tan, gray, plum, red, violet, and so on. Attractive automobile headdress made of this rubber tissue are offered.

* *

Among the most striking characteristics of the new shapes are the extremely high, flaring brims. Usually brims of this character are rather narrow in front and are graduated to an extreme height in the back.

A feature of many of these shapes is a narrow underbrim, which is frequently somewhat on the order of a bandeau. Some of the most striking have soft black velvet crowns with the high back brim made of Chantilly lace, shaped and wired. The head size in the majority of these extreme shapes is of good, comfortable proportions for wear over at least a moderate amount of hair.

It is expected that shapes will be worn extremely low on the head and, in many instances, at a decided tilt, so as to accentuate the high flaring brim.

While the conventional tam shapes are not regarded with any special degree of favor, beret or tam crown effects are among the dominant style notes. The high, draped tam ruche, which usually appears as a sort of upper brim in conjunction with a narrow under brim is well represented.

Soft crowns in infinite variety are favored. Frequently the brim is draped, but in such manner as to conform to definite, graceful lines.

Eccentric ideas, however, are not confined to varying expressions of the beretta or of the high flaring brim. As an instance of this there is the half and half sailor. Half of the crown and half of the brim are of black plush and the other halves are of white plush, running lengthwise the hat. The trimming consists of two odd looking roses, one black and one white, placed flatly on the crown and on the back brim.

This hat is one of the many decidedly small, quaint models which are more or less an outgrowth of the modern art.

Another of the more extreme shapes is on the order of a coolie hat. One of these shapes—large black velvet—is trimmed with a single uncurled black ostrich plume which is placed flatly on the hat, the base of the feather being at the edge of the brim and the full head at the highest point of the crown.

* *

This is only one of many novel methods of employing fancy ostrich effects. Another form of ostrich much in evidence is a two or three headed plume, which, when placed upright, falls in shower pompom effect.

White pigeon feather covering is being used on flat velvet sailors. This covering is so smooth as to look like velvet, unless closely examined.

An effective butterfly fancy seen was mounted on a high ostrich quill so that every movement of the wearer sets the butterfly in motion. Sometimes two, three, or four small butterflies are treated in this fashion.

Cassowary is a natural plumage which strongly resembles paradise. This is used—especially in high fancy aigrette effects—largely as a substitute for the high priced paradise.

Velvet bird fancies are most favorably regarded. A striking model was one of navy moire with navy velvet brim facing, with a velvet bird plumage in double bow effect placed at the back of the crown, where the long black flaring brim was caught together.

Tete de negre, or "niggerhead" brown, ranks among the strongest colors. Taupe, prunella, rich, deep navy, seal and golden brown are among the other prominent colors.

Children's millinery styles for fall have many features in common with those for grown-ups. For instance, peau de peche or silk duvetine, the high novelty material in hats for grown-ups, is used in many of the smartest models for children.

Another point of similarity is the big representation given to velvets and the exceptional prominence of soft, draped, crown effects.

Tyroleans are again in evidence for the little folk. Both pokes and mushrooms are popular. Shapes in new ombre velvets are catching hold and fur effects on the children's hats will be seen much this winter.

The favored trimmings include self-trimmings, ribbons, stitched brims, hand made flowers, and odd feather fancies.

OLD VETS WOULD GO TO MEXICO

By WARD S. GREENE.

OUT at the Soldiers' Home a company of colonels are intent on going to Mexico. Old men who marched in the trail of Lee and Gordon are burning to grip a musket once again and follow the stars and stripes over the ramparts of Mexico City, as they once battered their way across the Potomac into Maryland.

The wings of Mars flutter over Atlanta, the roll of vanished drums is beating high in the hearts of veterans of sixty-five, and they yearn to face the enemy on the banks of the Rio Grande even as they faced him fifty years ago at Chancellorsville and the Wilderness.

It is not rancor, long since dead, that fills them; it is not lust of blood nor the fierce joy of fighting, but the same flame of patriotism that was Nathan Hale's when he said: "My only regret is that I have only one life to give for my country."

That diplomats and envoys maneuver for peace they care not.

"If it is peace, let it come quickly," they say. "But let it be honorable peace. If it is war, we who once fought against our brothers now will be the first at their sides."

There are 106 old soldiers at the home; there are thirty enrolled in the proposed company to go to Mexico. And not one of the remaining seventy but would accompany his comrades if he could.

When the daily papers are brought to the home, the society columns, the sporting page, the tariff, the murder trials, even the comic sections, go begging. But the headline that starts, "Mexican Situation," is seized upon and its accompanying story devoured.

As the veterans sit on the cool, wide veranda the conversation is no longer of "what we did at Gettysburg," but of "what we will do at Vera Cruz and Zacatecas." Reminiscences are good, but day dreams are better.

If one approached the home from the car line he would not imagine that war talk would flourish in a prospect so peaceful.

ROSES IN THE CANNON'S MOUTH

The quiet roadway, the silent walks, the hammocks slung beneath the great green oak trees, are not the setting for battle rumors. Nor are the big brick house and the flower beds at all the place for one to talk of war. The two cannons that sentinel the front of the home are the only ominous features, and even they speak of peace, for in the black mouth of one there grows a frail and fragrant rose.

And the veterans do not look at all belligerent. There is a group at the end of the porch, lolling back in easy chairs; here one sits with his feet on the railing, contentedly moving his jaws; another hums an old hymn as he quietly strolls along the gravel walk.

Are these white-haired old gentlemen, this one with the calm blue eyes, that one with the stooped shoulders and the bowlegs, the bearded ancient over there who stamps around on crutches—are these the men who would sweat beneath a burning tropic sky, parched with thirst, grimy with blood and powder, shooting at little brown men while bullets whimper overhead and their fellows die around them?

MARBLES AND WAR.

Why, here are four of them playing marbles. Who ever heard of men who would go to war playing marbles?

And yet it is a good game. They call it "seven-up," a game that was born long before "playing for keeps" began to interest juvenile America. Watch them at it.

A ring is drawn in the gravel walk. Five enormous "onesies" are placed in it, one in the middle. The four old men take their places on a line a few feet away, and shoot. He who knocks out the center marble from "taw" is winner. If he can shoot out all the marbles, or if he can hit the "taw" of each of the other players, and so "kill" them, he is winner. But woe be unto him if he hits a marble and his own "taw" sticks in the ring! Then he is "fat," or, in other words, out of the game.

The veterans are remarkably adept at "seven-up," and as you watch you begin to wonder if, after all, they wouldn't make it mighty interesting for Huerta and his army. That man who has so keen an eye that he can stand twenty feet away and plunk a small marble, almost hidden in the dirt, would be very likely to get his man if he were plunking with a bullet instead of a "onesie."

And he who can see us "taw" go "fat" after an exceptionally good shot, and yet not even say "damn," would endure without complaint hardships which, while they might be more fatiguing, are not half so tough on one's patience and personal vanity.

Yes, these old men are "the boys" who would go to Mexico. They are wild to go, and the very man who has already fought through two wars is the most eager in the bunch.

A COMPANY OF COLONELS.

He it is that has enrolled the company.

"We are all colonels out here," he said.

"So we haven't elected any officers. Thirty of 'em have agreed to go, and the others want to, but rheumatism and neuralgia don't go very well with blankets and hard tack.

"We are mighty comfortable," he continued. "But if Uncle Sam needs us you bet your life we'll be there. We'd be dogs if we wasn't willing to do something for the state that's done so much for us. Why, a man that wouldn't appreciate this home wouldn't appreciate heaven. We have everything we want to eat and to wear and plenty of tobacco. What more could a man want?"

And with the words he bit off an immense "chaw" from a big plug as black as night.

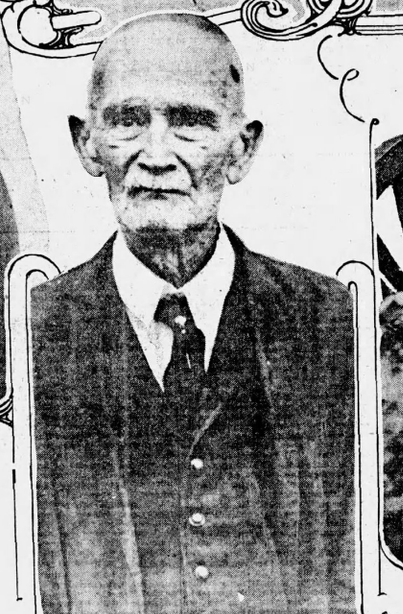
"Of course, now, about Mexico," he said, in an apologetic tone, "we really don't think there's goin' to be much of a fight. Why, Mexico would n't be a mouthful for the United States! If we should ever go to war, we'd just naturally lick the spots off 'em. And I don't reckon we ever will. They're scared to fight us, I believe; but if they do, I'm goin' to be there."

WHAT THE CANNONS ARE FOR.

He placed his hand on the old cannons and rubbed their cold, smooth sides affectionately. The cannons used to be in the basement at the capitol, but when they were given to the Soldiers' home they acquired dignity and titles. One is named Stonewall Jackson and the other Wade Hampton.

"I don't reckon we'll take these old spitfires with us," said the man who would go to Mexico. "We'll need 'em out here."

"Do with 'em?" said the old veteran. "We keep 'em to shoot newspaper men with."



Two of the veterans at the left have forgotten even Mexico in a game of marbles at the Soldiers' Home. But the group of four at the top are explaining just how they could form a company and invade the Mexic territory. Below them are grouped five veterans around a cannon, in the mouth of which blooms a rose. Alone, is shown Thomas McCall Yopp, the oldest inmate of the home.

BILLIE BURKE ON YOUTH AND APPENDICITIS

BY BILLIE BURKE.

HOTEL SAVOY, London.—A world-famed theatrical manager who has a number of promising young actresses on his staff, compiled a very clever argument for youth as the greatest asset of the actress or the woman. As to put me in the youthful class, what I may say on the subject may not be taken as being at all prejudiced.

Too long has beauty and worth in women meant youth. The standard is wrong. Youth is enthusiastic—and careless.

Youth is brave—and inexperienced.

Youth is a promise only.

When being a wife and mother was the only existence that woman was thought to be able to fill it was natural that she should be considered at her best from eighteen to thirty-five, and only then could beauty be seen in her.

Now, however, that woman has been found able to produce other wonderful things beside children, we can find beauty in her from birth to the grave if we look for it.

A great many women make the mistake of striving after youth. Instead of saying, "Grant me love, experience and life to its fullest so that I may have the beauty of health and all the nameless fascination which mature mentality brings," the average woman prays "Let me but cheat the world a few years and then I'll be content to sink out of sight." Like Oscar Wilde, they continually exclaim, "Youth, youth, there is nothing in the world but youth."

I have always gloried in my youth, but I have never looked forward with dread to the future—rather I am trying to build up for those years strength of character that is impossible to youth; to carry out the promise of that youth.

I want very much to impress this upon all the women who read my little articles that the first tiny wrinkle does not mean the "end of all" for any woman of brains and heart. If you are a wife for the one man who loves you, you will discover new beauties as the years go by, and if you must depend upon the opinion of the world as have actresses and singers you have but to look upon Jenny Lind, Rachel, Bernhardt, Ellen Terry—in fact, every woman who has been big enough to understand that mere years mean nothing to the worth and beauty of women—to know that you do not need youth to have given you the world's acclaim. It is how you live, what you think and the care that you give yourself physically, spiritually and mentally at any age that makes you either a woman whom every one admires or one who is being steadily pushed aside by some woman more ambitious.

Charming belle who writes upon the aspect of life.

HOTEL SAVOY, London, England—Here I am back from Carlsbad, where I went to "take" the cure and "took" appendicitis instead.

I arrive to find that the present style of woman's dress is still the subject of as much discussion as it is over home. Every man either begins conversation by talking of the militant suffragist or the female form expose. Most of those who talk breathlessly about the "immorality" of the present fashions start from the wrong premises. They go on the supposition that nature did not supply us with a physique simply for the same reason it supplies one to them; that we may exercise the functions which makes it possible for us to live in health and contentment. Most men persist in thinking woman only as a lure (more or less) to themselves. They have not yet found out that women are not always thinking of the effect they produce on man.

A woman's hands and feet, arms and legs are not "charms," but physical necessities which she must use in quite the same way as man. It is man's imagination which makes them "charms" and as such they are quite as visible to him under the voluminous petticoats worn in the Victorian age and the voluminous sleeves of a little later period as they are under the x-ray garments of today.

The present costumes are very graceful and pretty. To wear a corset so loose and well made that it gives you plenty of room to breathe—to wear very few underclothes and those of the kind which do not tax or impede your motions—to have your gowns cut with skirts that are narrow enough to be light and easily carried, even if they have to be split on the side for a few inches—to eschew those awful collars is certainly a boon to women who have not always been so comfortable.

* * *

I have known women who would not be happy under circumstances that would make heaven for others, and I have known other women who, subscribing to every conventional law of morality, were yet so immodest and impure minded that they saw sin in the most natural and sincere acts of others whose ideas were not confined to "the pint pot" standard.

Elsie In New York

BY O. HENRY

Illustrated with a pose from life, by Pauline Frederick, star of "Joseph and His Brethren" and acclaimed the most beautiful woman in America by Harrison Fisher, famous artist.

NO, bumptious reader, this story is not a continuation of the Elsie series. But if your Elsie had lived over here in our big city there might have been a chapter in her books not very different from this.

Especially for the vagrant feet of youth are the roads of Manhattan beset "with pitfall and with sin." But the civic guardians of the young have made themselves acqualnted with the snares of the wicked, and most of the dangerous paths are patrolled by their agents. And this will tell you how they guided my Elsie safely through all peril to the goal that she was seeking.

Elsie's father had been a cutter for Fox & Otter, cloaks and furs, on lower Broadway. He was an old man, with a limping gait, so a chauffeur ran him down one day when liveller game was scarce. They took the old man home, where he lay on his bed a year and then died, leaving $2.50 in cash and a letter from Mr. Otter offering to do anything he could to help his faithful old employe. The old cutter regarded this letter as a valuable legacy to his daughter, and he put it into her hands with pride as the shears of the dread Cleaner and Repairer snipped off his thread of life.

That was the landlord's cue; and forth he came and did his part in the great eviction scene. There was no snowstorm ready for Elsie to steal out into, drawing her little red woolen shawl about her shoulders, but she went out, regardless. And as for the red shawl—Elsie's fall tan coat was cheap, but it had the style and fit of the best at Fox & Otter's. And her lucky stars had given her good looks, and eyes as blue and innocent as the new shade of note paper, and she had $1 left of the $2.50. And the letter from Mr. Otter. Keep your eye on the letter from Mr. Otter.

And so we find Elsie starting out to seek her fortune. One trouble about the letter from Mr. Otter was that it did not bear the new address of the firm, which had moved a month before. But Elsie thought she could find it. She had heard that policemen, when politely addressed, or thumbscrewed by an investigation committee, will give up information and addresses. So she boarded a downtown car at One Hundred and Seventy-seventh street and rode south to Forty-second.

A kind-faced, sunburned young man went past Elsie into the Grand Central station. That was Hank Ross, of the Sunflower Ranch, in Idaho, on his way home from a visit to the east. Hank's heart was heavy, for the Sunflower Ranch was a lonesome place, lacking the presence of a woman. He had hoped to find one during his visit who would congenially share his prosperity and home, but the girls of Gotham had not pleased his fancy. But, as he passed in, he noted, with a jumping of his pulses, the sweet, ingenious face of Elsie and her pose of doubt and loneliness. With true and honest western impulse he said to himself that there was his mate. He could love her, he knew; and he would surround her with so much comfort, and cherish her so carefully that she would be happy.

Backed by his never-before-questioned honesty of purpose, he approached the girl and removed his hat. Elsie had but time to sum up his handsome, frank face with one shy look of modest admiration when a burly cop hurled himself upon the ranchman, seized him by the collar and backed him against the wall. Two blocks away a burglar was coming out of an apartment house with a bag of silverware on his shoulder, but that is neither here nor there.

"Carry on yez mashin' tricks right before me eyes, will yez?" shouted the cop. "I'll teach yez to speak to ladies on me beat that ye're not acquainted with. Come along."

Elsie turned away with a sigh as the ranchman was dragged away. She had liked the effect of his light blue eyes against his tanned complexion. She walked southward, thinking herself already in the district where her father used to work, and hoping to find some one who could direct her to the firm of Fox & Otter.

But did she want to find Mr. Otter? She had inherited much of the old cutter's independence. How much better it would be if she could find work and support herself without calling on him for aid!

Elsie saw a sign "Employment Agency" and went in. Many girls were sitting against the wall in chairs. Several well-dressed ladies were looking them over. One white-haired, kind-faced old lady in rustling black silk hurried up to Elsie.

"My dear," she said in a sweet, gentle voice, "are you looking for a position? I like your face and appearance so much. I want a young woman who will be half maid and half companion to me. You will have a good home and I will pay you $20 a month."

Before Elsie could stammer forth her gratified acceptance, a young woman with gold glasses on her bony nose and her hands in her jacket pockets seized her arm and drew her aside.

"I am Miss Ticklebaum," said she, "of the Association for the Prevention of Jobs Being Put Up on Working Girls Looking for Jobs. We prevented forty-seven girls from securing positions last week. I am here to protect you. Beware of any one who offers you a job. How do you know that this woman does not want to make you work as a breaker-boy in a coal mine or murder you to get your teeth? If you accept work of any kind without permission of our association you will be arrested by one of our agents."

"But what am I to do?" asked Elsie. "I have no home or money. I must do something. You won't be allowed to accept this kind lady's offer?"

"I do not know," said Miss Tickleaum. "That is the affair of our Committee on the Abolishment of Employment. It is my duty simply to see that you do not get work. You will give me your name and address and report to our secretary every Thursday. We have 600 girls on our waiting list who will in time be allowed to accept positions as vacancies occur on our roll of Qualified Employers, which now comprises twenty-seven names. There is prayer, music and lemonade in our chapel the third Sunday of every month."

Elsie hurried away after thanking Miss Tickleaum for her timely warning and advice. After all, it seemed that she must try to find Mr. Otter.

Near Fourteenth street Elsie saw a placard tacked on the side of a moving van that read: "Piffy girls, neat sewers, wanted immediately on theatrical costumes. Good pay."

She was about to enter, when a solemn man, dressed all in black, laid his hand on her arm.

"My dear girl," he said, "I entreat you not to enter that dressing-room of the devil."

"Elsie stood before the full-length mirror with pink cheeks and quick breath. Her eyes shone like faint stars. She was beautiful. Alas! She was beautiful."

Posed by Pauline Frederick and by William Shea and Zena Keefe of the Vitagraph company.

"Goodness me!" exclaimed Elsie, with some impatience. "The devil seems to have a cinch on all the business in New York. What's wrong about the place?"

"It is here," said the solemn man, "that the regalia of Satan—in other words, the costumes worn on the stage—are manufactured. The stage is the road to ruin and destruction. Would you imperil your soul by lending the work of your hands to its support? Do you know, my dear girl, what the theater leads to? Do you know where actors and actresses go after the curtain of the playhouse has fallen upon them for the last time?"

"Sure," said Elsie. "Into vaudeville. But do you think it would be wicked for me to make a little money to live on by sewing? I must get something to do pretty soon."

"The flesh-pots of Egypt," exclaimed the reverend gentleman, uplifting his hands. "I beseech you, my child, to turn away from this place of iniquity."

"But what will I do for a living?" asked Elsie. "I don't care to sew for this musical comedy, if it's as rank as you say it is; but I've got to have a job."

"The Lord will provide," said the solemn man. "There is a free Bible class every Sunday afternoon in the basement of the cigar store next to the church. Peace be with you. Farewell."

Elsie went on her way. She was soon in the down-town district where factories abound. On the large brick building was a gilt sign, "Posey & Trimmer, Artificial Flowers." Below it was hung a newly-stretched canvas bearing the words, "Five hundred girls wanted to learn trade. Good wages from the start. Apply one flight up."

Elsie started toward the door, near which were gathered in groups some twenty or thirty girls. One big girl with a black straw hat down over her eyes stepped in front of her.

"Say, you'se," said the girl, "are you'se goin' in there after a job?"

"Yes," said Elsie; "I must have work."

"Now, don't do it," said the girl. "I'm chairman of our Scab Committee. There's 400 of us girls locked out just because we demanded 50 cents a week raise, and ice water, and for the foreman to shave off his mustache. You're too nice a looking girl to be a scab. Wouldn't you please help us along by trying to find a job somewhere else, or would you'se rather have your face pushed in?"

"I'll try somewhere else," said Elsie.

She walked aimlessly eastward on Broadway, and there her heart leaped to see the sign, "Fox & Otter," stretching entirely across the front of a tall building.

She hurried into the store and sent in to Mr. Otter by a clerk her name and the letter he had written her father. She was shown directly into his private office.

Mr. Otter arose from his desk as Elsie entered and took both hands with a hearty smile of welcome. He was a slightly corpulent man, nearly middle age, well dressed, radiating.

"Well, well, and so this is Beatty's little daughter! Your father was one of our most efficient and valued employes. He left nothing? Well, well, I hope we have not forgotten his faithful services. I am sure there is a vacancy now among our models. Oh, it is easy work—nothing easier."

Mr. Otter struck a bell. A "Miss Hawkins" came in.

"Miss Hawkins," said Mr. Otter, "bring for Miss Beatty to try on one of those Russian sable coats the church. Peace be with you. Farewell."

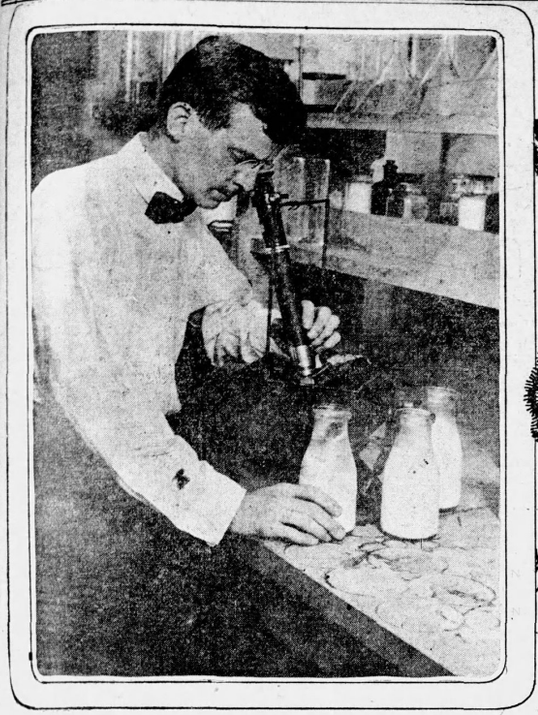
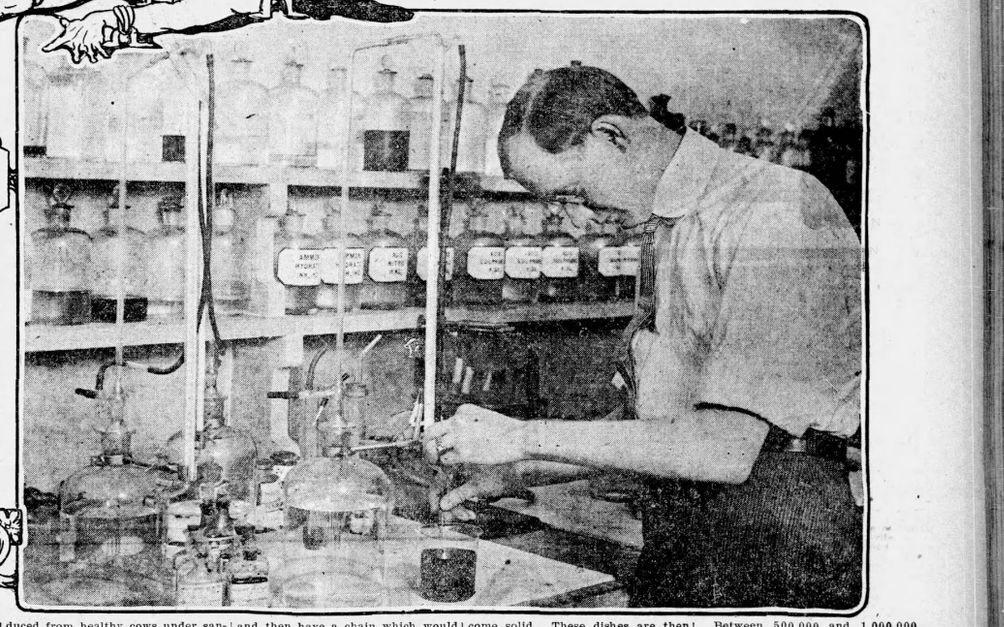
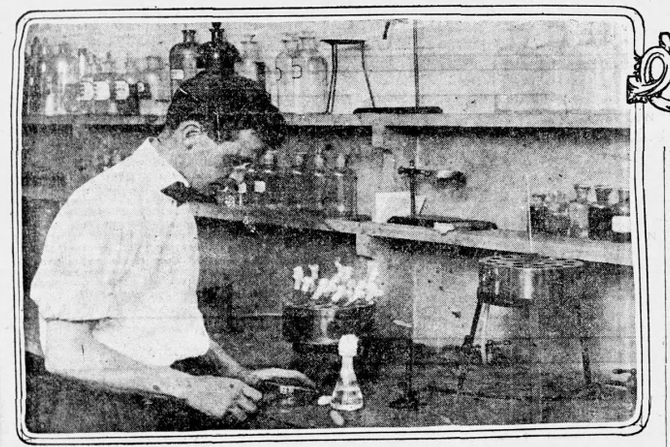
HOW THE STATE PROTECTS OUR HEALTH

TESTS OF FOOD BEING MADE IN THE STATE'S NEW CHEMICAL LABORATORY







THE state department of agriculture, under the direction of Commissioner J. D. Price, is giving its best efforts toward the protection of your health by enforcing the state's pure food and drug law.

For the purpose of detecting adulterated foods a new laboratory, under the supervision of R. E. Stallings, state chemist, has just been equipped and installed at the state capitol.

The contractors who built this laboratory said of it:

"Of all the laboratories we have installed, from the Leland-Stanford in the west to the Queen's University, at Kingston, Ontario, Canada, in the north, to the Yale university in the east and the department of agriculture in Washington, D. C., we can say without hesitancy that the pure food laboratory of Georgia can be compared with any in America and excelled by none."

One of these laboratories is utilized entirely for the detection of adulterated foods and to see that all labels on food products tell the truth. A. G. Dickles, assistant state chemist, is shown in an accompanying photograph engaged in the detection of adulteration of ground coffee, ground spices, including pepper, cloves, cinnamon, etc. Coffees, for example, are frequently adulterated with dirt and often have added to them chicory and barley and wheat. No objection is made to these latter materials if the label states their presence. However, dirt and worthless materials are prohibited.

Other food products are frequently adulterated—for example, sweet oil, often sold, must be pure olive oil and must not be substituted by cotton seed oil or other oils. Cocoas are tested for cocoa hulls and foreign starch; cat sups for preservatives and to see if they are made from over-ripe or decayed materials; syrup to see if glucose is added and not stated on the label; maple syrup to see if it is made entirely of maple syrup, or if of cane syrup and flavored with maple. Teas are tested to see if they are true to name and if they contain preservatives and artificial matter; vinegars to see if they are of proper strength and true to name; butter is analyzed to see if it is renovated (made of old butter), or if it is oleomargarine; beverages of all kinds to see if saccharine, a harmful product five hundred times sweeter than sugar, has been added in place of sugar. These are also tested for harmful coal tar colors.

HARMFUL PRESERVATIVES.

Preservatives are sometimes used which are not only harmful in themselves, but frequently they are used on food products as meats when changes in the most dangerous character are going on. Of course, all such products that are injurious are immediately condemned—In fact all food products are subjected to the most rigid investigation in this laboratory. When substances are found that are not harmful to health, they are permitted to be sold if the label tells the truth. Every housekeeper in buying goods should pay particular attention to the label. The labels on all food products are required to show what the contents are, and all the small print on the label should be read because it is sometimes more important than the larger print. At present, if the weight is given on the package, it must be the true weight of the contents. However, after September 1, 1914, all packages of food must carry the true weight because a recent law passed by the legislature requires them to be so labeled, which, in itself, is a great aid to any one buying foods.

TESTS OF MILK.

Another important laboratory of this department is used for bacteriological work in enforcement of the pure food law. Here will be tested all food products to see if they are composed wholly or in part of decayed organic or vegetable matter or are contaminated with such materials as are injurious to health. The state chemist has first begun in this laboratory a campaign for improving the milk supply of Georgia. Mr. K. N. Atkins, the assistant, is engaged now in making an examination of milk that has been taken up by inspectors from the dairies, milk depots and restaurants where milk is sold to see if it is suitable for food. Every dairy, milk depot and restaurant where milk is sold throughout the state will be subject to rigid inspection, and the conditions, when found insanitary, will be improved and pure milk insured to the consumers in this state. At the same time an educational campaign will be conducted, and the co-operation of all dairymen and consumers is desired.

Some idea of the importance of the dairy industry and the necessity of giving the public who buy the milk in such large quantities a pure, wholesome article may be gained by statistics. The United States census for 1900 estimated that 740,000,000 gallons of milk and cream were consumed in this country in 1899. This amount must of necessity have increased with the increase in population. This was an average of about twenty-three gallons per capita At this rate, Atlanta, based on a population of 200,000, consumes about 4,600000 gallons annually. It is said that every child consumes during its first year between 400 and 500 quarts of milk.

REASONS FOR GOOD MILK.

There are many reasons for securing a good milk supply and these reasons are so important that the public should become acquainted with some of the more essential in order to more effectually aid in the improvement by creating a demand for better milk. Next to breadstuffs, milk is more used than any other food. It forms part of the food for practically everybody every day in the year. It is consumed uncooked, and, if impure, is the more dangerous for that reason. Moreover, children and invalids are almost entirely dependent on milk as a food. Such a question must be considered from two points of view in order to be answered correctly.

First, from the chemical standpoint, milk should contain at least 12 per cent solids, 3.5 per cent of which is fat, about 3.5 per cent casein, 5 per cent sugar, and a small amount of ash. Any wide variation from this rule shows the milk is not up to standard. If one buys a quart of watered milk, one does not get a quart of pure milk. If milk is skimmed, one of the most important food ingredients has been removed. So skimming and watering milk effects our pocketbooks, and the addition of water may, in some cases, be extremely dangerous to health, for the water may be from a polluted well or stream.

A word should be said about the addition of adulterants. By adulteration is meant the addition of any foreign substance not normally found in milk. Such a substance is usually added for the purpose of keeping the milk. An example of an adulterant commonly used in milk is formaldehyde. The addition of such a poison to milk is highly reprehensible. Its use is not necessary, for, with proper care, milk will keep sufficiently long without the addition of a preservative, and a preservative may keep milk in an apparently good condition while changes of a most dangerous character are going on. Milk passes through many hands before reaching the consumer. Imagine the consequence of the farmer, dairyman, transporter and consumer, each adding a small quantity of a preservative to milk. The result would be a large amount of a disinfectant in the milk, which would most certainly be deleterious to health.

WHAT IS PURE MILK?

In summary, from the chemist's standpoint, pure milk must consist of the milk as it comes from the cow, with nothing added or taken away from it. From the standpoint of the bacteriologist, pure milk is more difficult to produce. It must be pure as regards its chemical composition and, furthermore, must not contain a large amount of bacteria. He demands, also, that milk be produced from healthy cows under sanitary conditions. The bacteriologist, then, has to examine milk to see how many bacteria it contains, and must have a knowledge of the conditions of production. Bacteria must, then, be considered as an adulterant. The adulteration with bacteria differs from adulteration with a chemical in one important way, that is, bacteria grows rapidly in milk, and the addition of even a few bacteria means that after the bacteria have multiplied there will be a large amount of adulteration present. The bacterial adulteration, then, is cumulative, and is the more dangerous for this reason.

To the person unfamiliar with the bacteriological findings the extreme minuteness of a bacterium is almost unthinkable. One could put 1,500,000 of them in a line end to end and then have a chain which would be only one-sixteenth of an inch in length. No wonder that in a single drop of milk there may be millions of these tiny organisms. How does the bacteriologist count them when they are so small?

If one visits the state laboratory, one finds that the examination of milk is a very careful piece of work. The bacteriologist removes a definite amount of milk with a clean, sterile glass tube or pipette, and places the milk thus extracted from the sample in some sterile water. This dilutes the milk so that he is able to get accurately one-four thousandth of a teaspoonful. This small amount of milk he transfers to a sterile, flat, covered dish filled with a semi-solid gelatine-like mass of culture medium in which bacteria may grow. This medium, when cold, will become solid. These dishes are then incubated for forty-eight hours. The bacteria growing in this medium cannot swim around as they can in milk, and in growing will form a clump composed of millions of bacteria. Such a clump of bacteria is called a colony and is visible to the naked eye. The bacteriologist then, after incubation, counts the colonies and multiplies the number found by the dilution of the sample and the number of bacteria in the original sample obtained.

It is impossible to set down hard and fast rules, all conditions considered, but in general milk may be classified according to its bacterial count as follows:

Below 10,000, very good.
Between 10,000 and 50,000, good.
Between 50,000 and 100,000, fair.
Between 100,000 and 500,000, unsatisfactory.
Between 500,000 and 1,000,000 bad.
Over 1,000,000, very bad.

Experience has shown that when two samples of milk have nearly the same bacterial content, as, for example, 10,000 and 12,000, both may be equally good and no account need be taken of the 2,000 bacteria difference. If however, two samples contain, respectively, 100,000 and 10,000, there is a great difference in the sample. The one containing only 10,000 bacteria is much the better milk, other factors being the same. The work, then, of the bacteriologist is to determine the number of bacteria in a substance, such as milk, and to decide, from a knowledge of conditions, whether such a substance is a safe article for food. Also, he should give the producer advice concerning the method of handling the milk so that he will be able to produce a wholesome article.

Airships Interest War Department

BY ROYAL DANIEL, JR.

WITH victory almost within his grasp, engine trouble prevented C. Murvin Wood, the young American aviator, driving a Moisant monoplane from finishing the spectacular race, recently run against the fastest train the Pennsylvania railroad could furnish, over a course from New York to Washington.

The object of the odd contest was to show the war department that monoplanes were better for army purposes than the biplane, the type now in use. Army officers were on the aviation field at Hempstead, L. I., to see Wood off and the Pennsylvania "special" carried other officials. President Wilson, Mr. Daniels, secretary of the navy, and Mr. Garrison, secretary of war, were to meet Wood at Fort Myer and were keenly disappointed when he was forced to land at Gaithersburg, Md., 23 miles from his goal.

Wood made a new non-stop record between two points and at times attained the speed of 60 miles an hour. An idea of the terrific speed of the train can be had from the fact that it ran from West Philadelphia to Baltimore, a distance of 95 miles, in 84 minutes. This means the train was making over 90 miles an hour in spurts.

It remains to be seen what the war department thinks of the accomplishment of the tiny air craft. Wood's machine, the Bluebird, is of the knockdown type and one of the tests to be made at Fort Myer before the army officers was to take the machine apart as it would come packed in an express car, then to put it together again in flying order. Wood said the time required to do this would be twelve minutes. Certainly a machine so constructed would be invaluable to aviators in time of war. It could be packed and unpacked with but little loss of time.

As the machine stood before starting it weighed but 1,208 pounds. In the tanks were 38 gallons of gasoline and eight quarts of lubricator. The spread of the machine is 30 feet, and the length about the same.

Promptly at the starting time, Arthur Wetzel, for 23 years an engineer on the Pennsylvania railroad opened the throttle of the mighty locomotive and the race began. The Bluebird overtook the train as it cleared the station, but the monoplane was soon lost in the fog which was very heavy.

At Philadelphia the train was delayed half an hour. Then began the wildest kind of riding. From Philadelphia to Wilmington the special skimmed along smoothly at better than a mile a minute, but from there on Engineer Wetzel, with a clear track ahead, tore on at increasing speed until near the Maryland line a mile was caught by the stop watches of those on board in 36 seconds, a rate of 100 miles an hour.

So terrific was the speed that when the locomotive scooped up the water outside of Wilmington it sprayed the entire train as if it were shooting through a rain storm.

Aeroplanes as war implements are in every way satisfactory. The countries of Europe have made great strides in equipping their armies with modern aviation corps. The feats of Didier Masson in the revolution in Mexico have caused very wide comment. On one occasion he circled above the federal trenches at Guaymas and dropped bombs, killing fifty soldiers and injuring many others. On another occasion he succeeded in hurling explosives within four feet of the Mexican gunboat Tampico.

Surely the war department meant business by so closely watching the flight made by Wood and it is highly possible that the tiny monoplane will yet work its way into the army.

After being forced to land at Gaithersburg, Wood told the story of his flight.

"I was lost almost from the very start," he said. "On rising from Hempstead I climbed steadily until I found myself 5,000 feet up above the dense blanket of fog. I swung sharply to the right and then my motor stopped. While then adrift in the fog I saw the Atlantic ocean below me.

"It was an anxious moment for me. I worked quickly at the engine. She caught her stroke again and I was saved from a watery grave, but I was still lost in the fog. I turned sharply back to the left and saw Coney Island. That gave me my direction.

"Jersey was covered with fog, but I kept right on without seeing the ground until I struck the tracks at New Brunswick.

"Near Trenton my engine went dead again, but after dropping to 2,000 feet I managed to start it. At Trenton I started to follow the Delaware river, which I could see plainly. It was lucky that I made a circle to the east of Philadelphia, for my engine again stopped when opposite there, but again I managed to start it.

"From Havre to Grace I coasted from 7,350 feet all the way to Baltimore, because I did not have the power to stay at that height. The smoke over Baltimore made me lose my sense of direction, by blotting out the tracks. I then struck a southwesterly course by the compass, knowing that I must strike the Potomac. I did strike it, but not above the capitol, as I had expected.

"I did not see the special train once during our flight."

The American distance record for continuous flight, which Wood's performance shatters, was hung up last April by Lieut. Thomas De Witt Milling, of the United States army, who flew in a Burgess tractor biplane with Lieut. William Sherman as a passenger from Texas City, Texas, to San Antonio, a distance of 224 miles, in four hours and twenty-two minutes.

The Desire to Disagree

("Intimations," by John D. Barry. Paul Elder & Co., Publishers.)

There are those who seem to be born with the instinct to disagree. I have in mind at this moment one such person. I have heard him express emphatically a certain opinion and then, perhaps a day or two later, I have heard him denounce the same opinion expressed in his presence by someone else.

Sometimes, of course, this kind of thing is done by those who love argument for the sake of intellectual exercise. But in this instance it was due simply and solely to the love of disagreeing.

If we did not spend so much time in trying to disagree, if we did not torment ourselves with the ill feeling that accompanies the will to disagree, we should learn very much more than we learn now, and we should be surprised at the strange improvement in the people and in the world about us.

We should find that, through persistent self assertion, instead of gaining, we lost.

We should also discover that through resisting the desire to disagree, through giving people as good a chance to express themselves as we long to give ourselves, we should exert a far greater influence than we do now, and we should be heard oftener and with more profit.

AMONG the many beautiful gardens in Atlanta is that of Mrs. Charles J. Haden, at her home on Peachtree road. The group of three children shown here were photographed in one of the greenest corners of this beautiful resting place.

IT was largely through the efforts of Mrs. George Brown that the legislature at its recent session passed a bill giving Georgia mothers equal rights with fathers in the custody of minor children. The need of the bill was readily acknowledged by every legislature to whose serious attention it was brought. But the number of bills which were pending made it impossible for each legislator to be acquainted with each good bill. In the accumulation of bills, the measure in behalf of Georgia mothers might have been overlooked had it not been for the zeal of Mrs. Brown. She believed that no other measure proposed for passage was of greater importance than this one, and she set out to convert members of the legislature to her belief.

THE Hurt building, on Edgewood avenue, at Exchange place, which is shown here, will be sufficiently near completion by September 1 for a part of the offices to be occupied. Most of the remaining offices will be occupied in October and November. The Hurt building, as it now stands, cost $800,000 and includes 400 offices. It is the plan of Joel Hurt, the builder, eventually to extend this building until it covers the entire triangle, of which it now occupies only a part. It will then have a capacity of 1,000 offices. Mr. Hurt also has a general plan for a community of buildings, which will require an expenditure of about $4,000,000. Among these buildings will be a hotel, a loft building, and one or two other structures.

Atlanta is coming to be more and more of a city of sky-scrapers. Almost daily the sky-line changes. You might think that the builders of the city have an Alladin's lamp which they need merely to touch and up starts another building. At this time, the Hurt building is all but complete, and the construction of the Healey building is going forward rapidly. The frame work has been finished, and the detail of finishing off this steel skeleton advances daily.

Among the other important buildings which are nearing completion, are the Ponce de Leon apartments, at Ponce de Leon avenue and Peachtree street, just across from the Georgian Terrace. The apartments might be described as a companion building to the Terrace. The two are alike in color, design and in symmetry. No two buildings in the city are handsomer.

The Winecoff hotel on Peachtree street across from the Aragon, is nearing completion; three stories of the new Y. M. C. A. building have been finished. This building is to be ten stories in height, and will be equipped with assembly rooms, with dormitories, and with a gymnasium. It probably will be the most complete building of the sort in the south.

"OLD BILL" Miner seems to have given death the slip. Recently, the warden at the state prison farm informed the prison commission that Bill was very low and that he could't possibly live for more than two or three days longer. He even lapsed into a coma, and for days knew nothing of what went on around him. But Bill has been used all his life to fighting off attacks of one sort or another, and bit by bit he repelled the sickness which the warden had thought would be fatal. Now, he seems to be regaining his strength daily.

CLERKS are here shown engrossing bills passed at the recent session of the legislature. Little of importance was done during the early days of the legislative session, but toward the close of the session bills of state-wide importance came up for passage. It was really not until Monday before the end of the session that the legislature went earnestly to work. Then bills galloped from house to senate and from senate to house, and from the two legislative bodies to the governor's office for his signature. Afterward the clerks set about the work of engrossing, and you can see for yourself what a busy looking lot they are. Of all that the legislature did, the most important acton was the enactment of the tax reform measure known as the Lipscomb-Anderson-Miller bill. The determination with which this bill was opposed can be gathered from the fact that while it was No. 6, one of the first to be introduced, it was one of the last to come to a final vote. As it was passed, this bill combines some of the features of the substitute introduced by Representative Barry Wright, and the important provisions of the original bill. Next in importance probably among the bills passed was the measure by Senators Loggino and Richardson, known as the medical practice bill. The purpose of this bill is to do away with quackery in Georgia. It was passed with a comfortable majority by both houses, although it was amended slightly. Probably next in interest, was the passage of the mothers' rights bill, to which Mrs. George Brown brought such valuable aid.
